PROPOSE BOARD TO RULE LIQUOR IN EMERGENCY

Illinois Commission Favors N. Y. Plan.

Envisioning chaos in liquor conditions unless a control law is adopted by the state legislature before Dec. 6—the day liquor is expected to return legally—members of the Illinois liquor commission, at a meeting here yesterday, informally considered approval of the New York state control plan.

So urgent is the necessity for completion of their task, the commission members agreed to meet again Tuesday night, this time at Springfield. Spokesmen pointed out that there is not a moment's time to be lost. Repeal of national prohibition, they said, is a practical certainty, and by Dec. 6, they asserted, whisky will be legalized.

Some Sort of Plan Needed.

Illinois, they declared, must have some practical sort of plan within a few days or else whisky and kindred liquors will be dispensed without any sort of regulation after midnight of Dec. 5. Anybody would be able to sell booze anywhere without fear.

With time for the drafting of a suitable plan growing shorter and shorter, some of the commission members leaned toward the New York control plan. Details of this system were described at yesterday's meeting by Attorney Ralph M. Shaw, who recently conferred with the New York members. Mr. Shaw emphasized that this plan is recommended as an interim method of control to be tried out during the emergency period.

Quick Action Needed.

"We must act quickly," Mr. Shaw told the Illinois commission. "If a control law is to become effective within the next five weeks it must be passed by a two-thirds majority of the legislature. I don't believe it is humanly possible to devise a rigid and unchangeable plan that would receive such a vote on such short notice. I therefore urge the New York control plan. Its flexibility recommends it for consideration. Also, it takes liquor control out of politics. I would recommend the interim plan extend no longer than during the term of the present governor."

The New York plan advocated by Mr. Shaw has as one of its principal features the appointment of a nonpartisan state commission of five members who would be paid adequate salaries to assure independent and effective direction.

Powers Similar to I. C. C.

This commission would have power to determine not only the manner in which liquor would be dispensed but also to impose varying regulations to suit each community. The powers of this body, Attorney Shaw explained, would be somewhat like those of the interstate commerce commission.

The five members would be appointed by the governor, three of them to be members of the party in power and the two other members belonging to the other major party.

In addition there would be subordinate boards for each county, each board to consist of two members. They would be selected in a manner prescribed by the legislature. As provided in New York, one member of a local board is appointed by the state commission from a list furnished by civic, religious, fraternal, and patriotic bodies. The other member is named by the county medical society.

Would License Manufacturers.

The state commission, Mr. Shaw pointed out, would grant licenses for the manufacture, distribution, or retail selling of liquor in any given community and for its proper restriction, after taking into consideration the recommendations of the local board governing that community or area. The state board would not necessarily be bound by the local board's recommendations.

The state commission would have power to revoke licenses for cause.

Under such a system, as explained by Mr. Shaw, the regulations are so flexible and all encompassing that they can be applied to Illinois as well as to New York, as each of these states has large centers of population whose requirements differ from rural communities.

"The plan provides all the rights of home rule or local option that can be reasonably desired without making possible the political evils of permitting aldermen and district leaders to approve licenses," continued Attorney Shaw.

He cited an example of the balanced flexibility of the control plan. The city council of a city like Evanston

UNIFORM BIDS FOR RAILS STIR ROOSEVELT IRE

May Invoke Law Against "Trusts."

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—The steel industry is heading for a battle royal with the President of the United States. That appeared today, and thus may be written another chapter in the Roosevelt war upon what he calls "big business."

Four of the largest steel companies were accused by the Roosevelt rail coordinator, Joseph B. Eastman, of collusion in submitting identical prices for steel rails. The President, through Mr. Eastman, demanded that the prices be lowered to a point he fixed, and if they are not, the President countered with the extraordinary proposal that the steel companies open up their private books to his government accountants, and then permit him to make a price which he then deems proper.

In the offing lies a threat of federal criminal prosecution of the steel masters for violation of the anti-trust laws, on a charge that they combined unlawfully to prevent open competition and to fix prices.

Already Clashes with Ford.

President Roosevelt already has locked horns with Henry Ford; he has disclosed plans for his war on the stock and grain markets of the nation, and has begun an offensive against speculation. The steel companies loomed today as his next adversaries, and the nature of this battle, as it shaped today, is held to intensify the broad spread of the President's purpose to lay the halter of federal government control over more and more of the country's business.

The steel leaders are engaged in another tilt with the White House over the President's demands that they negotiate with union representatives over wage scales in the soft coal mines owned by the steel companies. This controversy went to the President's hands after the owners had refused to meet the demands of NRA Administrator Johnson, and after strikes and violence had blazed repeatedly in the Pennsylvania mine districts.

Federal Loans for Roads.

Ostensibly the matter of the steel companies' bids on steel rails is a private transaction between them and the railroad companies, but President Roosevelt, hopeful of pepping up the lagging production and dwindling employment in the steel mills, announced a month ago that federal loans would be made to railroads needing rails if the steel companies lowered their prices.

In this situation, holding the purse strings of the RFC, the President is censoring the prices asked by the steel concerns, and refusing to lend money until the prices have his approval.

When the President announced his plan, he summoned in the steel masters and obtained their pledges to engage in truly competitive bidding for the promised orders.

At that time Myron Taylor, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, told newspapermen in the lobby of the White House office building that "we're going after the business," and Eugene F. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, shook his finger playfully at Mr. Taylor and retorted: "Yes, and we're going to compete with you for that business."

But Prices Are the Same.

When, however, the prices were filed in response to the President's and Coördinator Eastman's invitations, Mr. Taylor's company, Mr. Grace's company, the Inland Steel company, and the Colorado Fuel and Iron company all presented identical bids of $37.75 per gross ton, f. o. b. mill.

President Roosevelt at yesterday's press conference would not discuss the bids, but he volunteered a suggestion to the effect that alert journalists would profit by obtaining promptly a statement to be issued by Coördinator Eastman on the morrow. The statement, the President said, would be "very interesting," and thereby he showed his personal and directing interest in the controversy.

Mr. Eastman made public the letters he had received from the four steel

Paul Painleve, Ex-Premier of France, Dead

PARIS, Oct. 29 [Sunday.]—(AP)—Paul Painleve, minister of aviation in the Herriot cabinet, died early today of heart disease.

The former premier had suffered from a heart ailment for several years which a short time ago forced him to abandon politics.

With him when he died were Senator Lemoignic, Deputy Paul Appell and his physician, Dr. Laubry.

SON OF PARIS BAKER.

Paul Painleve, twice premier of France, rose to the political heights from an obscure beginning. Born on Dec. 5, 1863, he was the son of a baker in the Latin quarter in Paris.

Early he showed signs of mental brilliance. At 8 years of age he was considered a prodigy in mathematics. At 40 he was a world famous scientist, winner of numerous scientific prizes.

He tasted politics first in 1898, when he took sides in the famous Dreyfus trial, winning for himself the acclaim of the Socialist and Radical parties. They virtually forced him into the political field, and in 1910 he became deputy from the Sorbonne district.

Six years later Painleve received his first executive post—that of minister of public instruction in the Briand cabinet. He was transferred to the important war department in 1917 when Ribot succeeded Briand, and shortly afterward, when Ribot fell, Painleve became premier.

Falls from Power.

The war was at its height then, and when Painleve adopted the policy of "waiting for the Americans to come" he fell from power.

Not until 1924 did Painleve regain any amount of his earlier prestige, although he was well liked by the people. In 1924 he was the coalition candidate for president of the French republic. He was defeated by Gaston Doumergue.

A year later, when Herriot was overthrown, Painleve became premier for the second time. His administration collapsed not long afterward. Since then he had held several responsible positions, his most recent being that of minister of aviation under Herriot.

INCE IN ARMOR FRIENDS' TARGET, WIFE CHARGES

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Hollywood parties, at which she said her husband and others became hilariously intoxicated, were described by Ada Williams Ince, 19, screen actress. She has sued for separate maintenance. The papers were filed here today against William T. Ince, 23, son of the late Thomas Ince.

At a fancy dress ball Ince drank so heavily that he became unconscious, she alleged. He was wearing an armored costume and guests gathered about him breaking chinaware on his greaves [shin guards, she called them], causing her great humiliation.

Mrs. Ince placed her husband's private income at $1,500 a month. She asked monthly allimony of $750 and $5,000 as a fee for her attorney.

They were married when she was 16, she said, and he taught her to smoke and drink. Her specific charges against Ince were intemperance and cruelty.

Mrs. Ralph H. Poole and Volney Foster of Lake Forest, well known in society, were seriously injured last evening when an automobile in which they were riding was wrecked against a tree beside Buena road in Lake Forest.

They were taken to the Alice Home hospital, where they were treated by Dr. Theodore Proxmire. He reported that both had possible skull fractures, that Mrs. Poole had more than fifty cuts on her face and head, and that all of Mr. Foster's front teeth had been knocked out. Also, Dr. Proxmire said, they were suffering from loss of blood and shock.

Found Unconscious by Passerby.

A passerby who found Mr. Foster and Mrs. Poole unconscious called the police of Lake Forest and Highland Park. The scene of the accident is a rutted gravel road just off the concrete of the new Route 57. It was assumed that Mrs. Poole was driving the car, which was hers, when the accident occurred.

At the Poole home it was said Mrs. Poole had attended the Chapman-Fenno wedding in the Fourth Presbyterian church in Chicago and was on her way home. Mr. Foster, it was said, probably also had been at the wedding.

Mrs. Poole [Marie Richards] was married to Mr. Poole in 1907. The family home is on Green Bay road north of Lake Forest. Mr. Foster, an investment broker, is 56 years old and resides at 335 North Green Bay road, Lake Forest.

Two Killed as Train Hits Auto.

A man and a young woman were killed late last night when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a west bound Illinois Central train at Riverside drive in Berwyn. They are Albert L. Terrell, 24 years old, an employé of the Public Service company of Northern Illinois, and Miss Emily Ottroag, 22 years old, 3133 Park avenue, Brookfield. The driver of the car, Theron A. Swigert, 27 years old, 842 South Scoville avenue, Oak Park, was injured.

At 74, Chicago Woman Flies on Zeppelin

Airship Over Ocean

The Graf Zeppelin was soaring over the Atlantic ocean last night on its flight to Friedrichshafen, Germany, by way of Seville, Spain. Latest reports by wireless said the ship was approximately 900 miles east of Cape May, N. J., at midnight.

It was something of a shock to the relatives of Mrs. Peter Holland, 74 years old, 1548 East 61st street, when they learned that she was on the Graf Zeppelin and floating through the upper ether Europe bound.

It was a shock, first, because her daughters, her son-in-law and her grandchildren didn't think it fitting for a grandmother to go flitting that way over the continents and the oceans, and second because she had deceived them to get aboard the big airship. Their first intimation that she was aboard reached them yesterday while the Graf was over the briny Atlantic.

The daughters are Mrs. Lillie Dobson, a widow, and Mrs. J. W. Young, wife of the owner of an art gallery at 428 North Michigan avenue. Mrs. Dobson explained yesterday how Mrs. Holland had carried out the deception.

Eager to Make Long Flight.

"Mother," she said, "had for a long time wished to go to Europe, but we dissuaded her. Also, she has always wished to take a long air trip. She was up in a plane for five minutes once and she remarked when she landed that it would have been fine if she could have gone around the world.

"Recently she hadn't seemed to be very well, often having her meals sent up to her room. She thought it was too difficult for her to go up and down stairs with a cane and we thought, of course, that it was too difficult for her to go to Europe and that she realized that too.

"But in the last two weeks she made several trips downtown. We thought she was shopping or attending to her own business affairs. As a matter of fact, she was arranging for her passage on the Graf Zeppelin. We have learned that today.

No Mention of Graf Trip.

"She never mentioned the Graf Zeppelin to us, certainly not as a prospective passenger. Early this week she began to talk about visiting some friends in Barbertown, O. Members of the family accompanied her to the train and put her on board. That's how she got to the Akron airport and went aboard. Of course we were shocked to hear she was flying to Europe, but we're a little proud of her, too."

Mrs. Dobson said that her investigations disclosed that Mrs. Holland intended to return to the United States on the liner Deutschland, and would land in New York Nov. 9. She had no acquaintances in Germany and just went for the ride. Mrs. Holland is independently wealthy, having inherited a considerable estate from her husband.

Other Chicagoans among the 24 passengers on the Graf are Attorney Charles E. Bartley, 5045 Drexel boulevard, and Richard Millard Genius Jr., wealthy grandson of the late Charles H. Morse, who was one of the founders of Fairbanks, Morse & Co. Mr. Bartley is a veteran air traveler who was formerly a representative of the United States department of commerce.

3 BANK SLAYERS DEFEAT STATE'S PLEA FOR DEATH

Long Terms for Two; 14 Years for One.

Three young holdup men who shot and killed Harry J. Mueller, cashier of the National bank of Niles Center, were found guilty of murder by a jury in the court of Judge William V. Brothers last night. But the trio rejoiced because the jurymen spared them all from a trip to the electric chair.

The punishment of two of the defendants, Carl Grundhoefer and John Scheck, was fixed at life imprisonment. That of Frank Keglovitz, the third defendant, was fixed at 14 years in prison. Requests for a new trial were overruled. The defendants' counsel then announced that no appeals would be taken and Judge Brothers sentenced the three men.

Guard Against Demonstration.

Unusual precautions to prevent a demonstration in the courtroom, where many relatives of the prisoners sat, were taken when the jury, after more than three hours of deliberation, announced that its verdict was ready.

Judge Brothers gave a solemn warning that any noise would be construed as contempt of court. The prisoners, handcuffed and heavily guarded, were led in and stationed near the door leading to the cells outside the court. When the verdict was read there was an audible sigh of relief from Grundhoefer, who had fired the fatal shot. Grundhoefer and Keglovitz smiled, but Scheck, already under sentence of death for another murder, stood stolid.

Decide Against Appeal.

Having thanked the jurymen for their service and dismissed them, the judge ordered the convicted men back to their cells while motions were disposed of. Attorney James M. Burke, representing Keglovitz, and Public Defender Benjamin Bachrach, for Grundhoefer, decided immediately not to carry the case to an appeal. Atotrney Emmet Byrne, representing Scheck, conferred briefly with his client's relatives and then announced that he, too, concurred.

Throughout the trial Attorneys Bachrach and Byrne had been willing to plead Grundhoefer and Scheck guilty if assured that the death penalty demanded by the state would not be inflicted. The punishment fixed for the defendants made the case, in effect, a victory against the state.

Killer Grundhoefer Smiles.

When the convicted men were returned for sentence, Grundhoefer was smiling broadly. Addressing him, Judge Brothers said:

"If I were you, I would laugh out loud."

The prisoners having been asked if they had anything to say, and having replied negatively, the judge continued:

"I'm not surprised that you escaped a death penalty, although you deserve it. You killed a man without giving him a chance. In your hearts and consciences you must admit that you can never live long enough to expiate your offense. Had the jury given you a death sentence I would have pronounced it as easily as I pronounce these sentences.

Tells Them to Give Thanks.

"The jury believed that a life sentence means life. As lawyers we know that perhaps it may mean only 20 years. I have no censure for the jury which gave the penalty it thought was deserved. But when you men go back to your cells you should get down on your knees and thank God for what 12 American citizens did for you tonight."

Grundhoefer and Keglovitz will be sent to Joliet penitentiary this week. Scheck, who is to die in the electric chair unless the Illinois Supreme court orders a new trial in his other murder case, will be held in the county jail until his appeal is passed on. He was convicted of the murder of Policeman John Sevick, whom he shot down in the courtroom of Judge Charles Molthrop as he was endeavoring to escape from a detention cell behind the courtroom.

A Band of Desperadoes.

The trio has been regarded as one of the most desperate bands of criminals in Chicago police annals. Grundhoefer is 20 years old, Scheck 21 and Keglovitz 24. A fourth member of the gang, Roman Piskorz, who was involved in the Niles Center killing, has never been captured.

The killing of Cashier Mueller took place last April 7. When the bandits arrived at the Niles Center bank the cashier was out to lunch. Returning, he discovered that Scheck was stuffing money into a suitcase while Grundhoefer stood sentinel at the door.

Disobeying an order to raise his hands, Mueller laughed and grappled with Grundhoefer. In the struggle the shotgun of the bandit was discharged and inflicted a fatal wound. The robbers fled in an automobile driven by Keglovitz, who had waited outside the bank.

In the flight from the bank Scheck dropped most of the loot, but got away with about $5,000. This was later divided, although Scheck kept a lion's share for himself.

Scheck Tries to Escape.

Two weeks later they were arrested. Taken to the detective bureau, Scheck seized a policeman's pistol and tried to shoot his way to freedom, but was overpowered after he had wounded Detective Harry Tucker.

On July 24 Scheck again tried to escape, this attempt resulting in the death of Policeman Sevick. The policeman was shot down when he tried to halt the killer's dash through Judge Molthrop's courtroom.

It has never been clearly established how Scheck got the pistol he used in this break for liberty. Presumably some of his relatives or friends smuggled it to him in the detention cell where he was awaiting a preliminary hearing on the Mueller murder charge. Grundhoefer accompanied Scheck in his flight through the courtroom but claimed later that he did so only because he had been threatened by his companion.

Leniency Plan an Issue.

In the trial for the murder of Sevick, Grundhoefer aided the state and it was argued by the defense yesterday that he had been promised leniency for this service. Assistant State's Attorney Mal Coghlan retorted that Grundhoefer had forfeited his claim to leniency when he declined to plead guilty to the Mueller murder and promised to aid in the defense of Keglovitz.

Attorney Bachrach pleaded that Grundhoefer should be rewarded with a life sentence for testifying against Scheck in the Sevick murder trial. Attorney Byrne argued that Scheck should not be ordered to the electric chair in this case because he did not fire the shot that killed Mueller. Keglovitz's defense was that, although he drove the bandit car, he did not even know a robbery was planned until they were fleeing with the money.

Prosecutor Demands Death.

In his closing argument to the jury Prosecutor Coghlan referred to the killing as "one of the most cowardly that ever occurred in Cook county."

"The only question," he continued, "is for you to choose a just penalty under the law. I am asking you not to cheat the state of Illinois or the widow of Mueller. I see nothing in the way of mitigation for these defendants. The prosecution asks a death penalty."

ROBBERS INVADE OFFICES, TIE UP 2 WOMEN, 5 MEN

Brandishing a shotgun and revolvers, four bandits yesterday invaded the building at 509 South Franklin street and held up seven persons. They obtained a total of $48 and a $50 wrist watch and fled after tying their victims with ropes and locking them in a rear room.

The robbers forced an elevator operator, Harvey Garrity, 7828 Escanaba avenue, to take them to the sixth floor and accompany them into the offices of the D. S. Lefler Clothing company. There they lined up the owner, D. S. Lefler, 7551 Kingston avenue, his wife, and a clerk. They took $8 and a watch from Lefler and $4 from the clerk.

The four victims were then herded into the elevator and taken to the eighth floor and into the offices of the United Cigar company. There Mrs. Ed Zimmer, 1505 South Marshfield avenue, was robbed of $3; Herman Fiddler, 21 years old, 4944 North Troy street, $21, and Louis Gall, 1319 Early street, $12. Unable to open a safe, the bandits bound the men and women and fled.

Police started a search for Steven Kucoch, 20 years old, 3615 South Wells street, after six of the victims, viewing rogues' gallery photographs, had identified him as the robber who carried the shotgun.

CRACK 2 SAFES, TAKING BONDS AND $2,700 CASH

A gang of safe crackers wielding chisels and sledge hammers, invaded two offices in the Engineers' building, 205 Wacker drive on Friday evening, ripped open two safes and took $2,700 and an undetermined amount in negotiable bonds. The bonds and the $2,500 were taken from the office of Abe Marovitz, criminal lawyer, and the remainder of the loot from the New Jersey Zinc Products company office.

The burglaries were discovered yesterday morning when a clerk arrived at the lawyer's office. Papers from the safe and desk were strewn over the floor. The safe had been opened by chiseling away the lock. Attorney Marovitz, who had been counsel for Gus Winkler, slain north side gang chief, and for Winkler's former partner, Ted Newberry, who was murdered 18 months ago, at first expressed the belief that the burglars had been after papers he had kept in the safe.

Judge Refuses Retrial of Mrs. Wolon's $25,000 Suit

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Judge James Gay Gordon Jr., last week set aside a jury verdict awarding $25,000 breach of promise damages to Mrs. Estelle Wolon of Chicago. Today he dismissed the motion for a new trial filed by the defendant, Charles Newbold Welsh, wealthy Philadelphian. The judge said if he had not reversed the verdict, he would have granted a new trial "for the verdict was clearly against the weight of the credible evidence."

QUIZ COWEN'S CHAUFFEUR FOR MURDER CLEWS

The attention of a coroner's jury investigating the slaying of Louis Cowen, Cicero publisher and friend of gangsters, was directed yesterday to Joseph Corngold, chauffeur and reputed bodyguard for Cowen. Corngold was just entering his employer's car in Roosevelt road near Austin boulevard, Cicero, on Friday evening when shotgun fire from a passing automobile killed Cowen, who sat in the driver's seat of his car.

The coroner's jury, composed of four business men and two Northwestern university instructors, subjected Corngold to an uncomfortable half hour on the witness stand at the inquest held in the county morgue. They wanted to know how Corngold's appointment to meet Cowen had been made and if he had told any one else that Cowen would be there at that particular time.

Denies He Was Bodyguard.

Corngold, a stolid, slow speaking man, said he had told no person of his appointment with Cowen. He asserted also that he was not Cowen's bodyguard but merely his chauffeur and that he had never carried a gun. When the shotgun was fired at Cowen, Corngold escaped by rolling out of the car. He exhibited scratches on his legs which he said were caused by shotgun pellets grazing the skin.

The chauffeur said he lived with Cowen at the Graemere hotel and that the publisher paid him $25 a week and paid for his hotel bill and meals. He was hired about two years ago, he said.

It was recalled that Cowen in 1931 settled an income tax claim by the government for $53,245. He was not criminally prosecuted. He appeared many times before the federal grand jury which indicted Al Capone for income tax evasion and, according to reports in the United States courthouse yesterday, he furnished information which helped him evade criminal prosecution, but which may have involved others.

Then He Hires Corngold.

Cowen's employment of Corngold followed closely upon the Capone conviction and led to rumors that he was frightened, although his friends yesterday denied that he was in fear.

"At 11 o'clock Friday morning Cowen told me to meet him at 5:45 p. m. at Roosevelt and Austin," Corngold told the coroner's jury. "He was going downtown to lunch and then to Sportsman's park. I stayed at the hotel all day and I didn't talk to anybody or tell them where I was going to meet Cowen.

"I took a street car to the corner and stood there reading a paper until I heard him holler to me. I went over to the car and just as I got in I heard the shots. I opened the door and rolled out into the street. I didn't see the car from which the shots were fired."

Takes Cowen to Hospital.

A minute later, Corngold testified, he ran back to the car and saw Cowen's body slumped beneath the steering wheel. He moved the body over and drove the car to the Frances Willard hospital, he said, but this effort was in vain. Cowen had been killed almost instantly.

Although he was Cowen's almost constant companion day and night, Corngold said he knew nothing of his employer's business affairs. Asked if Cowen was interested in gambling or other illicit pursuits, he looked blank. The same ignorance of Cowen's business was professed by his brother, Maurice Cowen, 3202 Cermak road. Mrs. Mildred Cowen, the widow, did not appear at the inquest.

The jurors were puzzled by the testimony of John Sears, 25 years old, who told of emerging from a candy store at the scene of the shooting and being warned back by a man crouching behind a signboard. The shooting did not occur until after the warning, Sears declared. He was asked to look at Corngold and said he did not think Corngold was the man who had warned him, although he did not see the man's face.

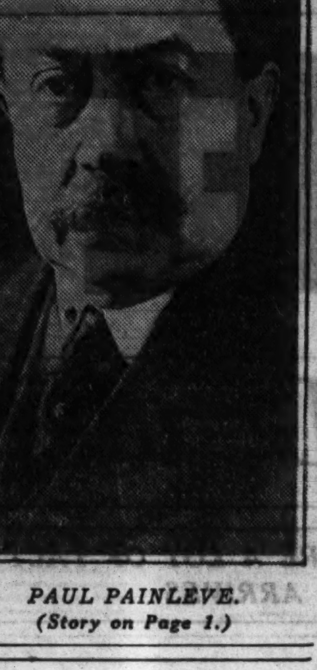
The inference drawn by the jurors was that Cowen's slayers somehow knew that he was to meet Corngold at that point. The inquest was continued until Nov. 3 to allow more time for police investigation.

Police Hunt "Porky" Dillon.

The Cicero police, who admitted that they had few clews to work on, began a search for George [Porky] Dillon, who has for some years been known as an alcohol peddler in the west suburbs. Dillon, whose real name is George Demetros, is said to live somewhere in Oak Park.

All the witnesses to the shooting were vague as to detail and the investigators were unable to learn even the number of men in the killers' car. Cowen's career had held so many opportunities for making enemies that the police would not even hazard a motive for the killing, although they inclined to the belief that gambling or alcohol connections lay behind it.

TAKEN BY DEATH



PAUL PAINLEVE.

ARREST FUGITIVE FROM CHICAGO IN HOME AT ST. PAUL

Sam Taran, ex-convict and former pugilist, who fled from Chicago last June while facing extradition to Nebraska for alleged participation in the $175,000 robbery of a Fairbury, Neb., bank, was seized at his home in St. Paul yesterday, dispatches from that city said.

Last June 6, Taran was arrested at the Edgewater Beach hotel after his marriage to a Chicago girl, Miss Diane Lomberg. He had given two $500 liberty bonds to her brother as a loan. The bonds were presented to a west side bank and there found to be part of the bank robbery loot. Taran was seized and then was released on $12,500 bond pending the outcome of extradition proceedings. He forfeited this bond when he fled.

RESTAURANT OWNER ROBBED.

Abe Herkowitz, 3118 Douglas boulevard proprietor of the Horks grill, 2317 West Madison street, was robbed of $340 yesterday by two bandits who forced his car to the curb with their automobile at Campbell avenue and Madison street.

SUMMON SCORE FOR REOPENING OF WINKLER QUIZ

Conrad, Weber's Partner, to Be Questioned.

Investigators from the office of Coroner Walsh were busy yesterday serving subpœnas on a score of witnesses wanted for questioning when the inquest into the murder of Gus Winkler, north side gang chieftain, slain Oct. 9, is resumed tomorrow morning. Night club owners, gangsters, business men, politicians, and brewery employés all are known to be among those who will be called.

A few of the witnesses sought for the hearing tomorrow were named by the coroner after subpœnas had been served upon them. The others were kept secret.

Probably the first witness to take the stand tomorrow will be Charles Conrad, one of the three acknowledged partners in the Charles Weber Brewing company, 1414 Roscoe street, in front of which Winkler was riddled with shotgun slugs by killers who ambushed him from the cover of a closed truck parked across the street from the office door. The other two partners in the beer distributing agency, County Commissioner Charles H. Weber and Henry Runkel, took the stand a week ago and denied that Winkler had any interest in their business or that he had ever visited their office before.

Frank Nitti to Be Witness.

Another witness will be Frank Nitti, the business head of the Capone gang, who was critically wounded by former Detective Sergeant Harry Lang, subsequently discharged from the police department and recently convicted of assault with a deadly weapon. Lang has sought a new trial and a hearing on his motion is pending. Nitti, according to information furnished by the coroner's staff, will be questioned about his relations with Winkler.

Some of the other witnesses to be called at the hearing will be the elevator operators employed in the 3300 Lake Shore drive apartment building where Winkler made his home for eight months prior to his death. Another will be a night club habitué known as "Hap" Murphy, 3069 Lincoln avenue. Several waiters and managers from half a dozen north side cabarets.

Seek to Learn Where He Went.

All of these witnesses will be asked to tell of Winkler's habits, his friends whom he often entertained in night life spots, and his movements during the week preceding his death.

Because a federal investigation of middle western mail robberies recently links Winkler with Edgar Lebensburger, former owner of the 225 club who supposedly committed suicide six hours before his indictment as a conspirator in the disposal of mail robbery loot was made public, secret service agents are to attend the inquest. They say that the Touhy gang also was linked with the robberies.

"Silent Jim" Ryan, one of the Touhy mobsters who was acquitted of a murder charge by a jury in the Criminal court on Friday, was taken as a federal prisoner yesterday. He is to be taken to the federal building tomorrow and charged with complicity in the $27,000 Minneapolis mail robbery of last January.

COUNTY PROSECUTOR SHOT AND WOMAN IS SLAIN IN HER HOME

Ironton, O., Oct. 28.—(AP)—County Prosecutor John Porter, 33, was wounded, possibly fatally, late today and Mrs. Nan Patterson Moreland, 30, pretty widow, died of gunshot wounds apparently inflicted during a quarrel in Mrs. Moreland's apartment.

The two were found after police battered in the locked door of Mrs. Moreland's bedroom. Mrs. Moreland died shortly afterward. Only slight hope is held for Porter's life.

Police Chief Dennis Callahan expressed the belief Mrs. Moreland shot Porter and then turned the gun on herself.

Officers said she was lying on one side of the bed and Porter on the other, a pistol at the foot of the bed. Both were partly unclothed.

As Porter was taken to the hospital in an ambulance, police said he murmured, "Nan, I don't see why you did it."

Porter, who has a wife and two children, early next month was to have prosecuted the man charged with killing Mrs. Moreland's husband, Herman, last July 25.

FIREMEN RESCUE PAIR TRAPPED BY CELLULOID BLAZE

Men Cling to Ledge 100 Ft. Above Street.

One hundred feet above the street, two men clung by their finger tips to the ledge of a sixth floor window in the Hearst Square building, Madison street and Wacker drive, last evening. Flames were roaring out the window over their heads.

A crowd watched the thrilling drama as firemen backed a ladder truck into position and ran up a thin steel ladder to the clinging men. Two of the fire fighters climbed the ladder. Half carrying, half leading the two men who had been trapped by the fire they brought them safely to the ground.

Victims Treated at Hospital.

The men were Selig Muskatt, 36 years old, 1305 South Avers avenue and Edward Zauderer, 26 years old, 1419 South Spaulding avenue. Both of them suffered severe burns about the hands and the head. Their burns were bandaged at the Iroquois Memorial hospital, which adjoins the Hearst building on the north.

Both men are employés of the Bertlee Display company, with offices in rooms 613 and 614 on the Madison street side of the building. The concern is a distributing agency for window display manufacturers. One of the clerks in the office said that the company had received a new shipment of signs yesterday afternoon. These had been opened in room 614 which has one door leading to room 613 and another door leading to a corridor. The floor of the room was covered with signs, which are largely constructed of celluloid, and packing of excelsior and straw.

Blames Spark from Cigaret.

Firemen believed that a spark from a cigaret had caused the fire. Zauderer, the less seriously injured, said that he did not know the origin of the blaze but said that there was a sudden sheet of flame which cut him and Muskatt off from both exits. They retreated to the windows while the flames grew. Finally they threw open the window and clung to the ledge.

The fire in the office then was quickly extinguished by firemen who worked under the direction of Chief Jerry Falney of the first battalion. He estimated the damage at $2,200.

GRAND JURY QUIZ OF THEATER FIRE SOUGHT BY STATE

Blast Follows Dispute with Maloy's Union.

After an investigation into the origin of a fire and explosion in the State-Congress theater, following the hiring of a motion picture operator not a member of the union controlled by Thomas E. Maloy, business agent, Deputy State Fire Marshal George Schivner announced yesterday that he would demand grand jury action. The fire occurred last Thursday.

Deputy Marshal Schivner said he was convinced the fire was of incendiary origin. He asserted that he would present the evidence he has uncovered to State's Attorney Courtney. Part of this evidence, he said, will be two five gallon cans, each containing a small amount of benzine, which were found in the theater after the fire.

Lessee Gives Testimony.

At a hearing yesterday in the state marshal's office at 188 West Randolph street testimony was given by C. W. Peel, who recently leased the theater. A burlesque show, which formerly was given there, closed two months ago. Peel said he had leased the place with the intention of operating it as a moving picture theater.

Peel said he had visited Maloy's office on Oct. 10 and asked him to supply union operators. Maloy, he said, told him that he would have to pay up the wages owed operators hired by the former lessee of the theater, Morris Froelich, before union men could be hired.

"I got several operators who were union men but members of a group formed in opposition to Maloy. After two days I had to close the theater because my application for a license had not been approved," said Peel.

Pour Benzine on Seats.

"On Thursday some one broke into the theater, which was closed. They went to the balcony and dumped benzine on two rows of seats and touched it off. There was an explosion, and in their hurry to get away they left the cans. There is a sprinkler system in the theater so the fire didn't spread. The explosion blew out some windows and damaged the front of the theater."

Deputy Marshal Schivner said he had other evidence which he would not now disclose but which he plans to present to the state's attorney. Capt. George O'Connor of the South State street police said he had ordered the theater closed because Peel had opened before he obtained a license.

EX-CASHIER OF BANK SENTENCED.

Danville, Ill., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Austin I. Westerman, 52, former cashier of the First National bank of Robinson, Ill., today was sentenced by Federal Judge E. E. Lindley, to serve a year and a day in the federal reformatory at Chillicothe, O., for embezzlement to which he had pleaded guilty.

STRONG POINTS TO GUARD ROADS AGAINST BANDITS

Indiana Also Fights from the Air.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Two thousand armed men, National Guardsmen, state police, and volunteers from American Legion posts, were mobilized today to police all roads in this state's fight on organized crime.

They will search for the desperadoes who have been terrorizing Indiana and surrounding states for more than a month.

Arrangements were made to throw up sandbag blockades at the sides of the highways as protection against being rushed by criminals in autos, carrying machine guns.

Air Fighters on Alert.

Five airplanes of the Indiana National Guard, equipped with machine guns, are kept waiting at Mars Hill airport here.

Completing plans for policing the entire state in search of the bandits, who escaped from Michigan City Sept. 26, and others, Al Feeney, state director of public safety, and Elmer F. Straub, adjutant general, announced that 70 officers and 160 men of the National Guard, hundreds of volunteers from the American Legion, and entire forces of the state police department are available.

In addition, motorized squads of machine gunners will cruise along the state's highways.

Clear Up Bank Robbery.

One of the recent bank robberies, that of the Western State bank of South Bend, was believed cleared when Henry Neimic, cashier, identified three men held at Peoria, Ill., as among the four who entered the bank and robbed it of $2,500.

Neimic pointed out Louis Badgett, Galesburg, Ill.; Howard McDonald, St. Louis, and Don Potter, Champaign, Ill., as the robbers. Badgett is declared to have confessed and implicated John Butanos, South Bend sand and gravel dealer. Butanos also admitted sharing in the loot, only part of which was found.

A special city council session was held at Columbus, Ind., and as a means of protection against outlaws, Mayor H. K. Volland asked for a special appropriation to increase the number of policemen.

GORE PAROLES PRISONER; FOUND BOMB AT HOME

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Gov. Robert H. Gore paroled today the prisoner who found a bomb at the La Fortaleza home of the governor. The prisoner, Luis Guzman, was a trusty who was serving a six year sentence for manslaughter and had previously been denied a parole.

Meanwhile, the University Alumni association announced its rejection of Gore's proposal to submit qualifications of Rafael Alonso Torres as a university trustee to a selected committee.

LITVINOV HOPES FOR A QUICK DEAL WITH ROOSEVELT

Stops Over in Berlin on Way to U. S.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 28.—Maxim Litvinov, Russian foreign commissar, expects to spend a week in Washington with President Roosevelt, but "a real half hour's talk with the President will be sufficient to settle the matter," Litvinov declared upon his arrival in Berlin this morning on his way to Washington. He expects that the Washington meeting will prove a decisive and final conference and not a mere preliminary talk.

Elated at the prospect of resumption of official relations between the United States and Russia, Litvinov's eyes twinkled more merrily and craftily than ever as he dodged questions by newspapermen at the former czarist embassy in Berlin.

Sees Effect on Japan.

Official relations with the United States would not alter Russia's general policy and it will continue to carry out its second five year plan the same as it did before, Litvinov said. He frankly admitted that he feels resumption of relations with the United States will alter Russia's relations with Japan.

Asked whether developments in Germany had in any way affected the secret Rapallo treaty between Russia and Germany, Litvinov dodged. He said this was too big a subject to discuss on short notice.

[By the Rapallo treaty Russia and Germany pledged to come to the assistance of each other if one were attacked.]

Litvinov had booked train reservations through to Paris, but he stopped off at Berlin. Diplomatic circles assert he did this upon a special invitation of Germany's foreign minister, Baron Konstantin von Neurath. Litvinov saw Von Neurath this noon. The soviet embassy said the commissar is staying over until tomorrow night, although German news services said he left tonight.

Keeps Ship Secret.

Litvinov is keeping the name of the ship on which he is sailing a secret. He is trying to avoid being accompanied by newspapermen.

"There's much apparent mystery about my movements," he said. "I'll tell you why I don't say what ship I am taking. That would naturally lead to yourselves or your colleagues taking passage on the same boat.

"Their mission naturally would be to get me to talk, but as I can't say anything I want to spare my journalistic friends the disappointment of incurring expense for nothing.

"Of course, if some one happens to be on the same boat, I cannot help it, but I don't want to be the party to lead him into certain disappointment."

Litvinov knows that Secretary of State Hull is delaying his departure for South America to attend the Pan-American conference until his [Litvinov's] arrival, therefore it is believed Litvinov will take the S. S. Bremen, which would bring him to New York a day earlier than any other ship he could now take.

See Row with Hitler Smoothed.

Earlier in the week the Russian delegation wanted to avoid taking the German ship owing to the friction between Russia and Germany, but during today's conference with Von Neurath the Russians believe some of the Russo-German differences were smoothed out. The newspaper conflict between Russia and Germany, in the course of which the Russians expelled German newspaper correspondents as a reprisal for the arrest of Russian newspapermen in Germany, will be ended soon and journalistic relations between both countries probably will be resumed, Litvinov said today.

Litvinov branded talk of a $500,000,000 loan from the United States to Russia an exaggeration.

A message from Moscow reports that Litvinov will invite the United States to send a military deputation to Russia to establish friendly relations with the Red army. The invitation is to be extended in the name of the Russian war minister, Klim Voroshilov.

Chicago Girl Loses Cash to Four Confidence Men

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Bessie V. Wilkie of 1020 Lawrence avenue, Chicago, who said she was a city hall employé, told police tonight she had been victimized of $1,900 by four confidence men. Warrants for the arrest of a man she named as Henry Black and three others named Moses, Harrington, and Peters, all of Chicago, were issued, but the men were not located.

Chicagoans on Graf Zeppelin, Bound for Europe

Weather bureau officials at Washington, where Dr. Hugo Eckener circled his ship in a farewell salute this afternoon, predicted favorable weather for the giant craft and the twenty-four passengers. The Graf's route lies far south of the only storm on the Atlantic tonight.

Takes Air at Akron.

At Akron, America's Zeppelin center, the Graf was walked out of the huge dock and took the air at 8:55 a. m. [eastern standard time].

After flying slowly about Washington for about twenty minutes today the ship headed east-northeast and left the Jersey coast near Cape May for Spain.

Weather bureau officials reported fresh north winds and overcast skies off the Jersey coast with a gale about 250 miles southeast of Nantucket, Mass., but the gale was far north of the Graf's course. Rain was considered likely on the first half of the Atlantic trail to Germany unless Dr. Eckener piloted the ship to the Azores and thence angled to Seville.

INJURED OBSERVERS GAIN.

Col. William Francis Forbes-Sempill, British observer on the Graf Zeppelin's flight to America, who was severely injured in the wreck of an experimental type of automobile on the outer drive Friday morning while en route to the airport to make connection with the Zeppelin for the return trip, was reported in a slightly better condition at Mercy hospital yesterday afternoon. Col. Forbes-Sempill's skull was slightly fractured in two places. He was semiconscious yesterday and hospital attaches said his condition was fair.

The condition of Charles Dollfus, a representative of the French air ministry on the trip of the Zeppelin, who was injured in the crash also, was the same. He was conscious and resting comfortably, his nurses said. His injuries included cuts and bruises and possibly internal injuries. Neither patient received any visitors.

The driver of the car, Francis T. Turner, an aviation mechanic of Birmingham, Ala., died Friday afternoon of injuries.

THREE INJURED AS COAL TRUCK HITS STREET CAR

Three persons were severely injured and 25 others were shaken up early last evening when a heavily loaded truck belonging to the Diamond Coal company, 1240 Belmont avenue, crashed into the front of a north bound Southport avenue car at Lincoln avenue.

The injured were Mrs. Sarah Annitzowitz, 42 years old, 535 South Millard avenue; Mrs. Marie Lehnart, 36 years old, 1828 Cuyler avenue, and Leo Stutzkin, 21 years old, 651 Gordon terrace. At the Illinois Masonic hospital it was said the two women had suffered internal injuries.

Roy Reading, 1645 Clybourn avenue, driver of the truck, was slightly hurt. After being treated by a physician he was taken to the Sheffield avenue police station and charged with driving while intoxicated.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 28.—(AP)—City officials tonight expressed the belief that an entire issue of Omaha street improvement bonds totaling $400,000 had been counterfeited.

The full extent of the forgery will not become known until Nov. 1 when interest coupons are due to be presented for payment, city officials said.

Controller C. E. Stenicka said the city will refuse to pay on the forged coupons.

The forgery, city officials said, came to light when a representative of a South Dakota financial house, who had sold bonds to a Chicago bond concern, told the Chicago firm the bonds were forgeries.

The South Dakota man returned the money he had been paid and asked that the bonds be called in.

At least $22,000 worth of the bogus bonds appeared on the Chicago market, and another bloc will appear in New York, officials said.

BURGLARS LOOT APARTMENT.

FISHER TRANSIT PLAN SUBMITTED TO BONDHOLDERS

Committees to Report Views This Week.

Attorney Walter L. Fisher has submitted to the security holders of the street car and elevated lines his tentative reorganization plan involving the unification of the two transportation systems, it was learned yesterday.

The first mortgage bond holders' committees of the two systems are to report their attitudes on the proposed setup to Mr. Fisher this week. Albert W. Harris and Melvin A. Traylor, bankers, are the chairmen of the Surface Lines bond committees and D. F. Kelly, State street merchant, is chairman of the elevated security holders' group.

Attorney Fisher a month ago was appointed by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson to effect a reorganization plan when the bond committees were unable to agree upon one. The plan involves the distribution of new securities for old. Judge Wilkerson has jurisdiction over the companies because they are in receivership in his court. A pending transit unification ordinance, already approved by the city, must be accepted by the transportation lines by Jan. 31, 1934, if it is to be effective.

Last week the financial interests of the two transit systems submitted to Mr. Fisher and to each other their ideas of what the reorganization plan should be. They were found to be as far apart as ever, and Attorney Fisher consequently has submitted his plan in an effort to reconcile the two groups.

BRITISH MOBILIZE TROOPS AS ARAB RIOTING SPREADS

Palestine Is Swept by New Disorders.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 28.—(AP)—The Holy land was in a ferment today as a result of Arab agitation against an increase in Jewish immigration, and unrest spread rapidly not only through Palestine, but to Transjordania and even to Syria.

In two new clashes in Haifa between police and Arabs one person was killed and 35 injured after violent rioting.

A mob was reported to have stormed a prison in Nablus, Palestine, 30 miles north of Jerusalem, tonight and released prisoners. The tense situation was made worse by the declaration of a general strike by Arabs.

Police Fire on Rioters.

Troops were held in readiness and royal air force planes left Cairo, Egypt, for Palestine, where they can be employed if necessary.

Sections of Haifa today resembled a war zone. A mob of infuriated men, screaming invective against the British administration, attacked both the railway station and the police station. In both instances police fired on the rioters and wounded a number.

No actual disturbances occurred in Jerusalem, but authorities made arrests as a precaution against outbreaks.

Sullen, embittered crowds watched funeral processions in Jaffa for those killed in demonstrations yesterday. Officials were alert, although there were no disturbances, fearing that the unrest would flare up there.

British Troops Mobilize.

In strategic points throughout Palestine British troops and police were mobilized, ready for further outbreaks such as occurred in four main cities yesterday in which scores were killed and wounded.

The Arabs' call to action traveled swiftly and wild nomadic Bedouins moved into the cities.

Agitators said their demonstrations were not directed against Jews themselves, but against British authorities for allowing increases in the Jewish immigration.

In Haifa crowds of incensed Arabs tried to smash automobiles outside a railway station when a volley of shots was fired. Youths, meanwhile, ran through the city throwing stones. To avoid general fighting police proclaimed a curfew law, but the Arabs attempted to rush the station to hinder the transportation of prisoners arrested in Jaffa yesterday. Serious damage was prevented by the early arrival of the police, although the rioters had blocked roads and burned trucks.

Armored Cars Patrol City.

Armored cars of Seaforth Highlanders patrolled Nablus, where one was killed in clashes yesterday. Troops aided police also in Nazareth and Safed. Demonstrations were feared in Damascus, Syria, and trouble also threatened at Acre, across the bay from Haifa.

In Jerusalem the government rounded up members of the Arab executive, among them Aouni Bey and Abdul Hadi, the latter a leader of the independents and a prominent lawyer. The Arab executive has promoted the demonstrations.

DR. MAYO AIDS 5 WOMEN HURT BY AUTO CRASH

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Five women bruised and cut in an automobile accident had the distinction today of receiving first aid treatment from a world famous surgeon.

On his way for a meeting of the University of Minnesota regents, Dr. William Mayo of Rochester saw a car carrying the women skid off the road near Westcott, Minn., go into a ditch and turn over.

Dr. Mayo helped them from the wrecked car, gave emergency treatment and then brought them to a hospital here in his car.

AUTO SMASHED BY 'L'; DRIVER IS NEAR DEATH

Walter Keeler, 30 years old, 4242 West Van Buren street, a repairman for a department store, was probably fatally hurt when his car was struck by a train of the Garfield Park branch of the Rapid Transit lines near the Lotus avenue crossing. The track is one the ground at that point. Keeler's car was crossing the tracks at an alley crossing when the train, carrying several score of passengers, struck and dragged it half a block. He was thrown out by the impact just before his car burst into flames. An elevated car also caught fire, but it was quickly extinguished.

Five automobile fatalities in Cook county yesterday increased the 1933 toll to 878. The deaths of a young couple in a collision of an automobile and a train in Berwyn are related on page 1. Other victims:

Arthur Shorten, 5 years old, 6222 Evans avenue. Died of injuries suffered Tuesday, when he was struck by a motor truck at 62d street and Cottage Grove avenue.

Roger Studin, 6 years old, 5334 South Bishop street. Killed when he was struck near his home by a truck driven by Arthur Schultz, 2911 West 42d street.

William Beacham, 61 years old, 3982 Rhodes avenue. Killed when a car in which he rode collided with another last night at Ellis avenue and the Midway. Alfred Green, Beacham's brother-in-law, drove one car and Leslie Spence, 621 East 90th street, the other.

AUSTRIA 'CLOSES' TOWN CLINGING TO NAZI IDEALS

Fires Mayor and Then Its School Teachers.

SCHLADMING, Austria, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Schools in this Styrian town are practically without teachers, its Coburg-Gotha castle is without princes and its city hall has lost its burgomaster. All this is a result of Chancellor Engelberg Dollfuss' campaign to wipe out Hitlerism in Austria.

Way back in 1929 when Hitlerism amused rather than worried government officials, Schladming was listed in Austrian guide books as "a popular summer and winter resort—no Jewish visitors desired."

But in recent months its stubborn refusal to give up Nazi ideas not only embarrassed but irritated the Vienna government.

Youngsters Are Warned.

The Hitlerite burgomaster was finally ousted by a federal order and a commissar put in the city hall. Yesterday a cleanup of public schools warned Schladming's youngsters that Hitlerism is taboo even if their teachers approve it.

Meanwhile, the Dollfuss government showed the townspeople that even Hapsburg blood will not save Nazis from punishment by driving out two young Coburg-Gotha princes and by raiding their castle last evening.

During the gendarmes' raid a letter was discovered which, they said, was signed by Kurt Dertil, a brother of Rudolph Dertil, who shot and wounded Chancellor Dollfuss Oct. 4. As a result, several men alleged to be relatives of Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany were arrested, but today the police declined to reveal the text of the letter or the names of these reputed relatives.

Brother Known to Princes.

It was officially confirmed, however, that Kurt Dertil was well known to the Princes Rainer and Ernst Coburg-Gotha.

Meanwhile, a formal charge of attempted murder was filed today against Rudolf Dertil, the former army bugler. The fastidious prisoner, who police said, was an active Nazi until a few weeks at least before the shooting, will be tried before judges, not a jury.

The Austrian association of gendarmes was dissolved today by a government order.

Affiliated with a nationwide Federation of Labor, the organization published a weekly information sheet for members which, a communique said, recently included matter "likely to endanger discipline in the gendarmerie."

Pro-Republican Group.

Other sources pointed out that the association has repeatedly put itself on record as being decidedly democratic and pro-republican.

At the same time, four executives of street railway workers' councils were arrested on suspicion of high treason.

Two executives of the employes' council of the Vienna general hospital, and the chairman of the hospital workers' union also were jailed on like charges.

A total of 31 representatives of Socialist workers' organizations were imprisoned on treason charges in connection with the distribution of Socialist instructions on when and how to begin a general strike.

CZECH REPUBLIC IS 15 YEARS OLD; DISPLAYS ARMY

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Oct. 28.—(AP)—An air of military preparedness dominated today's spectacular celebration of the 15th anniversary of Czechoslovakian independence.

For the first time in the history of the young republic the entire Prague garrison of 10,000 troops of infantry, light and heavy artillery, tanks and machine gun battalions paraded past President Masaryk and were frantically cheered by hundreds of thousands lining the streets.

Overhead roared six heavy bombing planes and 80 pursuit ships, representing Czechoslovakia's air fleet of 600 craft. The celebration was opened with a salute of 28 cannon. The aged president aroused the throngs to heights of patriotic fervor by appearing on horseback to review the troops as commander-in-chief of the nation's armed forces.

LAUNCH INQUIRY INTO ACTIVITIES OF NAZIS IN N. Y.

U. S. Calls Witnesses Before Jury.

New York, Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Federal and state authorities began separate investigations today into Nazi activities in this city.

Subpoenas for 20 witnesses to appear Monday morning before a federal grand jury were issued by United States Attorney George Z. Medalie. While government agents were out serving the subpoenas, State Attorney General John J. Bennett Jr. announced he would order an investigation of the activities of the association known as the League of the Friends of New Germany of which Heinz Spanknoebel was one of the organizers.

United States department of justice agents are looking for Spanknoebel, alleged Nazi agent, whose arrest has been ordered. Spanknoebel is said to have gone to Germany, but the authorities are skeptical, several of the detectives expressing the belief he is hiding somewhere in Yorkville.

Predicts Return to New York.

Dr. Ignaz T. Griebel, president of the League of the Friends of the New Germany, announced Friday that Spanknoebel would be back in New York next Sunday and also asserted he intends to make Mayor John P. O'Brien regret on election day his action in prohibiting the German day celebration in the Sixty-ninth Regiment armory, drew a reply from the mayor today. Mayor O'Brien in a statement, said he accepted the challenge.

The mayor, in his statement, said he is not to be frightened or coerced and he has directed Police Commissioner Bolan to see that order is preserved. The statement of the mayor read:

"My attention has been called to an article in the New York Times today sent from Chicago, saying that a Mr. Gissibl, speaking for friends of 'the New Germany,' said 'In New York we have a fight on our hands, but we are going to win. The action of Mayor O'Brien in opposing the German day celebration next Sunday was nothing but a Jewish conspiracy,' and to an article in the Daily News quoting Dr. Griebel, president of the Friends of New Germany, of which Spanknoebel was chairman, saying 'We are going to make Mayor O'Brien sorry for this ban before election day. I am going to carry the fight to the mayor on this issue.'

Mayor Accepts Challenge.

"I accept the challenge. No man or set of men seeking to set up a state of terrorism can frighten or coerce the mayor of New York. There will be no gang rule while I am mayor. I have directed the commissioner of police to see that order is preserved and if these people want to make this a political issue, I shall be glad to take the decision of the people."

'LAWRENCE OF ARABIA' SHOWERED WITH LIVE BOMBS FROM PLANES

[Copyright: 1933: By the United Press.]

LONDON, Oct. 28.—With that magnificent disregard for his own life that marked his career as "Lawrence of Arabia"—the scourge of the Turks—Aircraftsman T. E. Shaw has permitted the royal air force to shower live bombs down on him to test a supposedly bullet proof target.

Shaw, who spurned all rewards and titles for his work in the Arabian desert, has been devoting his genius to the creation of a bomb proof target, it was learned today. When it became necessary for somebody to sit inside the target and maneuver it under fire, Shaw insisted on taking the job himself.

Accordingly, for days at a time, the one time unofficial ruler of the Arabian empire sat cramped in his small device, while the royal airmen hurled down missiles in an attempt to blow it up. Shaw was uninjured.

(It was Shaw, an Oxford man, who won the desert tribesmen over to the allies during the world war and made their revolt against Turkey successful.)

For more than two years he has specialized in supervising the construction of a motorboat designed for use as a target in air maneuvers. The problem was to build a boat capable of sustaining direct hits by live bombs without sinking and without injury to the crew. Shaw ordered a special cabin of metal built on the deck of an unsinkable motorboat. The cabin was supposedly bullet and bomb proof and was almost entirely enclosed except for a small peep hole.

REICHSTAG FIRE TESTIMONY HIT BY U. S. ATTORNEY

Hays Convinced Court Will Free 4 Prisoners.

BERLIN, Oct. 28.—Arthur Garfield Hays, American lawyer who has been an observer at the reichstag fire trial, left Berlin tonight to return to the United States.

Before his departure Mr. Hays issued a statement in which he expressed the conviction that the Supreme court would free Ernst Torgler, former communist whip in the reichstag, as well as Georgi Dimitroff, Blagoi Popoff, and Wassil Taneff, Bulgarian refugees, because of lack of adequate evidence.

Calls Testimony "Preposterous."

The American attorney holds that the testimony of the Nazi, Berthold Krawahne, former communist and personal enemy of Torgler, and his two friends "is preposterous."

"Their testimony," he said, "tends to show that Torgler went ahead with preparing the reichstag fire together with Marinus van der Lubbe [confessed firebug] a few minutes after he was seen by Krawahne and his two friends and whom he knew to be his personal enemies. Such a presumption is utterly ridiculous."

In a two page report Hays summarized reasons why he is certain that the evidence proves that Torgler and the Bulgarians are innocent. He does not refer to Van der Lubbe, the Dutch defendant, but it is understood he believes him to be guilty.

Nazi's Testimony Hits Bulgarian.

BERLIN, Oct. 28.—(AP)—A new turn in the reichstag building arson trial came today with the sworn assertion of Maj. Hans Weberstedt, the press chief for Nazi reichstag members, that he saw Marinus van der Lubbe and Wassil Taneff, two of the five defendants, walking through the building on the day of the fire or shortly before.

Van der Lubbe, a young, stolid Dutch brick mason, was carrying a wooden box and was followed by Taneff, wearing a ludicrously long overcoat, the witness maintained.

He also testified that he caught a "suspicious smell" of gasoline from the communist party's room next to his.

Earlier, Walter Oehme, a newspaper man, testified that Ernst Torgler, former communist party whip in the parliament and also one of the men accused of firing the reichstag last Feb. 27, easily could have fled following rumors that he was connected with the blaze.

Prisoner in New Outburst.

Weberstedt's testimony bringing Taneff into the forefront caused another outburst from Georgi Dimitroff, like Taneff and Blagoi Popoff, a Bulgarian political refugee and a defendant.

The impulsive Dimitroff cried, "they have divided the rôles among themselves; the different witnesses with different defendants in the trial."

The presiding judge, Wilhelm Buenger, sharply rebuked Dimitroff, who on several previous occasions has scoffed at court procedure and has been sent from the courtroom.

Taneff, after Weberstedt's charges had been translated for him into Bulgarian, asserted: "The witness is either mistaken or intentionally tells an untruth."

BRITAIN DEMANDS BERLIN 'EXPLAIN' WRITER'S ARREST

Presses for Report on Treason Case.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Urgent representations were made today by British authorities regarding the detention on charges of treason of Noel Panter, a British newspaperman, in Munich, Germany.

Supplementing the action of British diplomatic representatives in Berlin and Munich, government officials here pressed for a full report on the exact nature of the accusations against Panter.

The British foreign secretary, Sir John Simon, interviewed Ambassador Von Hoesch regarding the case, and a full report was expected this weekend from the British ambassador in Berlin.

Expects to Be Freed.

Munich, Germany, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Noel Panter, the Munich correspondent for the London Daily Telegraph, expressed confidence today that with the aid of the British embassy and the foreign office in London he would be released shortly from the Munich jail in which he has been held for five days on charge of treason.

For the first time the consul general was permitted to see him yesterday after a vigorous protest by the British embassy. Since then a colleague has been permitted to take him cigarets, food, and other articles.

Diplomatic circles said they were sure the case would not come to a trial. Conviction on treason charges may carry the death penalty.

Accused of Being Spy.

While it was understood previously that Panter was held because he allegedly reported incorrectly a ceremony at which Chancellor Hitler spoke, a Wolff News agency communique said that Panter "made himself urgently suspicious of attempting in an unpermissible manner to secure news of military character" and that "he had connections with a German subject living in Munich who is under suspicion of espionage and launching atrocity news abroad."

NEW U. S. ENVOY TO TOUR AUSTRIA FOR TWO WEEKS

VIENNA, Oct. 28.—(AP)—George H. Earle III., newly appointed United States minister to Austria, will depart tomorrow on a motor tour of all the Austrian provinces for the purpose of getting acquainted with the country and its people.

The trip, an informal one, will touch at Linz, Salzburg, Innsbruck, Bregenz, Klagenfurt, and Graz. It is scheduled to last a fortnight. Mr. Earle will be accompanied by Legation Secretary Kliefoth and Col. Schallenberger, military attaché.

George H. Earle III. is a son of the late George S. Earle of Philadelphia, and took an active part in politics in Pennsylvania for ten years. He was appointed minister to Austria on July 27 and sailed early this month.

Polish Parliament Called; Constitutional Change Seen

WARSAW, Oct. 28.—(AP)—President Ignace Moscicki today summonoed both houses of parliament to a budget session, to open Nov. 3. Unusual significance was attached to the move in the expectioin that the government party will introduce a constitutional amendment increasing the powers of the president and changing the method of selecting members of the senate.

GERMANY ADDS 30 NON-NAZIS TO ELECTION LIST

BERLIN, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Virtually the entire Nazi reichstag election list, containing 685 names, 30 to 40 of which are non-Nazis, was completed today, Dr. Wilhelm Frick, minister of the interior, announced. He emphasized that the non-Nazis were included for foreign political reasons.

The previous reichstag had 647 members of whom 201 were non-Nazis, ultimately ousted under the new régime.

Dr. Frick said the reichstag election on Nov. 12 probably would be the last of its kind. He said a new system of voting without election lists would be inaugurated by future law, but added that this as well as other constitutional changes would be determined largely by "the organic development of the new state.

"The primary purpose of the new reichstag is to give Chancellor Hitler's foreign policy solid backing," he said. "It will assist in domestically creating an impregnable political unity."

POPE WORRIED OVER GERMANY'S CATHOLIC YOUTH

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Pope Pius has expressed himself as "deeply preoccupied and acutely anxious over the situation of the Catholic youth in Germany, and especially for religion in Germany."

His holiness made this statement yesterday in speaking to a pilgrimage of German youths. A summary of his remarks was printed today by the Vatican city newspaper, Osservatore Romano. The pontiff said he was particularly glad that the youths came to him at this difficult moment, adding that he was troubled over the situation of the German youths because the future is built on youth.

The pope declared that he was naturally optimistic, urged the youths to remain tranquil and promised to do his utmost for them. In this connection it was recalled that the German minister now is here negotiating with the Vatican concerning some unsettled points of the concordat with the reich.

GUARD FREEDOM OF PRESS, PLEA OF JAMES M. BECK

Editors Honor Its 1733 Champion.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., Oct. 28.—(AP)—American journalism celebrated today the two hundredth anniversary of John Peter Zenger's reporting of a colonial assembly election, an event founding the principle that newspapers may print the truth without fear of suppression.

It was in St. Paul's church in Eastchester that the election was held. There, too, was held Zenger's trial on charges that his account was seditious libel to colonial authorities.

Zenger was acquitted. His defense was that he reported the truth. The church still stands, a monument to the freedom of the press.

Several hundred editors and publishers and descendants of colonial families who settled this Hudson river countryside, gathered on the church green amidst tombstones several hundred years old, heard Col. Robert R. McCormick of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and Representative James M. Beck of Pennsylvania urge the press of America to follow in Zenger's steps.

"Press Must Be Free."

The recovery program was cited by Mr. Beck, who said that in these times "the complexity of the constitutional and economic questions is such that there would seem to be a manifest duty on the part of the American press to express its opinion for the public enlightenment upon those issues."

"In this there can be no lack of patriotism," said Mr. Beck, noted authority on constitutional law, "and the seriousness of the times would seem to insure that such expressions will be 'with malice toward none, with charity for all,' and yet 'with firmness in the right.'"

Mr. Beck said that "if in the execution of the vast recovery program there have at times been injudicious efforts to discipline the press, or even, as was gravely suggested, to go back to the days of the star chamber by licensing the press under a code, such has not been the purpose or the spirit of our President, who nobly stated the true attitude of a free government to press criticism in a speech to newspaper men."

Cites Roosevelt's Own Words.

Some of the President's "overzealous subordinates" could profitably ponder his words, Mr. Beck declared. He sounded a warning that if the press "fails in its duty of free, fair and dispassionate criticism, then democracy itself will fail, and the event may prove to be that our government, while it may continue in form, will have perished in spirit."

The Pennsylvania representative said that "champions of the right still exist in the field of journalism, but the commercial character of the newspaper has become so dominant that freedom of expression is not what it once was."

In decrying the "commercial influences" on journalism, Mr. Beck declared, "Undoubtedly a newspaper must be primarily a business enterprise, but if it has no higher conception of its function in the state than to make profits, then indeed its usefulness can be little. It is just as bad for a newspaper to be influenced in the expression of its opinion by its large advertisers as by an arbitrary government."

"Suppressing Truth Is Sordid."

"In fact," he added, "the excuse is far less justifiable where the motive for suppressing truth is a sordid one than in the case where the government, to preserve its authority, insists that it should be free from criticism. For the latter something can be said in critical times. For the former nothing can be said."

Newspapers, Mr. Beck asserted, were at once great organs of opinion because they voiced the sentiments of some courageous tribune of the people, who "without regard to the effects of the circulation of his paper, challenged the wrong and vindicated the right.

"Such men were Dana, Greeley, Raymond, Pulitzer, Bennett, McClure. Today, such a man is Col. Robert McCormick of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and, I may add, although I frequently disagree with his views, W. R. Hearst.

Traces Fight for Free Press.

Linking the right of a free press with the forthcoming NRA code for newspapers, Col. McCormick declared:

"American journalism does not wish to triumph over anybody, we only wish to be assured that our rights so hardily won and so hardily preserved are not being destroyed."

Col. McCormick traced extensively, from the earliest days of journalism, the fight for freedom of the press. He touched on the recent incident in Washington in which Gen. Hugh Johnson, the recovery administrator, refused access to certain news to a reporter whose writings, the editor said, "displeased him."

"This act," Col. McCormick added, "would not be important, for it is notorious that Washington officials try to control and color news from Washington by conveying and withholding official and social favor, but for the position held by Mr. Johnson."

Warns Against License Clause.

Like Representative Beck, Col. McCormick warned against any licensing provision in the NRA code.

"Licensing is only one way to dominate utterance," Col. McCormick said. "The economic attack is an equally effective way.

"In negotiations looking toward a permanent code for the newspaper industry, the newspapers have been contending for the preservation of the right of the freedom of the press as provided in the constitution and upheld by the courts.

"The administrator, I have understood, has been insisting on its elimination."

Referring to a recent speech by Prof. Lindsay Rogers, who has the newspaper code in charge, Col. McCormick said:

"I note that he says he does not intend to limit the freedom of the press; that the decisions of the Supreme court will be accepted as final, and that the men who have been championing the freedom of the press have done so in order to pretend to a victory over an adversary who does not exist.

"The first two of these statements I welcome with a whole heart. The third I say politely and firmly is an error.

"I will guarantee on the part of the newspapers of America that if the charter of their right to freely publish in the interest of the people is fully set forth in the newspaper code they will hail the codifier as a patriot."

Few places more historically appropriate for the celebration of the free press establishment could be found.

Historic Setting for Exercises.

History here abounds. Ancestors of President Roosevelt were once pewholders in the vine shrouded Episcopalian church. Aaron Burr practiced law here many times. Hessian soldiers usurped the church for quarters during the revolutionary war. Colonial troops used it for a hospital and down the slope from the church in a deep ditch were buried half a hundred revolutionary soldiers who died from fever.

In this church came Andrew Hamilton from Philadelphia, dean of the colonial bar—he who later designed Independence hall. In Zenger's defense Hamilton addressed the jurors:

"You will today have laid the foundation for securing to ourselves, our posterity, and our neighbors that to which nature and the laws of our country have given us a right—the liberty of both exposing and opposing arbitrary powers [in these parts of the world at least] by speaking and writing the truth."

Myron C. Taylor, the chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation, represented the descendants of early St. Paul parishioners at the celebration and cited the historic significance of the day in saying:

"As Americans living in a trying and difficult time of readjustment we count ourselves fortunate to have in the living stones of this church a constant and potent reminder of those vital and unassailable principles which have made and will continue to make America a great and enduring nation."

Two Boys Are Killed in Plunge Down Canyon

Thistle, Utah, Oct. 28.—(AP)—John Louis Wilson, 10, and Jack Lloyd Benedict, 12, are dead as the result of a plunge 175 feet down the side of a canyon with a boulder they loosened at play. A third boy escaped by jumping from the rock when it began to slide.

MISS CHAPMAN IS WED IN GOLD COAST CEREMONY

Becomes Bride of Boston Man; Many Guests Attend

BY JUDITH CASS.

One of the largest and most fashionable weddings of the season was solemnized yesterday afternoon when Miss Virginia Chapman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Adams Chapman, became the bride of J. Brooks Fenno Jr. of Boston. At 4:30 o'clock the service was read by the Rev. Dr. Harrison Ray Anderson in the Fourth Presbyterian church.

For almost a half hour before the ceremony traffic in Michigan avenue was impeded by taxis and motors drawn up to the church entrance as well as by a crowd of curious bystanders. After the service the hundreds of guests went to the Casino for the wedding reception.

Bride Escorted by Father.

Radiant in a gown of shimmering white satin, the bride moved down the long aisle on the arm of her father. Before the candle lighted altar resplendent with greenery and huge bouquets of white chrysanthemums, she repeated her vows with Mr. Fenno. Her gown, fashioned on simple lines, used Brussels lace for the trimming of the puffed sleeves. Brussels lace that is an heirloom in the Chapman family likewise formed part of the long, sweeping court train that fell from a delicate headdress of old lace. Over the train floated a veil of ivory tulle.

Miss Margaret Chapman attended her sister as maid of honor while another sister, Miss Elinor Chapman, was one of six bridesmaids. The others included Miss Patty McCormick, a cousin of the bride; Miss Jean Schweppe, Miss Jane Brooks, Mrs. Edgar Stanton Jr., all of Chicago, and Miss Gerardine Thompson of St. Paul.

Philadelphian Is Best Man.

James M. Robbins of Philadelphia was best man. Ushers were James Hinkle, Francis H. Cummings, Sargent Collier, and Laurence B. Damon of Boston; Edward T. Herndon and John Sise of New York, Samuel E. Ewing Jr. of Philadelphia, and Lucien E. Williams of Chicago.

Mrs. Chapman wore a gown of deep purple satin and a matching velvet hat trimmed in ostrich plumes. Her shoulder bouquet was of lavender orchids. The velvet gown of Mrs. Fenno, the bridegroom's mother, shaded from a deep olive to a light lettuce green.

Many relatives and friends of Mr. Fenno were among the out of town guests attending the wedding. They included Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Richard K. Thorndike, Mrs. Laurence C. Fenno and her daughter, Miss Pauline Fenno; Miss Sybil Wolcott, and George Greener, all of Boston; Mrs. George S. Robbins and Miss Mary Coles of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Robbins of Ambler, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. John Simpkins of Yarmouth, Mass., and Miss Belle Gurnee of New York.

Relatives of Bride.

The F. Hamilton McCormick-Goodharts came from Washington. They are relatives of the bride. Robert Hall McCormick was present at the ceremony and so were Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick with her younger daughter, Helen; Mrs. and Mrs. William J. Chalmers, Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed with her daughter, Miss Mary Reed; Mrs. Bertha Baur, Miss Barbara Poole with her mother, Mrs. Ralph H. Poole; Mr. and Mrs. George A. Ranney with their daughter, Miss Dorothy Ranney; Mrs. T. Philip Swift, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, Miss Jean Wilhelm and Miss Patsy Keith, Miss Eleanor Wheeler, who was escorted by Edward F. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Dulany Jr., and Mrs. Frank Hibbard.

Becomes Bride of New Yorker.

Miss Dorothy Moorehead, daughter of Mrs. Hirst Moorehead and Dr. Frederick B. Moorehead, became the bride of Asaph Churchill Jr. of New York, son of Mr. and Mrs. Asaph Churchill of Boston, in a ceremony performed in the chapel of the Fourth Presbyterian church at noon yesterday. The Rev. Dr. Anderson read the service in the presence of the immediate families and a very few close friends.

Miss Moorehead wore a French blue dress with a three-quarter coat to match, trimmed in nutria, and brown accessories. Mrs. Washington Dodge II. of New York, was her only attendant. George Higginson II. of Colorado Springs and Boston was Mr. Churchill's best man. A wedding breakfast at the Tavern club followed the ceremony. The bride and bridegroom left a little later for a honeymoon in Colorado. They will be at home in New York after Nov. 25.

Among the out of town folk here for the wedding were the bridegroom's mother and sister, Miss Olivia Churchill, and his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey P. Hood II., and Francis B. Todd of Boston. Mr. Churchill Sr. was prevented by illness from attending the wedding.

He was charged with speeding and released on a $10 bond to appear Monday before Municipal Judge Porter.

ASSAILS PAPERS AS SUPPORTERS OF CHILD LABOR

Cleveland, O., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical union, today in an address before the City club criticized newspaper publishers for the code they presented in Washington and what he termed their fight to retain child labor as newsboys.

In reporting his speech, the Cleveland Plain Dealer said: "Howard . . . complained his fight on newsboys had not been widely reported, although the Associated Press has carried a comprehensive story."

The paper quoted Howard as saying: "These publishers stand as the one class which appeared before the national recovery administration and refused flatly to do away with child labor as all other industries have done.

"I have received many copies of the comprehensive story the Associated Press sent out regarding my fight on this form of child labor, but I regret to say I know of only a few newspapers which did not ignore it altogether."

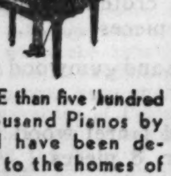
KIMBALL

ENDORSED BY HALF A MILLION FAMILIES!



MORE than five hundred thousand Pianos by Kimball have been delivered to the homes of America! There is endorsement indeed! No other single make can approach such a record. It should be one of the guiding factors for your family in the buying of a piano. Such nation-spread endorsement is no accident; the record has been built over a long period of years; and each year sees an increase in sales over the one before.

MRS. ROOSEVELT LEAVES TODAY FOR WORLD FAIR

Women to Greet Visitor at Train Tomorrow.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt leaves New York City this afternoon for her two day visit in Chicago. Arriving here at 8:15 a. m. tomorow, the wife of the President will preside at the 1933 Mobilization of Human Needs conference, which opens its sessions during the morning at the Stevens hotel. The conference will close tomorrow night.

On Tuesday Mrs. Roosevelt will be the guest of the women of Chicago at the World's Fair. The entire second day of her stay in Chicago will be devoted to the Exposition, which is expected to be an outstanding event of A Century of Progress calendar.

Plan Fund Campaigns.

Prominent women from all over the nation will meet with Mrs. Roosevelt at the Human Needs conference to plan a campaign to raise funds for hundreds of private welfare institutions which do not benefit from tax revenues. There will be a session in the morning, a luncheon at noon, which Mrs. Roosevelt will attend, and an afternoon session.

The conference will close with a dinner at the Stevens hotel in the evening, which Newton D. Baker of Cleveland, chairman of the national relief campaign, inaugurated on Oct. 6, by President Roosevelt, is expected to attend. The evening dinner meeting is planned to lend impetus to individual relief campaigns to be held in many of the large cities during the next few weeks.

Women To Meet Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy and Mrs. Frank P. Hixon, co-chairmen of the Chicago women's division of the Community fund, will meet Mrs. Roosevelt on her arrival and escort her to the Congress hotel. Other well known women who will greet her include Mrs. James P. Shanahan of New York, Mrs. Robert Lawson of Oklahoma, Mrs. Victor Murdock of Kansas, Mrs. Louis Seelbach Jr., Kentucky; Mrs. John S. Dalrymple, Minnesota; Mrs. Ellery Davis, Nebraska; Mrs. Brandt C. Downey, Indiana, and Mrs. James A. Jackson, Wisconsin.

Also at the train will be Mrs. Rufus C. Dawes, honorary chairman, and Mrs. Henry W. Hardy, chairman of the executive committee in charge of Women's day at the World's Fair on Tuesday.

Will Review Troops.

As the guest of the women of Chicago, Mrs. Roosevelt will visit the Fair Tuesday morning to review the troops from Camp Whistler and make a tour of the grounds with pauses at exhibits in which she is particularly interested. At 2:30 p. m. she will address a massmeeting of women in the Court of States. All of the important feminine organizations of the city will be represented there by sizeable delegations.

Mrs. Minna Schmidt, costumer, who has devoted years to reproducing the styles worn by famous women, will direct the production of a pageant, "Famous American Women," which will incorporate some characters of especial interest to the President's wife.

Miss Margery Maxwell, opera singer, will sing "The Star Spangled Banner" as a final feature of the program, and a group of four Girl Scouts and Camp Fire Girls, of which Mrs. Roosevelt is honorary president, will lead in the pledge of allegiance to the flag.

Plan Formal Dinner.

In the evening a formal dinner will be held for Mrs. Roosevelt at the Palmer house under the auspices of the Illinois Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, but to which all women of the city are eligible. Because it is imperative that the first lady leave Chicago at 9 o'clock the dinner has been called for 6 o'clock sharp, and all guests are expected to be in their places at that time. Headquarters for the dinner is in room 662 of the Palmer house.

Arrangements for Women's day are in charge of the social functions committee of A Century of Progress, of which Mrs. Dawes is chairman, and of the executive committee headed by Mrs. Hardy, as president of the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Organizations.

Mrs. Dawes' group comprises Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, Mrs. Joseph L. Cudahy, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Andrew MacLeish, Mrs. David Mayer, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mrs. Robert R. McCormick, Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Miss Agnes Nestor, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Charles H. Swift, and Mrs. Frederic W. Upham.

Mrs. Hardy's committee members are Mrs. Baur, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Conkey, Mrs. George V. McIntyre, Mrs. Sylvester Schiele, Mrs. Ozora S. Davis, Mrs. Charles Schwartz, Mrs. Holland Flagler, Miss Jessamine Hoagland, Mrs. Mark Mears, and Mrs. Charles S. Clark.

SINGS TOMORROW

Miss Margery Maxwell, who will sing "The Star Spangled Banner" tomorrow as the final feature of program here for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

TAX CONFERENCE DEBATES ILLNESS OF GEORGE NIXON

A conference of public officials, business men, and representatives of civic organizations, called by County Assessor J. L. Jacobs to evolve methods of speeding collection of taxes, yesterday resolved itself into a discussion of the financial troubles of local governments and their causes. No plan to expedite tax collections was offered.

Assessor Jacobs expressed the fear that mailing of 1932 tax bills might be delayed by the illness of George F. Nixon, member of the board of tax appeals, because he will be prevented from hearing complaints on personal property assessments. George O. Fairweather, chairman of the joint commission on real estate valuations, suggested Nixon resign temporarily and appoint a successor to function during his illness.

Otto C. Woerter, chief clerk of the appeals board, answered that the board has caused no delays thus far and will not do so. John O. Rees, director of the citizens' committee on public expenditures, suggested that solution of the problem of Mr. Nixon's illness be deferred ,for two weeks when complaints will be filed.

Two Couples of Home for Aged and Sick Are Married

New York, Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Today was the most exciting day in the Isabella Home for the Aged and Sick since it was established 44 years ago. Romance had entered the lives of four of the comparative youngsters among the inmates and they were married with much ado. The newlyweds were Charles Collins and Anna Craven, each 68 years old, and Frederick Alexander and Deborah Bernard, each 70 years old. The brides had been widows and the bridegrooms bachelors.

VISITING NURSES CARRY CHEER TO DESTITUTE SICK

Another Charity to Share in Community Fund.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

In true stories from life Miss Edna L. Foley, superintendent, yesterday told of the Visiting Nurse association's service to the impoverished sick. The association is one of the 100 private welfare agencies joining in a drive to raised a $4,000,000 community fund for Allied Chicago Charities, which opens early in November.

Miss Foley told of Johnnie's arm that might have withered and Henry, 9 years old, convalescing from pneumonia, who keeps a quarter under his pillow in readiness for the sky ride trip at A Century of Progress which he will never be able to take.

Philosophy of Cheer.

Sprinkled through the stories was the note of human kindness which characterizes the spirit of the visiting nurse as she travels from the city limits on the north to the Indiana line in trim navy blue coat and hat and light blue uniform, carrying into homes where there is sickness and despair a philosophy of hopefulness and cheer. Miss Foley began with Johnnie's story.

"If Johnnie had been born before we learned our muscle physiotherapy his arm would have withered. But we set a record in one of Chicago's best known clinics with Johnnie, where we took him, two days old, with a paralyzed arm. When he was four days old the visiting nurse put the arm in a padded split and after months of care both arms were useful.

Henry's Pathetic Case.

"But Henry's case remains just a little beyond our grasp. He wanted more than anything to take the sky ride. He was too ill to consider the plan and efforts were made to direct his attention to other things, but again he reiterated his request: 'All I want is a sky ride.'

"Finally we gave him 25 cents, the price of the ride. He kept it under his pillow, feeling his wish was about to be realized. 'Have you been up in the sky ride?' he would ask the nurse who cared for him, and 'Do you know how high it is and do the cars go fast?' and "How long before I can go?

"Then an operation was necessary. All July and part of August he remained in the hospital. When we resumed our daily calls we found his interest in the sky ride as keen as ever.

"'I still have my quarter,' he said to the nurse, 'When do you think I can go?'

Wound Heals Quickly.

"His wound healed quickly but his general condition was none too good. He drank milk; but again the wound started draining. He again returned to the hospital. It is doubtful whether he will ever be able to go on the sky ride.

"We often find a miniature league of nations where we go. We cared for a Japanese mother with a new born baby. A Polish neighbor went in daily to help with the housework; another neighbor, a German, cooked her meals and carried them to her.

"Then there was young James who developed a serious infection in his hand. We had to call daily to make the dressings until the hand was out of danger. And there is the substation that is planning a Hallowe'en surprise for a motherless child who is suffering from a cardiac ailment. The other day the visiting nurse found her sitting up in the kitchen for the first time, watching as a treat, her old grandmother do the family washing."

A Great Field Hospital.

Miss Foley described the nurses' association as a great field hospital with patients in every ward in the city. Calls come from everywhere. Hard up, sick and miserable, the impoverished who are under medical care, call for the visiting nurse.

"If you must have figures," Miss Foley concluded, "use these: we have 8,000 patients monthly and make more than 30,000 calls. The 8,000 represent between 5,000 and 6,000 households and in the course of a busy day the visiting nurse works in coöperation with half the agencies in the city—hospitals, clinic, health department, relief agencies, churches, and women's clubs."

The Visiting Nurse association has 10 local offices. One substation on the north side has been closed for lack of funds. Three of the twenty nurses who devote their time to crippled and handicapped children, have been taken off the special work for the same reason. Many of the families served are borderline families, almost in need of relief, but still able to meet a part of their personal obligations. Mrs. George A. Ranney is president of the association. The directors include Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy, Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, and Mrs. Albert A. Sprague.

CENTURY OF PROGRESS NOTES

Milton W. Monson, 21 years old, who hitch hiked to Chicago from Detroit to take part in Buddy Rogers' amateur talent contest at the Pabst Blue Ribbon casino and won first prize Friday night will sing with the orchestra for an indefinite engagement, it was announced yesterday. He was to be awarded a week's contract as winner of the contest, but made such a hit in his first appearance that the engagement was extended.

Wearers of the "I Was There" buttons, which were given to all persons entering the Fair gates during Chicago week, will be admitted to five concessions tomorrow at a two for one rate. The concessions are the Sky Ride, Enchanted Island, the Lama Temple, Fort Dearborn, and "The World a Million Years Ago."

The largest single excursion to the Fair will arrive here this morning over the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad from southern and southeastern points, it was announced by E. H. Batchelder, general passenger agent. At least 4,000 passengers will be in ten special trains from Atlanta, Chattanooga, Murphysboro, and Nashville, Tenn., and Decatur and Birmingham, Ala.

Members of the sight seeing unit of the World's Fair Greyhound lines have organized a society intended to perpetuate their friendship and associations. Officers of the organization are: S. Hedin, president; Tom Howe, vice president; P. Fogel, secretary; R. Lewis, corresponding secretary; L. Keegan, treasurer, and J. Murphy, sergeant-at-arms.

The University of Michigan band gave a concert last night in the court of the Hall of States. The band paraded into the courtway and played military and college marches and school songs in front of the Michigan exhibit. This evening three other university bands, those of Illinois, Northwestern and Chicago, will mass for a half hour concert in the court of the Hall of Science, at 6:30 p. m.

Meet Today to Fight Plan to Rename Crawford Ave.

A mass meeting to protest against the proposed change of the name of Crawford avenue to Pulaski road will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Midwest Athletic club under the auspices of the Garfield Park Business Men's association, Lions club, and Rotary club. It will be argued that the change would cost business men along the 22 mile street large sums by destroying the usefulness of past advertising.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—John Polando, co-holder of the world's distance flight record with the late Russell Boardman, will race two pairs of homing pigeons from New York to Boston with his plane, it was announced today.

21,480,142D FAIR VISITOR TODAY TO SET U. S. RECORD

Friday, Oct. 27, 1893..........	254,763
Total including Oct. 27, 1933.. [154 days]	21,321,051
Total including Oct. 27, 1893.. [180 days]	20,864,149

The Columbian Exposition opened Ma 1: A Century of Progress opened May 27

BY EARL MULLIN.

It was almost 11 o'clock at night when Miss Harriet Clague, 23 years old, hurriedly left her home at 42 Hammond street, where she had been minding her sister's children to keep a date with a young guide at the Fair. This was no evening to remain idly at home, for it was the last night of the Columbian Exposition of 1893.

Miss Clague arrived at the main gate to the Exposition grounds just as they were closing for the last time. A sympathetic gate guard, who knew the young man she was meeting, let her through, and she became the last visitor to the Fair of 1893.

Now, 40 years later but still interested in Fairs, for she married her young guide, Mrs. R. T. Graham of 710 North Tamarind street, Compton, Cal., the former Miss Clague, will visit the Fair of 1933 today, to combine the rôle of guest and hostess.

Await 21,480,142d Visitor.

Mrs. Graham, accompanied by her husband will welcome the 21,480,142d visitor to the 1933 Exposition. For with that entrance a new record will be made for American expositions. Officials had hoped for an attendance of 150,000 yesterday, which would have made that the record breaking day. But early in the afternoon it was seen that this goal would not be reached, and the festivities will take place sometime this afternoon.

Only 15 More Days Remain in Which to See the Fair

The honor guest, be it man, woman or child, will get a great array of presents and honors. There will be a typewriter, a gold fountain pen, candy or cigars, a camera, a clock, and many other things.

Seven hundred wounded world war veterans from Hines Memorial hospital at Maywood were guests at the Fair yesterday. The contingent, some lame, and all tearful in their gratitude, came to the Fair under the direction of Col. Hugh Scott, superintendent of Hines hospital. Private automobiles and buses were used for the journey.

Free Coffee and Doughnuts.

Singing broke out as the caravan left the hospital grounds, but as the veterans approached the Fair, about which they had heard so much, they were strangely quiet. At the Fair gates they were met by a group of young men and women and served with coffee and doughnuts.

In the exhibit they were met with courtesy and kindness on every hand. Visitors stepped back with a smile so the veterans could see. Guides and attendants helped carry the wheel chair patients and cleared a path for those on crutches. The forgotten men were remembered.

A luncheon was served in midafternoon in the German-American building, and the veterans were gay over good food and plenty of cigarets, served by men in German uniforms, while they rested at ease under the imperial German flag.

At 11:30 p. m. yesterday the official attendance was 92,925.

RECORD THRONG OF 1,367,000 VIEWS ART SHOW

Fair Exhibit to End at 10 P. M. Wednesday.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

A total of 1,367,169 persons have attended the Chicago Art institute's Century of Progress exhibition since its opening May 23. When the exhibition closes at 10 o'clock Wednesday night it is estimated that the total attendance will be well over 1,400,000.

"This is the largest attendance on record for any exhibition in a museum," said Robert B. Harshe, director of the institute. He estimated that about 500,000 of the institute visitors had seen the special exhibition of paintings for which 25 cents admission is charged. A total of 63,000 illustrated catalogs of the exhibition have been sold at $1 each.

Wait to Buy Tickets.

Yesterday a long line of persons waited to buy tickets for this special exhibit of outstanding works of art which have been loaned to the institute. The last week has seen a rush of Chicagoans and others who have postponed seeing the exhibition until the last, it was explained.

In the last few days 43,501 persons have visited the institute. What is believed to be the world's record attendance for one day at any museum was reached last Sunday, with 21,650. This, it is said, probably will be surpassed today.

The painting in by far the greatest demand is Whistler's portrait of his mother, according to Miss Helen Barsaloux, who conducts between 300 and 400 persons a day on tours of the most famous paintings. Visitors immediately ask to see it, she said. Next in demand are: "Portrait of a Nude Descending the Stairs," which inspires dislike but a great amount of curiosity; Titian's "Venus and the Lute Player," and Rembrandt's "Aristotle and the Bust of Homer," according to the tour guide.

Most Expensive Picture.

"A common question," one official of the museum said, "is: 'Which are the most expensive pictures?' We then show them 'Assumption of the Virgin,' by El Greco, a million dollar picture; Titian's 'Venus,' valued at the same figure; Rembrandt's 'Aristotle,' practically a million dollar picture; Rembrandt's 'The Girl at the Open Half Door,' a half million dollar picture, and Seurat's 'Sunday Afternoon on the Grande-Jette.'

"The Seurat was bought by Frederic Clay Bartlett for $24,000, given to us, and has brought an offer of $400,000, which we turned down."

More than 15,000 post cards of Whistler's "Mother" have been sold to visitors. Another painting about which many inquiries are made is "American Gothic," by Grant Wood of Cedar Rapids, Ia., owned by the institute. It appears to be universally liked, museum officials said, although Iowa farmers' wives wrote the artist indignantly when it was first shown under the title of "Iowa Farmer and Wife." They said they were not grim and mirthless.

Father Was There.

On a tour of the various galleries the visitor overhears mostly matter of fact remarks from persons who apparently do not consider themselves connoisseurs. In front of "Au Moulin Rouge," by Toulouse-Latrec, a little boy tugged at his father's sleeve and said: "You said you were there in the nineties, when that was painted. Did it look like that?"

"No, I never saw anything that looked like that," the father said, staring at a woman's face beneath a glaring light on the canvas.

"They say that was Cezanne's beloved," one well dressed woman said, standing before Cezanne's "Woman in Blue." She continued: "No wonder he was so unhappy."

On the outskirts of the crowd viewing "Portrait of a Nude Descending the Stairs" one woman remarked: "It's certainly safe for any one to look at. She would never be arrested. You can't tell what she is."

Explains the "Gypsy Woman."

A young man, an art student, was explaining "Gypsy Woman and Child," by Amadeo Modigliani, to two well dressed older women.

"Yes, but you'd never admire a person like that if you knew her," one said. "But it's more understandable than the horrible girl swimming in the water toward a lighthouse, which is smaller than she.

"But it just tries to show you what you really would see in a studio," an older man was saying to his woman companion before Felice Carena's "The Studio."

"Now take a good look. You'll never see it again," a girl in her teens was telling her little brother, standing before Whistler's "Mother."

$10,000 Gold Cross Stolen; Town Mourns Relic's Loss

COLON, Canal Zone, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Theft of an ancient Spanish cross of solid gold set with 33 emeralds and valued at $10,000 is mourned by citizens of Porto Bello, an historic Spanish town. The relic has been missing since Oct. 21 when the inhabitants celebrated their annual patronal fiesta. It is believed to have been stolen by visitors. The governor of Colon has taken all possible measures to prevent the relic leaving the country.

MISS EDITH ROSENFIELD

Miss Edith Rosenfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris S. Rosenfield of the Lake Shore Drive hotel, will become the bride of Chalmers McGuffie, son of Mrs. J. A. S. McGuffie of St. George's Hill, Weybridge, Surrey, England, in a ceremony which will take place tomorrow at St. James' church, Piccadilly, London. The wedding will be followed by a reception at the residence of F. E. Powell, 40 Park lane. The bride's sister, Mrs. Helen Walton, who has been abroad since August, is the only member of her family who will attend the ceremony. Miss Rosenfield spends the summers at Le Touquet, but has been in the habit of spending about six months of each year in Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. McGuffie will live in London. Mrs. Walton is sailing for home on the Berengaria on Nov. 1.

WOMAN, 'SLAIN' BY MATE, COMES BACK TO LIFE

TIJUANA, Mexico, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Mrs. Eleana Rodriguez, 40, was pronounced dead and laid on a slab in the morgue. Police said her husband had beaten her with a stone, charging that he found her with another man. Several hours after removal of Mrs. Rodriguez to the morgue, an attendant noticed a movement of the sheet over her body. He called physicians, who administered stimulants to the "dead" woman. She may recover.

8 MEXICAN ARMY OFFICERS ADMIT PLOTTING REVOLT

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Eight young officers who confessed planning a military plot were questioned today by military leaders, who sought to learn if the conspiracy had any ramifications and whether the group had the backing of any prominent political or military figures.

It was indicated officially that the alleged leader of the plot, Second Captain Salvador Tirado Salido, 22 years old, may be sentenced to death, and the others, including Second Captain Jorge Savingnon Antonio Moreno, to ten year prison terms. All the accused men are recent graduates of military schools, and all, with the exception of Moreno, are in their twenties and unmarried.

It was reliably learned that the group discussed the possibility of staging a movement similar to the revolt of enlisted men in Cuba in protest against slow promotions and low pay.

ROOSEVELT GOLD POLICY SHAPED BY PROFESSORS

Warren, Rogers Added to "Brain Trust."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 28.—[Special.]—A specialist in gold and a specialist in the price of things that gold will buy were President Roosevelt's close advisers on the weighty closing paragraphs of the President's radio speech on Sunday night, in which he set forth his new gold policy.

Last July brief announcements came out of Washington that Prof. James Harvey Rogers of Yale university and Prof. George Frederick Warren of Cornell university had been summoned to make "a comprehensive survey of federal finances." Ostensibly their job was the sufficiently imposing one of stretching out America's 22 billion 500 million dollar national debt on a long time basis. Actually since July they have moved closer and closer to the President's ear when it is receptive to the all important matter of a controlled currency.

Rogers a Gold Specialist.

Prof. Rogers is the gold specialist. Prof. Warren is the man who knows, in part at least, what happens to prices under strained or normal circumstances. Inasmuch as any tinkering with gold is obviously going to have repercussions among prices, the two professors necessarily shared in the formation of the President's policy.

In Washington they call Rogers and Warren "the new professors," to distinguish them from the group of educators including Professors Moley, Berle and Tugwell, who moved to Washington as early as last March. It is not so much that their views have supplanted those of the "old professors" in the President's mind, but that the things in which they are specialists are coming strongly to the front right now.

Book Forecast His Attitude.

Two years ago this month Prof. Rogers was much in the public eye following the publication of "America Weighs Her Gold." Yale University Press rushed it through to give a public avid for information about the currency systems of the world something it could sink its teeth in.

That book definitely forecast Prof. Rogers' attitude toward the gold standard. He does not take it too seriously when its friends claim that any alteration of the system is bound to be fatal. He remarked that it would be a great practical joke if the rest of the world gave the United States and France all the gold there is.

Scoffs at Gold Standard.

Here is a passage from "America Weighs Her Gold":

"Among the most illuminating anomalies of our so-called advanced civilization is the gold standard. To the rationally inclined, that the weight of anything should be chosen and continued as a standard of value is strange enough. That it should be the weight of a substance which at the time of its choosing was usable for ornament, is stranger.

"Even his golden majesty's throne, however, is no longer so firmly fixed. More than once it has been suggested that if the United States and France insist on taking most of the monetary gold of the world, why shouldn't they be allowed to have it all? Certainly no greater practical joke could be played on them."

In the academic world Prof. Rogers has long been known as a liberal. He gave testimony to that attitude in 1930 when he resigned from the University of Missouri, where he had been professor of economics for seven years, as a protest against the university's suspension of Prof. Max Meyer for circulating a sex questionnaire. He went immediately to his alma mater, Yale university, as Sterling professor of political economy.

Urged Beer 18 Months Ago.

Eighteen months ago he publicly advocated that the United States legalize the use and importation of light wines and beer. "Relief would be brought to Germany through beer exports," he said, "and with wine imports, friendly coöperation in monetary policies could surely be arranged with France."

He was concerned at the time—May, 1932—with the necessity for credit expansion, and he remarked that "the controlled credit expansion of the federal reserve system can be pursued without any possible risks of ultimate too drastic inflation."

He added that unless banks loosened up their conservative credit policy "more drastic measures are necessary for getting the new money into the hands of the public."

Made Tour of Europe.

In the fall of this year Prof. Rogers went to Europe to attend a meeting of the league of nations council and was elected a member of the league's economic committee. Then he toured Europe to discover the reaction to the NRA. What he learned he did not divulge to the press when he returned.

Prof. Rogers is 47 years old and a native of South Carolina. He took his A. B. degree at Yale in 1909, and in the early years of the world war did graduate study in Switzerland. At various times he has taught at the University of Missouri and Cornell university, always on economics. He is unmarried.

What inflation is, Prof. Rogers knows full well. He is a historian of French inflation in his book, "The Process of Inflation in France [1914-'27]," published in 1929.

Warren a Farm Economist.

The other "new professor," who stands in a powerful place in the new gold policy of the President, Prof. Warren, is primarily known as an authoritative farm economist, but the subject of gold is inseparable from farm economy or any other kind, and he has had much to say about it in his own book, "Prices," which he wrote with Prof. Pearson of Cornell university and published the first of this year.

Prof. Warren is deeply interested in what he calls the "compensated dollar," and in some kind of a change in the monetary system that will raise the price level.

Predicted Monetary Change.

The last sentence in his book reads thus:

"There is, of course, a possibility that the United States will make a monetary change that will restore prices."

Is that prophetic?

The professor is not afraid of prophecy, in any event. He said in "Prices":

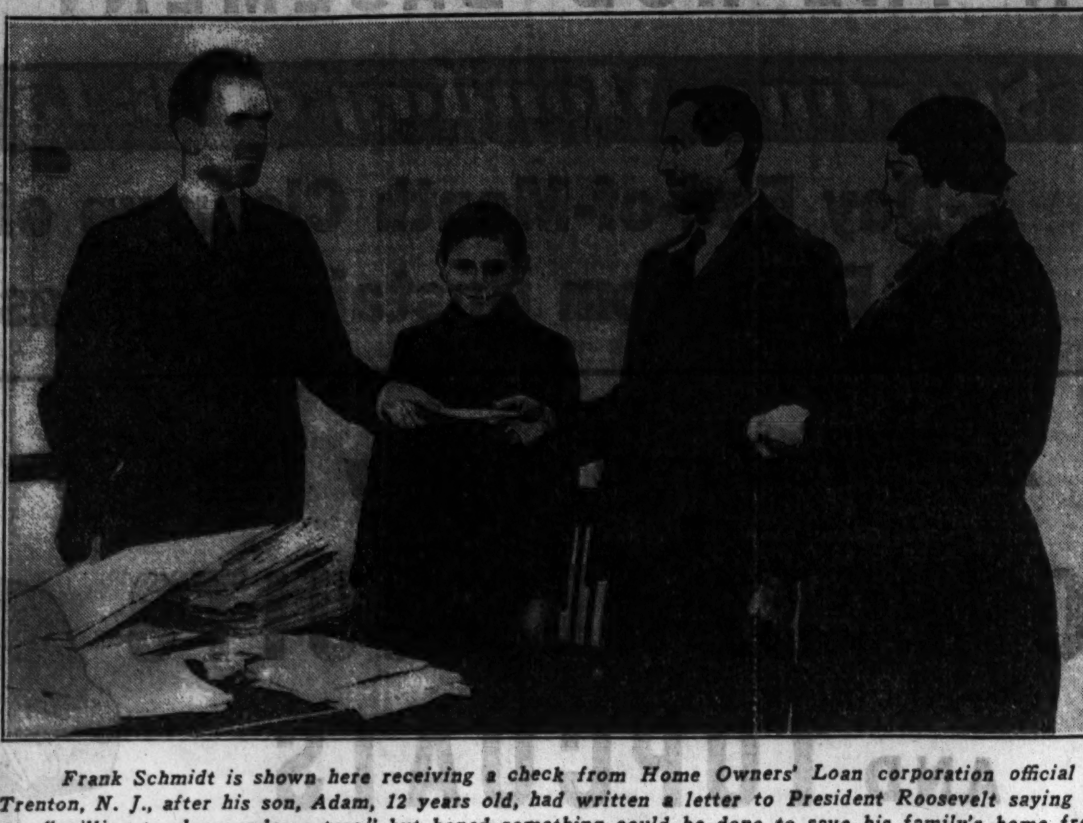
"Although it is possible that reduced world demand may raise prices, or that a monetary change will be made, the safe policy for any farmer or business concern is to plan for prices below pre-war, but to be on the alert for violent price fluctuations which are certain, for possible changes in the demand for gold, or for a monetary change.

Sees Drastic Fluctuations.

"If all the world returns to a gold basis, commodity prices in any country that maintains its pre-war currency may be expected to average somewhat less than pre-war and to decline until large new discoveries of gold are made. In any event, extremely violent price fluctuations are to be expected as drastic efforts are made by each country to get more than its pre-war share of the gold supply, and as erratic price relationships are readjusted."

Prof. Warren is 59 years old. He was born in Harvard Neb., took degrees from the University of Nebraska and Cornell university, and since 1905 has been teaching various phases of farm economics at Cornell, since 1920 as professor of agricultural economics and farm management. He is married and has six children.

Boy's Plea to President Saves Family's Home



Frank Schmidt is shown here receiving a check from Home Owners' Loan corporation official in Trenton, N. J., after his son, Adam, 12 years old, had written a letter to President Roosevelt saying he was "willing to sleep under a tree," but hoped something could be done to save his family's home from mortgage foreclosure. Adam and his mother are shown in the picture. [Acme Photo.]

RISE IN RETAIL FOOD PRICES HALTED, U. S. SURVEY DISCLOSES

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—The upward trend in retail food prices that started with the initiation of the recovery program has been halted and the two weeks ending Oct. 10 saw an actual downward curve of one-tenth of 1 per cent over the two weeks previous, according to reports released today by the bureau of labor statistics of the department of labor.

The index of prices on Oct. 10 stood at 107.3 for the week, which was still 19 per cent higher than the low point reached on April 15. The decrease as reported on Oct. 10 was the second since the upward swing started.

The decline was caused by a drop in the average price of 18 of the 42 items covered by the bureau's survey. Among the more important items carried downward were fresh vegetables, fresh fruits, fresh beef, leg of lamb, hens, lard, corn meal, and navy beans.

Potatoes showed the largest decrease during the two weeks period between Sept. 26 and Oct. 10. They went down 10 per cent.

While the above named commodities sank in price, white bread increased by more than 1 per cent.

JUDGE AROUSED BY NEW ARRESTS OF CAB DRIVERS

Municipal Judge Eugene J. Holland announced yesterday that he intends tomorrow to cite Police Commissioner Allman and Lieut. James J. Killackey of the vehicle bureau for contempt of court because of the arrest yesterday of drivers of the Eagle Taxi company who are operating without cab stand permits. Last week when cases of drivers arrested previously were continued to Oct. 31 the judge instructed Lieut. Killackey not to make any more arrests while the cases were pending.

Commissioner Allman ordered the new arrests yesterday after a meeting of the public vehicle license commission at which Julian C. Ryer, attorney for the cab company, refused to accede to a request of the commission that the company take its cabs off the streets. Commissioner Allman is chairman of the license commission. The commission knew of Judge Holland's instructions to Lieut. Killackey, but apparently believed that he had exceeded his authority.

"I warned Lieut. Killackey that I would hold him for contempt if he rearrested drivers on the same charge while their cases were pending," said Judge Holland. "I don't believe it is necessary for them to rearrest the drivers, and now that my instructions have been disregarded I don't intend to stand idly by and look on."

NAMED ILLINOIS POSTMASTER.

Wins $4,000 Suit Against Ethel Barrymore for Rent

New York, Oct. 28.—(AP)—A default judgment of $4,473.23, representing nearly one year's rent on an apartment at 128 East 36th street, was entered in the county clerk's office today against Ethel Barrymore, actress.

BATTLE LOOMS, ROOSEVELT VS. STEEL LEADERS

Bids on Steel Rails Stir Up Conflict.

companies, and then the joint letter he had sent to them in reply.

Charges Collusive Bidding.

"The facts that these letters bear a common date," Mr. Eastman said in his reply, "that they name an identical price for first quality rail, f. o. b. mill, and that this price is the odd figure of $37.75, point unmistakably to the conclusion that the letters were the result of consultation and collusion.

"In my letter to you of Oct. 3 I stated:

"'As you know, it was the understanding at the President's conference that base prices would be submitted, in response to my request, by the steel companies independently of each other and without collusion or consultation.'

"Clearly, what has been done is not in accord with this understanding. Moreover, there is nothing in the code of fair competition which made necessary such a deviation from the understanding. In confirmation of this statement, it is noted that the letter from the United States Steel corporation concludes with the following sentence:

"'If any of our competitors file a lower price than the above we will, of course, refile to meet their price.'

Calls Prices Noncompetitive.

"Because of the evident consultation of collusion in arriving at the new and uniform base price, it seems clear that these are non-competitive prices lacking the safeguard to the consumer which competition provides. Manifestly, also, the code was not intended to eliminate competition. On the contrary, it is by its own terms a 'code of fair competition.'

"In view of these circumstances and of the past history of steel—rail prices in this country and what is known about them, I am authorized by the President to say that the federal government is unwilling to lend money to railroad companies for the purchase of steel rails at the new base prices which have been filed, without some safeguard to the consumers and to the public interest to take the place of competition. This substitute safeguard is an examination by government accountants of the books and cost records of the steel companies.

"Under existing conditions and to avoid possible delay, the government is willing to lend the necessary funds without such an examination provided the base price, f. o. b. mill, for first quality steel rail [500 G. T. or over], is made not more than $35 per gross ton of 2,240 pounds, with other prices adjusted accordingly.

Demands New Base Prices.

"If the steel companies are unwilling to make this concession, then the government will lend the necessary funds only on condition that the steel companies shall file new base prices the same as those now on file, but with the added stipulation that if, after government accountants have had full and free opportunity to examine the books and cost records of the steel companies, the President shall find that reductions in these prices are necessary to make them fair, the reduced prices which he then names shall be the base prices to the same extent and from the same date as if they had been originally filed.

"In the meantime the government will advance funds to the railroad companies on the basis of a price of $35 per gross ton for first quality steel rail, f. o. b. mill, with other prices related in the ratio of the base prices now on file, and with the understanding that the government will later advance additional funds or receive refunds to accord to such other prices, not in excess of those now on file, as the President may find to be fair. In the absence of a full disclosure of the facts, it is impossible to define in advance and in the abstract what may be fair, and this must be left to the judgment of the President."

JOHNSON'S USED LINCOLN CAR GOES TO DEALER IN TRADE

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Hugh S. Johnson today made good on his promised personal boycott on Ford products by trading in the Lincoln limousine that had been at his disposal and riding to his office in another governmental machine of comparable quality and price.

It was said the government lost no money on the transaction, a Washington dealer having made the trade on even terms.

At the same time the national labor board, which had expected to hear some time today what reply the Ford company was making to the demands of striking employés at the Edgewater, N. J., Ford assembly plant, was informed that its representatives there could not establish whether the answer had been received.

The manner in which Ford handled the demands of the workers was regarded by officials here as a possible point of determining whether he was coming within the collective bargaining requirements of the automobile code or was actually now in violation of the compact and the industrial law.

FORD FIGHT CONTINUES

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—After battle lines had been drawn in Washington in the controversy over Henry Ford's refusal to sign the NRA automobile code, a willingness to let the public do the judging is the attitude manifest at the Dearborn headquarters. The disagreement today apparently was nearing the acute stage.

To Johnson's threat that he would turn the case over to Attorney General Cummings unless the Ford company complied with his request for wage and hour statistics, company spokesmen had replied that Brig. Gen. Johnson "before assuming the airs of a dictator, should fortify himself with evidence that Henry Ford has refused compliance with government requirements."

To the charge that Johnson has "attempted a grave injustice upon a law-abiding industry," a company official added:

"Failing to induce the American people to demean themselves by boycotting industry, he seems to have hopes of better success with the government. Naturally, we are willing to let him go as far as he can."

Says Ford Hasn't Bid.

This was in reference to a statement revealed Friday that government departments would exclude Ford from bidding for government business.

It again was pointed out at Dearborn today that "the Ford Motor company, has not made any government bids" and that the bid which has so greatly excited Mr. Johnson "was made by a Ford dealer in Washington and was something like $200,000 lower than the others."

It was explained at the Dearborn offices that this bid, although much lower than the others, was made on the basis of an estimate which the dealer had made from figures available to him. There was an added implication that this bid might have been lower still had the dealer drawn on figures available at Dearborn headquarters in preparing it.

To this phase of the controversy the comment of Ford officials was a reiteration of the charge that "Johnson now proposes to make the American taxpayer a higher price in order to give government business to a concern that pays lower wages than the Ford Motor company does."

PROCESSING TAX SOUGHT BY DIXIE ON FOREIGN OILS

Compete with Mississippi Products, It Is Claimed.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Jackson, Miss., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—A movement to boost the price of cottonseed for southern growers by placing a processing tax on cocoanut oil now admitted duty free from the Philippines and on importations of soybean and other vegetable oils is now being pressed in Mississippi.

A billion pounds of foreign oils and fats, imported annually, it is asserted, are in open competition with domestic vegetable oils, hog lard, and butter fat. It is estimated that that to the south is $70,000,000 a year, and to Mississippi $7,000,000.

The state department of agriculture here, under Commissioner J. C. Holton, is leading a campaign to get Washington to apply, under the agricultural adjustment act, a compensatory processing tax on these competing commodities from abroad.

Similarly there is agitation for a processing tax on substitutes for cotton as protection for the cotton textile industry, which is now going full tilt under NRA, but sees signs that untaxed competitive materials are cutting into the market since the cotton processing tax went into effect.

Better Buying Now.

Better times are perceptible here in Mississippi so the surface signs show. The state's sales tax this month has smashed all old records, an index to a revival of buying. Figures out today show October receipts 25 per cent greater than a year ago and almost 50 per cent greater than last month. State officials attribute it to increased wholesale and retail business.

For plowing up part of their cotton crop Mississippi raisers received about $10,000,000. About 200,000 farmers participated, and the money went largely to pay old debts. The acre yield of cotton was large. It is running an average of 207 pounds to the acre, as against 147 pounds last year and compared with a ten year average of 192 pounds.

Despite the plowing up of acreage at a compensation of ten million dollars the Mississippi cotton crop this year is forecast at 1,285,000 bales, an increase over the yield of 1,180,000 bales last year.

The experts figure that 484,000 bales of this year's crop are still in the hands of the grower. Of this about 350,000 bales are subject to the loan of 10 cents a pound, which became available from government sources this week. This, it is figured, will put seventeen million dollars into circulation soon.

Is a One Crop State.

Cotton authorities here regard the plow-up of cotton land and the reduction of acreage next year as a good thing in more ways than one. They think a million and a half acres could be taken out of cotton production in Mississippi, and that if this acreage were planted to food and feed it still would reach only about half way in meeting the usual annual deficit in food and feed production.

The two million population of the state is classified as 80 per cent rural. As between whites and Negroes it is almost evenly divided, standing 50.2 Negro. It has traditionally been a great one crop state, although it has campaigned for diversification. By taking part of the land out of cotton on a rental basis, paid for out of a processing tax, the theory is now that producers and renters may find more incentive for diversification and raising of garden truck, poultry, and other food stuffs for at least family use.

Many a plantation has disappeared down the alimentary canal of the Negro tenants, according to an old saw in the delta, for, in bad seasons, the cost of giving tenant families cornmeal and bacon during the winter months, added to low prices and the inroads of the boll weevil, left many a planter in the red.

Diversification Stimulated.

Agricultural extension experts think tenants may now go in more for garden truck and chickens on vacated cotton land and that eventually the effect may be to protect the landlord from loss by putting the tenant on a self-sustaining basis.

In dairying the last five years Mississippi has made a great advance. Corn, hay, small grains, and fruits have increased, and the experts hold that cotton reduction will mean stimulus for diversification. It is now the twelfth state in cheese and 26th in butterfats.

Cottonseed is still declining in price. The industry attributes it largely to foreign competition. The seed goes to the tenant farmer and helps him through the fall and winter. In 1929 cottonseed in Mississippi had a value of $27,000,000. Last year it was $6,000,000.

Its price on the farm is now $12 a ton. In 1909-'14 it was $22 a ton. A meeting in New Orleans of cotton interests is to consider proposals pending at Washington to reduce the effect of competition of substitute foreign oils, especially cocoanut oil, the product of low paid peon labor competing with American agriculture. Oleomargarine, synthetic lard, and vegetable shortenings, paints, varnishes, and soaps are a field in which imported oils and fats find a market yearly.

Owes U. S. $8,561

INA CLAIRE.

[Acme Photo.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Ina Claire, actress and former wife of John Gilbert, motion picture star, was found to owe $8,561 in income taxes for 1929, in a stipulation judgment today by the board of tax appeals.

She had appealed in 1932 under the name of Ina Claire Gilbert against an assessment of $15,681, contending the commissioner of internal revenue erroneously increased her taxable income by $60,808, as half of the salary of her husband for the period subsequent to their marriage May 9, 1929.

The actress claimed no more than $20,808 should be assessed against her income from Gilbert's salary, and protested the disallowance of Gilbert's claimed stock losses totaling $98,833.

Of that loss, she said, at least $20,808 should be credited to her and deducted from her taxable income.

Her petition set Gilbert's total income for 1929 at $197,500, of which the internal revenue bureau estimated, $121,077 was received after their marriage.

However, her petition said, his actual net receipts after marriage were $91,616, and she denied $50,000 paid the actor Nov. 4, 1929, was community income. Also, she claimed, he lost $98,833 on a marginal stock account which was disallowed as a deduction.

SENATOR LEWIS TO TOUR STATE AND BOOST NRA

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois is to embark next week on a speechmaking tour of his home state in behalf of the Roosevelt administration and its recovery policies.

The senator was to have opened his itinerary on Monday night, with a radio speech, but at the request of the President, and because of the agricultural emergency, he gave way to Labor Secretary Perkins and Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Rexford Guy Tugwell.

Senator Lewis announced today that Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, had accepted an invitation to address the annual dinner of the Illinois Manufacturers' association in Chicago in December.

It also was announced by the senator that Secretary of Commerce Roper has appointed Richard Spencer, a patent attorney of Chicago, to be first assistant commissioner of patents. The appointment was made upon Senator Lewis' suggestion.

U. S. RETAIL CODE TO CURB 'SALES,' ADVERTISING, TOO

Also Controls Handling of Contracts.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—(AP)—The recovery agency went on today towards its mass mobilization of industry by proposing a way for all trades to agree upon banishing unfair competitive practices.

Simultaneously, to get into operation Monday morning the retail code, its biggest single one, NRA issued a series of interpretations, reduced to simplest terms so that every storekeeper might get the requirements of the compact straight without delay.

Six Basic Proposals.

The code proposals to govern competition made at NRA today were for six basic principles worked out by a joint committee of the recovery unit and the department of commerce following a survey of the 1,000 proffered codes, of resolutions adopted by trade associations, of rules approved by the federal trade commission over 15 years, and of agreements for fair advertising and selling worked out by newspapers and better business bureaus.

The six practices singled out for banishment were: Inaccuracy in advertising and selling, attacks on competitors, price discrimination, commercial bribery, breach of contract or interference with those of others, coercion by blacklists and other devices.

Retail Code Interpreted.

The interpretations on the retail code were:

The code must be observed by all stores which do not engage "primarily" in selling food, milk, and tobacco, or those coming under separate codes: Filling stations, automobile agencies, lumber and material yards, and sellers of oil burners, ice, coal, jewelry, and sewing machines.

It does not apply to well segregated divisions of department stores such as restaurants, lunch fountains, barber shops.

The special committee on the fair practice provisions laid no claim to being able to cover needs of all industries under the six points enumerated, pointing out that a supplementary group of regulations could be developed in codes to regulate subjects such as return goods, piracy of design, hidden demonstrators, trading stamps, schemes of chance, and others.

Summary of Rules.

On the six general points a summary of its report said:

Inaccuracy—Under this heading are the restrictions against inaccurate advertising and other misrepresentations of commodities, credit terms, values, policies, and services. Also advertising and selling methods which tend to deceive or mislead the customer, usually referred to as "bait"; and misbranding.

The report points out that the committee recognized that the test of fallibility can be more satisfactorily administered with the scientific approach to accuracy than by the moral appeal to truth with its implied converse. All persons are liable to unintentional error and are appreciative for having the mistake brought to their attention for correction, but no one wants to be accused eiher justly or otherwise of dishonesty. These rules eliminate from business discipline any moral element and place the adherence to the principle of fair practice on a basis of factual proof.

Some Further Matters.

Attacking competitors — This heading embraces the practices aimed against competitors and their business, such as inaccurate reference thereto, claims of generally underselling all competitors, unjustified threats of legal proceedings, and, most important of all, selling below cost, which has recently been referred to as "cut-throat competition."

Price discrimination — Secret payments or allowances of any kind fall within this class, also any form of discriminatory rebate and consignment except on a bona fide order or in a form that is accountable.

Commercial bribery — Than which there is no greater evil, as it results in the betrayal of a trust, is covered by prohibiting the influencing or rewarding the action of an employé or agent without the knowledge of the employer or the principal, and the rendering of an inaccurate bill.

On Breach of Contract.

Breach of contract—It is considered in this bracket that the interference with another's contracts or the repudiation of one's own are equally reprehensible.

Coercion — Under this caption are the forced purchase of one article by the purchase of another and the discrimination known as a black list. The report concluded:

"American employers' promised reward from NRA for the hours-wages benefits recently given their employés is the immediate protection against the unfair competition of recalcitrants. Because of the complex overlapping of industries, protection against this 'cutthroat' minority is practically impossible without the adoption of uniform basic fair practice rules that will enable business to be effectively and economically policed, and insure that the consumers will receive the benefits of the new deal to which they are justly entitled."

FEDERAL BANK STICKS TO DATA ON TRADE DROP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—The federal reserve board today refused to stop its comments on business conditions as its statistics show them, despite the attempt made yesterday of Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, industrial czar, to quash an unfavorable report by the board.

Experts employed by the reserve board declared today Gen. Johnson in attempting to hush or deny the report by the board had raised the question of whether newspapers should continue to have the statistical findings of government agencies or only the general's own point of view.

The board itself, however, took the position that Gen. Johnson's blast of yesterday had done nothing to cause a reversal in the usual practices. If index numbers show declines the fact will be given to the public, the board declared through members of its secretariat.

Johnson's wrath was provoked by a statement in which the board declared that the business decline had been "marked" in those industries which recently went under codes or processing taxes. He denied the statement, declared that he had evidence of a general upswing, and extracted a plea of inadvertence from one of the board's experts.

Research assistants of the board stuck to their guns today, however, showing on their charts for various industries how activity had dropped off with the coming of a code or processing tax.

They explained the drop by saying that orders were rushed through in advance of requirements before the codes went into effect because increased production costs under the codes were feared. The result has been that orders are now being met out of accumulated inventories.

Indo-China Ruler Recovers from Bite of Mad Dog

PARIS, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Emperor Bao Dai of Annam, French Indo-China, now completely recovered from treatment at the local Pasteur institute, was revealed today to have been bitten by a pet fox terrier which was found to be mad. Newspapers from Indo-China, just arrived in Paris, divulged the nature of the emperor's affliction.

CHARGES ICKES PLAYS POLITICS ON CANAL PLANS

Elmore Calls Sale to U. S. Only Fair Scheme.

The attitude of Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes, a Chicagoan, in openly opposing the sale of the main drainage and Sag canals to the federal government to finance the $120,000,000 sewage treatment program of the Chicago sanitary district drew fire from local officials yesterday. The most outspoken was Howard W. Elmore, lone Republican trustee of the district, who charged that Ickes was attempting to build up a political machine in Chicago and the middle west.

In his public utterances and interviews recently Ickes has aligned himself against the plan of selling the channels to Uncle Sam for $100,000,000. The funds would be used to complete the sewage disposal program made necessary by the mandate of the United States Supreme court to reduce the diversion from Lake Michigan to 1,500 cubic feet per second by the end of 1938.

Insists on Taking Over Projects.

Instead the PWA chief has insisted that his terms be met if the federal government is to finance the sewage construction. Under the Ickes mandate the sanitary district would convey the projects to the federal government and the public works administration would carry on the program. After a period of years in which the district paid an annual rental to the government the plants would be reconveyed to the district.

"I am astonished at Mr. Ickes' attitude," asserted Trustee Elmore. "He should realize that this would mean an additional tax burden.

Dragged Into Politics, He Says.

"I wonder if it isn't possible that Mr. Ickes contemplates building up his own political structure in Chicago along with the building of the sewage disposal plants. The sale of the canals, which is the only fair solution to the sewage problem, should not be a political issue, but Mr. Ickes is making it one. I'm ready to debate with him."

There are two ways of taking the money out of the federal treasury, the front door and the back door, Trustee Elmore declared. He contended that the front door method—the canal sale—was the better, inasmuch as the tax payers of the district have paid $83,000,000 for the channels, which he estimated, it would take $140,000,000 to replace.

The question of whether the federal government will purchase the property, Elmore asserted, is up to congress and outside the province of the public works administration.

Stresses Difference in Functions.

Elmore emphasized the point that it is the sanitary district's business to treat sewage and the federal government's to run waterways. It has been proposed to make the Sag channel the terminus of the lakes to gulf waterway.

"The taxpayers paid for these canals," said Elmore, "and any plans advanced thus far to finance the sewage treatment projects will mean an increase in the bonded indebtedness of the district or, in other words, an additional burden on the taxpayers."

A pending application for a loan of $120,000,000 from the federal "easy money" treasury has been rendered almost futile, he pointed out, because the 25 per cent reduction in the valuation on Cook county real estate for 1932 has correspondingly cut the district's bonding power. The district, under the law, can issue bonds up to 5 per cent of the assessed valuation.

The total valuation of the property within the district for 1931 was $3,663,672,580, which would allow a total bonded debt of $183,083,626. The sanitary district, however, has already used up $143,144,994 in bonds and had left an unexercised bonding power of $39,838,632 under the old valuation.

The 25 per cent cut in real estate has reduced the valuation on all property in the district to $3,036,094,520. The total of bonds which may be issued has been reduced to $151,804,726. Subtracting the bonded debt from this amount leaves the sanitary district with authority to issue $8,659,732 worth of bonds.

Elmore pointed out that nearly all of the district's bonding power, as reflected by the cut in valuations, will have to be used for the $8,000,000 government loan to finance construction already started and halted when the district ran out of funds in February of 1932. Ickes has approved this smaller loan and attorneys of the public works administration will confer on the details of turning over the money with the district officials this week.

More Millions Easy Money Is Allotted by Government

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Back from his trip to Chicago, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes today started carving up the remainder of his 3 billion 300 million dollar easy money turkey, slicing off $82,305 for Illinois and $518,235 for all of Chicagoland.

Altogether the helpings which he served out to the country today aggregated almost $8,830,000. Today's white meat went to Colorado, one of the leanest tax sources in the country, where Denver drew three and a half millions for its water works.

Five Per Cent of Total.

The Chicagoland allotment of slightly over a half million dollars made up only 5 per cent of the total passed around by Ickes today, although Illinois and her four sister states are one of the fattest sources of federal income.

Wisconsin again led the Chicagoland states, receiving $342,630. Illinois was given $82,305, Iowa $78,300, and Indiana $15,000.

Two of the three grants in Illinois today were to the state. Both of them were unconditional gifts of easy money, $17,500 to aid in building a kitchen for the state hospital at Anna and $14,445 for construction at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Children's home at Normal.

Aid for Lena School.

The other Illinois grant was to the community of Lena, where Ickes allowed a final allotment of $50,360 for an addition to a school building. The allocation had previously been announced as $70,000, but Ickes drew back $19,640 when he discovered the town had unexpended balances with which to work.

The public works administration estimated that the three easy money projects in Illinois approved today would give work to 166 men.

The allotments in other Chicagoland states are: Tippecanoe county, Indiana, $15,000; Pembine, Wis., $35,000; Sheboygan, Wis., $307,630; Delhi, Ia., $4,500; Muscatine county, Iowa, $10,900; Ottumwa, Ia., $2,000; Muscatine, Ia., $4,800; West Union, Ia., $3,300; Hudson, Ia., $500; Laurens, Ia., $2,100; Johnson county, Iowa, $31,000; Des Moines, Ia., $19,200.

SEEKS 45 MILLION MORE FEDERAL FUNDS FOR CHANNEL PROJECT

Rock Island, Ill., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Although allotments of funds for the nine foot channel locks and dams in the Rock Island district of the upper Mississippi river total only $10,060,000 to date, Maj. R. A. Wheeler, Rock Island district United States engineer, announced today his staff is rushing plans calling for completion of the nine foot program in this district within two years after an additional 45 million dollars is provided by the government. Estimates on the various projects involved have been furnished the divisional engineer office at St. Louis, Mo., and will be forwarded to Washington, D. C., he said. Items of the program for which plans are being rushed include dams to accompany the eight locks already authorized in the district, construction of three additional locks and dams, enlargement of the Keokuk, Ia., lock, diversion of the Henderson river and shore protection levees throughout the district.

FORM HOUSING CORPORATION TO REMOVE SLUMS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—(AP)—The federal government today formed a housing corporation to provide low cost dwellings and to clear away slums in cities where such work otherwise would not be undertaken.

The Public Works Emergency Housing corporation, owned entirely by the federal government, was incorporated under the laws of Delaware.

The articles of incorporation, as approved by Secretary Ickes, provide that it may "construct, reconstruct, alter and repair" low cost housing or slum clearance projects, including houses, homes, and structures "of every nature and kind."

If unable to acquire land by private contract, the corporation will have the right of eminent domain, which means that as a governmental agency it may force owners to sell its property.

NRA BOARD ACTS TO HALT LAUNDRY PRICE CUT WAR

Demands Associations Stop Code Violations.

A price cutting war being waged in the laundry business is threatening to demoralize that industry and nullify the beneficial effects of the recovery program here, it was disclosed yesterday when the NRA compliance board announced it had broadened the scope of its duties to assume jurisdiction of the controversy.

Though the price slashing was begun by laundries not operating under the Blue Eagle, several concerns flying the NRA emblem have deserted the fold, for the time being at least, to fight back. They entered the war, it was explained, to retaliate with still lower prices and endeavor to drive out of business the "mavericks" who attempted to take advantage of the industry's coöperation with recovery plans.

Seek to Prevent Spread.

When the matter was brought to the attention of compliance board officials, they determined to take a hand in the affair before it grew to the disastrous dimensions attained by similar strife in the cleaning and dyeing industry. It was also indicated that if the board could bring harmony to this group it would strengthen the board's prestige and avert the deleterious effect on the entire recovery program which is certain to follow if Blue Eaglers continue in such conflict.

Prof. Andrew A. Bruce of Northwestern university, chairman of the compliance board, explained the controversy as it had been presented to his group.

"The so-called power laundry factories in Chicago have, within recent weeks, entered upon a price cutting war," he said. "The features are that certain 'leaders' are put out by some laundries for the purpose of cutting into the business of their competitors.

Charge Deception in Ads.

"Under this system shirts are advertised as being laundered for 6 cents each when, it is charged, cost of such work is substantially above that. It is further charged that misleading advertisements are put out by certain laundries, particularly to the effect that laundry work is performed at a low price when the advertised price is not the total charge made to the customer.

"Complaint was made to the compliance board by an association representing about 200 of these power laundries that improper practices were being carried on by a small number of laundries and that as a result the entire laundry industry in Chicago was being demoralized. Evidence showed other price cutting.

Find Violations of Code.

"After a full hearing, at which most of the laundries in Chicago were represented, the board announced these actions were contrary to the President's agreement and declared that in its opinion price cutting would result in disaster to the laundries attempting to conduct their business on a fair price basis.

"We also held that the tactics were a clear violation of the spirit of section 8 of the President's agreement and would subject the concerns guilty of the practics to the penalties subscribed. The laundry representatives are to take up the matter in their own associations and reappear before the board next Thursday."

PICKET IS SLAIN; FARMER HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

Brothers of Accused Man Also Arrested.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Frank McCorison, 31, Madison, pleaded not guilty in Superior court here today to a charge of first degree murder in connection with the fatal shooting last night of Gunder Felland, 60, prominent Dane county farmer and farm strike picket.

McCorison was held in the county jail without bond pending a preliminary hearing Wednesday. He was identified by four of about 30 pickets, who witnessed the shooting, as the driver of a sedan who stepped from the running board, swore at the pickets and fired one shot into their midst.

Jack McCorison, 24, Marshfield, brother of the prisoner accused of murder and a passenger in the sedan, was held in the county jail without charge.

Second Brother Arrested.

Harvey McCorison, 26, Marshfield, and brother of the other two, was charged with assault to do great bodily harm and was held under bond of $2,500 pending a hearing Wednesday. He pleaded not guilty. Pickets identified him as the driver of a food produce truck which followed the sedan.

The charge against Harvey McCorison grew out of a complaint filed by O. M. Frydenlund, town of Burke farmer, who said the truck driver struck him with his fist during an argument over the headlight broken by pickets with clubs they waved over the roadway at the intersection of the Sun Prairie and Portage roads, five miles east of Madison, in an attempt to halt farm products on their way to Madison.

Although pickets were confused and were unable to tell definitely last night whether the shot was fired by the truck driver or sedan driver, they had no difficulty today identifying Frank McCorison as the person who shot Felland.

Picket Forces Increased.

The killing of Felland served to strengthen farm strike picket forces on all highways leading into Madison. Sheriff's deputies reported that in many places it appeared the pickets had doubled in number. The shooting was the chief topic of conversation among pickets, who huddled in the snow around fires awaiting the approach of food trucks.

A half dozen persons in various parts of the state were injured by strike pickets, according to reports reaching the capitol. One of the injured is Theodore Webber, 29, Marshfield, who was reported to be near death in a hospital there as a result of a clubbing by pickets.

The attitude of the state administration today still was that local enforcement agencies could handle the situation and suppress violence. Attachés of the executive office said that thus far there have been no requests for the state militia to maintain order.

Hundreds of special deputies have been hired by sheriffs in all counties where disturbances have occurred and pickets are numerous. As in the last strike, many of the deputies are members of the National Guard. This is not a coincidence.

ATTACKS FARM LOAN PLAN

BY PAUL POTTER.

Characterizing the government's wholesale loaning of money to farmers on farm products as "an all day sucker," John A. Simpson, Oklahoma farm leader and president of the Farmers' union, declared here yesterday that farmers of the nation are thoroughly aroused over the boosting of retail prices while farm commodity prices are kept far below the cost of producing farm products.

Simpson was en route to Ohio yesterday from Des Moines, Ia., where he arranged with Milo Reno, head of the Farm Holiday association, for a conference between the Holiday and farm union leaders in Des Moines today. A program of action to aid agriculture is to be drafted for presentation to the governors of ten agricultural states who will meet in Des Moines tomorrow upon invitation of Gov. Clyde Herring of Iowa.

What the farmers need, he asserted, is a price scale for things they produce which will enable them to start reducing their debts and to buy things the city people produce.

Atacks Pig Selling.

Simpson charged that farmers actually received less than half of the $31,000,000 which the farm adjustment administraion paid out to kill off little pigs and piggy sows. From the prices announced for farmers was deducted transportation, feed, commissions, and other expenses that took more than half the amount the taxpayers paid out, he said.

"A 12 year old farm boy could have seen the fallacy of that program," Simpson said. "The same can be said for the plowing under of cotton at $2 an acre after the government had loaned farmers the money to plant and fertilize the crop. These are only all day suckers the administration is handing out to keep farmers from a realization that the farm adjustment program is not working."

STATE LEGISLATURE TO RESUME BATTLE OVER RELIEF BONDS

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 28.—(AP)—The $30,000,000 bond issue program for relief is expected to dwarf all other matters when the general assembly reconvenes next week.

The relief program reached an impasse in the house of representatives this week after the administration's forces failed by 24 votes to rally enough support for the bond issue bill, already approved by the senate.

Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, will renew the federal government's demand that the state raise relief funds in some manner in an address to the legislature Tuesday.

Speaker Arthur Roe also is expected to rule early in the week on the question of whether the Lantz bills, supported by the agricultural bloc as the way to provide relief, are within the call of the special session.

H. F. M'CORMICK ACTS TO CONTEST HEART BALM SUIT

Harold F. McCormick, Chicago capitalist, yesterday took the first step to defend himself in the $1,500,000 breach of promise suit instituted against him by Mrs. Rhoda Tanner Doubleday, New York divorcée. His appearance in the case was filed in the Circuit court by his attorneys, the law firm of Wilson & McIlvaine.

The action set at rest rumors that the case would not go to trial because Mr. McCormick was considering a settlement. It is to be followed by a formal answer to the suit, denying the allegations of Mrs. Doubleday's bill, which must be filed by Nov. 20.

Salesmen Threaten to Arm Against Wisconsin Pickets

Wausau, Wis., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Nine traveling men, representing a local manufacturing company, have signed a statement addressed to Gov. A. G. Schmedeman and Marathon county authorities advising them they have armed themselves for protection of their constitutional rights while driving over Wisconsin highways. The letter charges their cars have been stopped on many occasions by striking farm pickets who dumped the contents of their grips onto the highways.

NEW DELAY ADDS TO CHICAGO MILK CODE CONFUSION

Another Week Before It Can Be Enforced.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—The farm administration's milk code enforcement machinery today appeared completely bogged in red tape and its failure to function speedily brought new complications into Chicago's muddled milk problem.

Despite the urgent importunings for immediate and drastic enforcement of the milk code which are being voiced by distributors and farmers signatory to the Chicago pact, new delays in concluding the first phase of enforcement today appeared certain.

Delay Brings Protests.

At least another week, it was said, will be required to complete the hearing on the plea of roadside stand operators for a price differential for cash and carry milk. Then, under regular enforcement procedure, it will be necessary for the AAA enforcement section to take action individually against each of the 115 independent wayside dealers cited by the government for underselling code prices.

The prospective week of delay brought vigorous protests from Don N. Geyer, secretary of the Pure Milk association, Farmers Coöperative, and from spokesmen for the large Chicago dairies that have signed the code.

Kelly Fight Price Boost.

Further complicating the situation is the proposed amendment to the code providing for a new series of retail price increases under which milk costs would be raised from 10 to 11 cents a quart. The farmers, who are to receive the 1 cent increase, have already signed the amendment through the Pure Milk association and are clamoring for its approval. The large Chicago distributors are reported likewise to be ready to sign the amendment, but are withholding their final approval until the government goes ahead with drastic enforcement of the code now in force.

At the same time Mayor Edward J. Kelly and the city council milk committee, headed by Ald. David Sutton [8th], are vigorously opposing any price increases in the Chicago milk market until the entire distributive system has been thoroughly aired. Farm Administrator George N. Peek today had not yet fixed the date of the milk investigation.

MOTORCYCLE RIDER KILLED.

Mount Olive, Ill., Oct. 28.—[U. P.]—Orval Boggio, 22, was killed and John Etter Jr., 25, seriously injured near here last night when a motorcycle on which they were riding crashed into an automobile on a state highway.

DEAFENED may now HEAR thru their bones

Here at last is science's greatest gift to the deafened . . . SUPER-SONOTONE.

This super-power hearing-aid does not function through the outer ear. Instead it conveys all sounds through the bones of the head, directly to the inner hearing organs.

NO EARPIECE
NO STATIC . NO STRAIN

SUPER-SONOTONE requires neither earpiece nor head band. It's small sound-conveying oscillator lies comfortably, like a flat disc, behind the ear. One can hardly see it. Yet its entire surface is so sensitive that you can hear without static, physical effort or strain on your nervous system.

FREE TEST!

Regardless of the apparent hopelessness of your hearing; no matter what type of aid you now use, don't fail to investigate this newest super-power SONOTONE. Come at once for a free test. If you cannot call, write for a free copy of the new booklet, "Science's Newest Hearing Technique", or phone State 7007.

[SEND 10c FOR SONOMETER. It will test your bone conduction. If it causes a gong to ring inside your head then be assured you can hear anything through your bones. So send 10c now (to cover postage, packing, etc.) for Sonometer and full instructions.]

BUSINESS GROUP TELLS SUPPORT FOR ROOSEVELT

Claims President Used Its Proposals.

New York, Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Of all the numerous committees, bureaus, leagues, and other amalgamations of public spirited citizenry out to aid and abet the government's recovery program with a little timely advice none has been busier here of late than an organization here in New York calling itself the committee for the nation.

The committee claiming a membership of 1,400, chiefly "executives of big corporations" scattered throughout the country is for inflation with a big "I." It wants the value of the dollar cut exactly in half and is very straightforward in saying it will be satisfied with nothing less.

For Fixed Gold Price.

It wants the price of gold fixed at $41.34 an ounce or just double the values that prevailed before the "new deal" order of things came into being. It wants a "managed" currency with a board to do the managing, a still further "readjustment" of commodity prices and various other reforms coming under the head of inflation—and more of it.

For months this "committee" has been sending out tons of printed propaganda from its headquarters at No. 205 East Forty-second street, bombarding members of congress with telegrams and conducting an "educational campaign" by radio.

Besides the newspapers of the country it has a mailing list running into the thousands and scattered throughout the land.

Lavish with Releases.

Its "releases" are sent out by the ton. Its speakers have discoursed over 300 radio stations. Its headquarters' staff obviously is proud of the fact that leading members of the committee have had the ear of persons "close to President Roosevelt" in the organization's endeavors.

A recent prospectus for example set forth these "achievements" of the organization in the busy nine months or so that have elapsed since it came into being:

"In February, 1933, the committee for the nation recommended embargo of gold exports and suspension of specie payments as prerequisite to restoration of the American price level. These two steps became accomplished facts early in March.

"April 6 the committee pointed out that the effect experienced in other countries of suspending specie payments could not be realized in the United States so long as the government continued to peg the dollar in international exchange. April 19 the dollar was cut loose from gold.

For Free Gold Market.

"May 18 the committee made the establishment of a free gold market in New York one of its objectives as a means to increase the price of gold and raise commodity prices. Aug. 29 free exportation of newly-mined American gold was permitted.

"Through May and June the committee vigorously opposed currency stabilization at the world economic conference. July 3 the President rejected stabilization.

"In June the committee took to the country the issue of frozen bank deposits. By September a change in government policy was ordered."

Avoids Word "Inflation."

Of course, the committee does not call its program by the bald term of "inflation." A reporter for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE talked for more than an hour with two responsible representatives of the organization at its headquarters today without once being able to pin them down to the use of that term.

Direct inquiries on the point were met with "it all depends on what you mean by 'inflation.'"

Requests for permission to quote were invariably referred to some page or paragraph of the committee's exhaustive literature.

The committee list includes:

CHICAGO AND VICINITY—Lessing J. Rosenwald, chairman, and R. E. Wood, president, Sears, Roebuck & Co.; Vincent Bendix, president, Bendix Aviation corporation; Philip K. Wrigley, president, William Wrigley Jr. corporation; E. L. Cord, president, Cord corporation; John W. Kiser, chairman, Phœnix Manufacturing company; Henry Pope Sr., president, Bear Brand Hosiery company; William A. Wirt, banker, Gary.

NEW YORK and other eastern cities—J. H. Rand Jr, president of Remington Rand, Inc., Buffalo; Frederic H. Frazier, chairman, General Baking company; E. L. Norton, chairman, Freeport Texas corporation, New York, N. Y.; Howard E. Coffin, chairman, Southeastern Cotton, Inc., New York, N. Y.; E. I. McClintock, Bayer company; C. T. Oklahomans Plan Protest to President Over Ickes' Plan

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Anger stirred some members of the Oklahoma congressional delegation today because of a statement attributed to Secretary Ickes that the drought stricken area of the state should be turned back to the public domain.

Senator Elmer Thomas [Dem., Okla.] said the entire delegation would go to President Roosevelt next week for an explanation.

Representative E. W. Marland [Dem., Okla.] said Ickes made the statement in telling him there was no hope for administration approval of any of the dam projects in the area.

Marland Quotes Ickes.

Marland quoted Ickes as saying the government contemplated moving 40,000 persons from the area, perhaps to some point along the All-American canal in California.

"It's preposterous," he added to newspaper men, pointing out families had lived there and made their living for decades and that the drought was only during the last two years.

Meanwhile Representative Jed Johnson [Dem., Okla.] said he took the matter up with President Roosevelt today.

The President, he said, assured him of his esteem for Oklahoma and added he was certain Ickes had made no such remark with serious intentions.

Told later, however, of Ickes' reported statement to Marland, Johnson agreed the delegation should go to the President.

Johnson said: "We'll protest vigorously to the President. We'll see Ickes about it, too, and give him a chance to tell us that."

"It's difficult for me to believe a man would seriously make such a statement. It seems the gentleman is feeling his oats since he came from Chicago to Washington, and, regardless of what Mr. Ickes thinks of Oklahomans, they compare very favorably with his Chicago machine gunners."

Thomas said: "The delegation will see the President about this matter. We will try to learn whether turning land back to the public domain is part of his policy."

Will Call Out Oklahoma Troops.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Oklahoma's entire National Guard will be called out by Gov. William H. [Alfalfa Bill] Murray if Secretary Ickes attempts to move Oklahomans from the drought stricken northwestern section of the state, the governor said tonight.

"As long as 5,000 National Guards can maintain quarters in Oklahoma, they won't move one damn man out of this state," the governor declared emphatically.

Boy with Scarlet Fever Tires of Hospital, Flees

Denver, Colo., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Paul Rush, 8, didn't like hospital food, so he ran away at 3 a. m. today.

Patrolmen A. E. McCausland and G. W. Countrymen found the youngster walking along a street and took him home.

The officers spent the morning fumigating their motor car.

KELLY HOPEFUL OF RFC AID IN PAYING TEACHERS

Leaves Washington After Seeing Roosevelt.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Mayor Kelly of Chicago left Washington today considerably heartened in his efforts to obtain federal aid in paying school teachers of his home city.

While the mayor had no definite commitments, he did obtain an expression of support from President Roosevelt, and received also the sympathetic ear of Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Accompanied in his visits to the White House and the RFC by United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, Mayor Kelly delivered a plea that under the new planning, wherein the RFC is inviting itself into partnership with banks, the RFC might undertake to aid in obtaining funds for the Chicago school board.

Calls on Jones Next.

The mayor, first gaining the assurance of President Roosevelt that he would support any feasible and legal proposal to extend federal credit for the payment of the teachers' back salaries, then journeyed with Senator Lewis to the office of Mr. Jones.

The RFC chairman listened as the mayor described his proposal that a private banking or mortgage corporation be organized to purchase $40,000,000 of school board bonds, obtaining a loan from the RFC for the purpose.

Previously the RFC has held that it could not purchase the bonds, and has given scant consideration to the proposal that a company, which in effect would be "a dummy" corporation, be formed to obtain a federal loan for the purpose of buying the bonds.

Bank Stock Buying Cited.

Senator Lewis pointed out, however, that with the RFC now purchasing preferred stock in many banks, including the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company, it might use its good offices in inducing various banks to purchase the school bonds.

Mayor Kelly declared he would return to Chicago and take up anew his efforts to dispose of the bonds through the banks or a new corporation. The latter course seems more feasible now than it did formerly, because Chairman Jones and the President have openly advocated the formation of mortgage loan corporations, which with RFC loans will take frozen assets off the hands of banks, and will also make proper loans to industries.

For some time before the President's proposal in this regard was made, the RFC had made large loans to various newly formed mortgage companies in Mr. Jones' home city of Houston, Tex., and in other cities of Texas as well.

COST $1,100,000, BUT VOTE MACHINES WON'T BE USED; FEAR FRAUD

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 28.—(AP)—An investigating committee headed by State Senator Frank J. Harris decided today that Allegheny county's $1,100,000 worth of voting machines should not be used in the November election because of fraud possibilities.

A. B. Holcomb, a witness, demonstrated that by using a straight party lever forcefully a voter can throw the interior mechanism of the machines out of alignmment so that henceforth it would be easy to vote twice for several candidates.

The county bought 1,100 machines in 1931 from the Poole Engineering and Manufacturing company of Baltimore, which now is in bankruptcy.

NEW MILITARY REVOLT FLARES IN SOUTH BRAZIL

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 28.—Revolt in Sao Paulo and other southern Brazilian states has been delayed until early November to give President Vargas an opportunity to choose whether to accept a bloodless coup d'etat or to plunge the country into a civil war, according to private advices reaching here today from high military sources in Sao Paulo who are engaged in preparing for a revolution.

It is planned to make a show of effective military force sufficient to justify Vargas' stepping out of the provisional presidency, which he has held for two years without indicating any definite date for the reëstablishment of a constitutional régime. If he does not step out the military leaders are ready to put a well prepared revolutionary organization into motion.

President Vargas was inaugurated in November, 1931, as chief of a revolutionary movement whose avowed purpose was to eliminate Sao Paulo from its predominating position in the federal administration. Military occupation of Sao Paulo was the cornerstone of Vargas' ability to consolidate his position and remain in power. It has not been entirely successful. Although Vargas has succeeded in putting down several Sao Paulo revolts, he has had to agree in each case to take no reprisals against the leaders and has had the federal treasury recognize the state's revolutionary fiat money, which means that the federal government has paid the expense of the state's revolts.

A Policeman and a Bishop

Henry Ford
Dearborn, Mich.

On a downtown corner the traffic policeman stepped over to the curb where a Ford V-8 was standing.

"That's the car that makes the boys down at the Police Garage get up early mornings," he said.

"How is that?"

"Well, you see we have two kinds of scout cars and flyers, and the boys hustle down early to get the Fords. If you're not there first you must take out the other make of car."

"But why do they all want the Ford?"

"Safer. Easier to handle. Takes the corners better. A car with Ford springs doesn't lean over or tip on a curve or a quick turn. A police flyer has to be a safe car."

It was pleasant to find a layman placing his finger on this exclusive feature of the Ford car, namely, the Ford transverse springs. They are used in our car for the very purpose he described, to perform their triple function of providing comfort, stability and safety.

The Bishop came down from the Northwest to Michigan and eventually arrived—as every Detroit visitor does—at Dearborn.

"I thought we had pretty nearly all the Ford cars in the world up where I came from," said he, "but I can scarcely see anything else around Detroit."

The Bishop is not the first to say that, and what he observed has a meaning.

People in this Detroit area know cars in a different and more penetrating way than perhaps is possible elsewhere. This is the acknowledged automobile producing center of the world. Nearly ninety per cent of all cars produced in the United States are made within a radius of 100 miles around Detroit.

Hundreds of thousands of workmen moving from shop to shop know the methods used on each make of car, and by word of mouth they spread complete first-hand information of manufacturing methods among the people. Suppliers also know which manufacturers insist on first quality of materials and workmanship. This information also leaks out.

That is, the people hereabouts KNOW THEIR CARS. And they buy nearly twice as many Fords in Wayne County, the central area of automobile manufacture, as any other make. We are naturally a little proud of that fact.

But, then, we are never doubtful of the result when the decision is in the hand of a buyer who knows.

WHY . . the Great OLSON RUG COMPANY Is Working Day and Night

PRESENT DOLLAR BUYS TWICE AS MUCH RUG VALUE AS IN 1926 BUT NOT FOR LONG!

A Plain Statement of Interest to Consumers

By Walter E. Olson, President Olson Rug Company

From the evidence gathering on every hand there is no doubt but what the President's great Recovery Program is taking firm root. It requires no expert economist to see the light or understand the activities of his administration up to date. Briefly it stands on these three principles:

First—the NRA, which raised wages, shortened hours, put more people to work, more dollars in pay envelopes and more pay envelopes. It has provided the buying power upon which the wheels of industry again are beginning to turn.

Secondly—the "Buy Now" campaign, the stage we are now in, and the stage in which the public must buy to keep pace with industrial gains. For unless we do buy and do our part, Industry cannot hope to maintain the higher wages and greater employment for which it is so gallantly striving.

Thirdly—Devaluation or inflation of the dollar. Less than two weeks ago the President emphatically stated that he hoped to bring all prices back to 1926 levels. The farmer will get more for his wheat; the sheep grower for his wool; the miner more for his metal, or coal; the trapper more for his furs, so that all may survive and have money to spend. As a result it is only logical to assume that the cost of all merchandise will go up because of higher cost of their basic commodities. Prices may not rise to 1926 levels for finished products because manufacturing methods have improved but rise they will. We cannot doubt that fact if we are to believe in our President.

To YOU—NOW—this is the important point: The President has made it not only a patriotic duty but sound economy and good sense to buy now. If you need and can buy anything, buy it—for the returning 1926 dollar won't buy nearly as much.

We, as manufacturers, are following the President's "Buy Now" advice and have bought wools, yarns, dyes and other essentials. We know, in many quarters, merchandise has already gone up.

However, you can buy rugs at our factory showroom at the factory-to-you price, receiving not only the benefit of low cost but also eliminating the usual costly overhead and sales expense. Be patriotic and buy now—it will pay you for your dollar may not go one-half as far a few months hence.

WHAT'S NEW AND SMART IN RUG PATTERNS

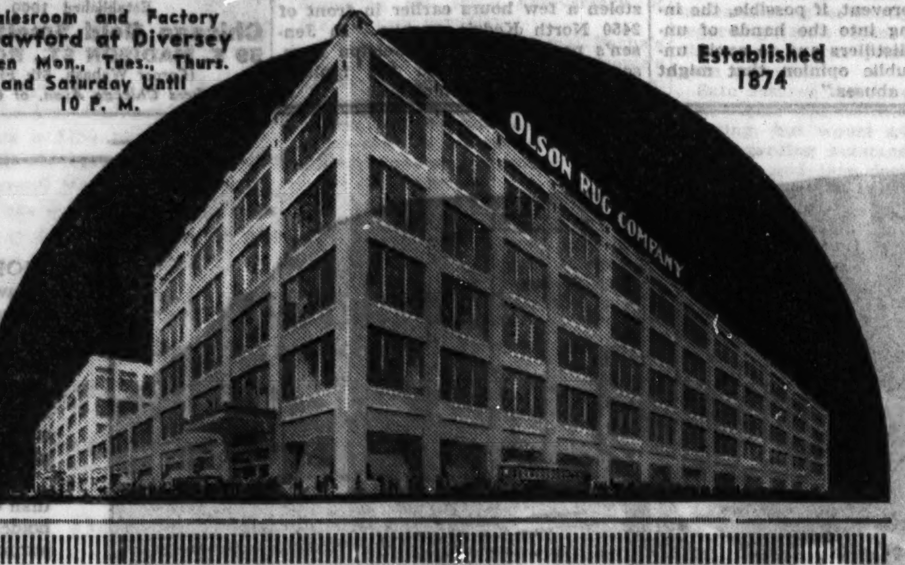
The newest trends in floor coverings indicate a refreshing improvement in the matter of color harmonies. Among the patterned rugs the lighter backgrounds with delicately drawn figures in softly blended shades are receiving especial attention. More and more white, especially in the off-white or oyster tones, is being introduced in the new rug designs. When darker grounds are chosen the pattern elements are best when small in scale and not too vigorous in effect.

Oriental Patterns Much Favored

The romantic designs of the Orient in soft, lustrous old-world colors are always wise selections, especially for homes decorated in th 18th century or Early English manner. Modern interpretations of fine Sarouk, Kirman, Keshan or Tabriz patterns are especially in favor; and Chinese motifs are ideal for rooms furnished in the spirit of Chippendale.

Broadloom Carpets Are a Smart Vogue

Plain carpets of the broadloom type are having a very important vogue. And the colorings are becoming more and more interesting (a vast improvement over the era of dismal taupe!) Warmer, richer tones are now employed. Where a dark background is desired there are fine broadlooms in eggplant, tete de negre, prune, burgundy, henna or mahogany shades. And for more delicate color schemes you may select exquisitely soft shades such as sage greens, ashes of roses, warm beige or copper tones and delphinium blue.



Salesroom and Factory
Crawford at Diversey
Open Mon., Tues., Thurs. and Saturday Until 10 P. M.

Established 1874

When you buy a fine American Oriental or any rugs or carpets in the usual way you pay many costs and profits to wholesalers, jobbers, and retailers. Salesmen must be employed to call on the trade. Transportation charges and warehouse storage fees go into the price you pay. Retailers' overhead and sales cost must be considered. High store rents are added, and finally, a reasonable profit for each. And all these charges are included in the price you pay when you buy a rug elsewhere.

Higher price doesn't always indicate better quality or more authentic beauty. Instead, it may mean you are paying the in-between costs and unnecessary middleman's profits which you save here at the Olson Rug Factory.

Here at our factory you buy direct from the maker. We import the long-fibered wool that we use. We scour it—huge machinery spins it—and finally our own gigantic looms (that you may come in to see at any time) weave the luxurious, silky Pershana, the Bokara, the Sultana, and many other grades.

There is a $10 to $40 saving waiting for you on rugs if you have the courage to unshackle yourself from old shopping habits. Already hundreds of thousands of families have done so. We sell more rugs than any ordinary retail store in Chicago. It may take a little longer, and it is a little harder to get here than to the Loop—but you will be well repaid.

PROPOSE BOARD TO RULE LIQUOR IN EMERGENCY

New York Plan Favored by Illinois Commission.

probably would not vote to permit the licensing of places where liquor could be consumed on the premises, said Mr. Shaw. Without such a vote, therefore, the state commission would not grant a liquor license in Evanston.

Mr. Shaw, describing the plan further, likened it to the framework of a social laboratory, offering the best devised means for immediate control and an opportunity for experimentation and improvement. He also emphasized the importance of having a commission with power to correct its mistakes at will, without having to wait two years for the legislature to act.

In the general discussion awakened by Mr. Shaw's report it was pointed out that the New York commission's regulations at present limit the sale of wines and spirituous liquors by the drink to hotels, restaurants, and clubs. It has not yet been determined whether these drinks shall be sold over the bar. The New York commission, however, has power to permit bar sales and to extend the character of places now authorized to sell hard liquors.

See Some Objections.

State Senator Harold G. Ward [Dem., Chicago], who is chairman of the Illinois plan commission, and State Representative Michael Fahy [Dem., Toluca] suggested that the New York plan might meet some objections in the legislature on the ground of "home rule." However, they admitted that there would hardly be any general objections to a state licensing and taxing system.

"If the right of revocation is given solely to the state, I doubt if the control plan now being considered would pass by a two-thirds majority in the legislature," said Mr. Fahy.

Such a provision, he said, would be especially objectionable. John P. Harding, a member of the commission, said this could be remedied by giving the state power to revoke only upon application of the local board. Mr. Fahy approved the idea.

The various members then discussed the old time and new time saloons. This was brought up by Attorney Shaw in a statement that he was not certain of the advisability of banning consumption on the premises "just because the platforms of both parties denounce the old time saloon."

The "New Time Saloon."

"We're not so much concerned with the old time saloon as with the new time saloon," interjected Mr. Harding. "We must decide what we're going to do with it and how we may improve it. There will still be some people who will desire a saloon or a barroom, without obstruction from public view, where a man can go in and drink if he wants to."

The commissioners all agreed that taxes should be high enough to provide adequate revenue for the cities and the state, but not so high as to encourage bootlegging. No definite ideas were advanced on the amount of taxes which might be reasonable because of the uncertainty of how much the federal government will take. The government tax is now $1.10 a gallon, with talk going around that it might go up to $6.

On that point Mr. Shaw said that if bootlegging became profitable after repeal, the bootlegger will still remain. In a final utterance on the practicalities of the New York plan the attorney said it had impressed him so much he had discarded a plan of his own. Any legislator who refuses to support the plan now will be placing politics before patriotism, he said.

The New York plan results from months of investigation in which prominent men, among them Al Smith, Nicholas Murray Butler, Congressman Wadsworth, former Police Commissioner Edward Mulrooney and others suggested ideas. Mr. Mulrooney is now head of the New York state alcoholic beverages control board.

Mr. Shaw said Mr. Mulrooney recently gave him complete information on the New York plan.

EXPLORERS ARE FIRST WHITE MEN TO REACH PEAK IN NEW GUINEA

The message was forwarded to Rand's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Rand of Wolfville,

SAM THINKS HE'S SHOT AND FAINTS; IT'S ALL MISTAKE

Sam Pappalardo, 18 years old, 2743 Shields avenue, was thankful last night that a police bullet didn't travel any farther than it did.

With two other youths Sam was chased in an automobile by Sergt. Joseph Buchanan's squad in the vicinity of Wentworth avenue and 36th street. Buchanan and his men fired several shots at the fugitives. When the chase ended one of the three got away on foot. Sam and Frank Cacuatore, 17, of 3152 Princeton avenue, surrendered. In their car the police found 25 pairs of new shoes.

While being taken to the detective bureau Sam's face became whiter and whiter, and at the door of the bureau Sam fainted with the exclamation: "I've been shot." He was right and wrong. One of Buchanan's bullets had penetrated the rear of Sam's automobile and, its force almost spent, had punctured the back of Sam's coat. The little leaden pellet was found nestling comfortably between Sam's epidermis and his underwear.

HAZED STUDENT SUES UNIVERSITY; AWARDED $56,860

EDMONTON, Alta., Oct. 28.—(AP)—An award of $56,860 and costs was made by Justice W. C. Ives in Supreme court today to C. H. A. Powlett and his son, Armand Powlett, in their damage action against the University of Alberta charging that Armand became insane as a result of initiation ceremonies at the university last year.

"There should be compensation [for the boy] as far as money can compensate fully," the judgment said. "I am not unmindful of the doubtful recovery of young Powlett."

The initiation ceremony took the form of a "mock trial" of young Powlett, during which he was said in the statement of claim to have been stripped naked and dragged along a corridor, beaten, subjected to cold showers, and to have had the name of Premier R. B. Bennett written on his forehead with indelible ink because he had refused to say a sophomore was the highest form of humanity.

LIQUOR MAKERS READY TO OBEY FEDERAL CODE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—[Special.—Distillers of the country today offered to pay so-called "parity" prices for grain used in the manufacture of alcoholic liquors and to submit to federal control under licenses issued by the secretary of agriculture.

In a proposed marketing agreement submitted to the farm adjustment administration, the distillers "applied for and consented to" licensing by the secretary of agriculture under the terms of the farm adjustment act. Likewise, they suggested the formation of a national distillers' code authority to provide self-government for the industry.

Would Follow Code.

Failure to observe state and federal laws governing the liquor traffic would, under the proposed agreement, constitute an unfair practice and could be punished by revocation of the offending distillers' license to operate.

Federal officials would not state today whether the proposed agreement is satisfactory and will be approved in the form in which it now exists. It was considered probable, however, that some alterations will be made after a public hearing which must be called under the provisions of the farm recovery act. In addition to the marketing agreement, the distillers filed a code of fair competition prescribing hours and wages for employés in the industry. This code will be considered by the national recovery administration and embodied in the marketing agreement after the NRA approves it.

In their marketing pact the distillers agreed to use only domestic grains in the manufacture of alcohol, and to make alcohol only from grain unless the supply proves insufficient to meet the demand for alcoholic spirits.

The marketing agreement provides, with the approval of the commissioner of internal revenue, that floor stocks taxes under the provisions of the farm adjustment law, are not to be assessed against distilled spirits held by the trade in charred barrels for sale or other disposition up to Nov. 5 this year.

Books and other records of the industry are to be open at all times to the secretary and the code authority set up to enforce the pacts. Certain reports concerning the business of operators in the industry are provided for.

Peek Tells of Hopes.

Commenting on the agreement tonight, Farm Administrator George N. Peek declared:

"This group of distillers expects repeal of the 18th amendment before congress will have an opportunity to provide for federal control over manufacture and distribution. It is their purpose to prevent, if possible, the industry falling into the hands of unscrupulous distillers and to avoid unfavorable public opinion that might result from abuses."

POLICE FIRE AS SUSPECT FLEES; HE'S CAPTURED

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.
Stolen, 83; recovered, 53; stripped, 13 [from police records for twenty-four hours ended at midnight Friday].

Walter Jensen, 33 years old, 664 North May street, alleged leader of a band of automobile thieves, was arrested yesterday after a chase through west side streets, during which members of a police squad fired several shots.

Jensen tried to avoid questioning by a squad, headed by Sergt. Edward Waller, at Western avenue and Augusta boulevard. He fled west in the boulevard at high speed, pursued by the police in their car. He disregarded several stoplights on the way to Milwaukee avenue, where he was forced to the curb.

It was discovered that the automobile Jensen was driving had been stolen a few hours earlier in front of 2450 North Kedzie avenue. In Jensen's pockets were 58 skeleton keys, some of which fitted the ignition locks of police automobiles.

RELIABLE!

FOR 83 years gas service has been available 24 hours a day in Chicago homes at a turn of a valve handle.

Even in these days when gas sales are lower and taxes and operating expenses are a tremendous burden, service is as good as it was in the boom times of '29.

The 15,275 families, comprising more than 65,000 people, who are stockholder-owners of the company can be justifiably proud of this continuous record of good service.

GAS HEAT ends this early morning firebuilding

To prove that every home can afford to heat with gas . . . we will install it at our expense and remove it at our expense, if you don't like it.

WHY not banish furnace tending from your life forever? Install gas heat and fire your furnace by merely setting a thermostat. Get up an hour later in the morning, when the heat is up. No shivering while you shave. The family can eat breakfast in comfortable warmth.

Tremendous advantages over old-time fuels

There are many, many reasons why you want gas heat. It saves days and nights of back-breaking coal shoveling . . . dirty hours of hauling ashes . . . the nuisance of chopping kindling . . . the anxiety of watching and waiting for heat to come up. Keeps your home spotlessly clean of dust, grime and soot.

You may say, "Yes, that's great for those who can afford it. But it costs too much for me." That's where you're wrong. Because the cost of gas heat at the new low rates is just half what it was in 1930-31. No longer is gas heat the luxury of the few. All homes—even the most modest, can now afford it.

To prove it—and we take the full burden of proof—we'll install it in your home without your making one cent of investment. Then you'll know from your own personal experience whether you can afford gas heat or not. And if we're wrong and you decide you don't want it—out it comes. We remove it at our expense.

During the nine heating months of the first year you pay $3 a month rental for the equipment in the average home. This charge will be included with your gas bill. And if for any reason during the first year you want it removed, we take it out and the rental charge stops immediately. Further, we replace your former heating equipment in good, workmanlike order. If you decide you want it, the rental applies on the purchase price.

Mail coupon today

Take advantage of our offer and let us install gas heat now. It is an offer we do not hesitate to make because we know the great difference gas heat will make in your home—your comfort—the health and contentment of your family. Today—mail the coupon at the right—for complete information on heating your home with gas at the new low rate.

Now in effect NEW LOW COST for Heating Homes with GAS

YOU INVEST NOTHING!

Without ONE CENT of investment by you, we install the most modern burner in your furnace or boiler. If you are satisfied, it stays. If not—and you are the sole judge—out it comes and your former heating system is re-installed—AT OUR EXPENSE. We make this offer because of our confidence in the perfection of gas heat.

DUCE LAUNCHES ITALY ON DRIVE TO 'CONQUER' WORLD

ROME, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Italy today celebrated the 11th anniversary of the Fascist régime with speeches, martial displays and the inauguration of public works, with Premier Mussolini himself taking a leading rôle in many activities.

In an address to 20,000 war veterans massed before his office, il duce declared that he wished "to give the Italian nation a hard but magnificent task, that of obtaining primacy on earth and in the skies."

He called upon his hearers to have in their hearts "the intention to make this certainty become the unanimous will of the Italian people."

Message Read All Over Italy.

A message from his pen was read to thousands of Fascists throughout Italy. Declaring that the Black Shirts were expected to continue to advance the prestige of the party, the communication was the keynote of many celebrations.

Mussolini opened to the public a network of avenues surrounding the Cataline hill, surveyed the archaeological district, reviewed 20,000 holders of decorations for valor, and inaugurated a public works program.

As il duce strode about the new Roman projects to the constant applause of thousands of sightseers and demonstrators, Fascist secretaries all over the kingdom followed his example.

Dedicate New Railway.

Among the achievements dedicated today was the Cremona-Piacenza railroad, a stretch of graded track through rugged mountains which will link the rich Ligurian coastal regions, Piedmont and Lombardy, with trunk lines running across northern Italy to Venice.

In Tortona, Black Shirts celebrated the completion of a year on drainage, road and other works, which have kept the specter of unemployment away from the district. This program will be continued during the coming year.

Public works involving many millions were inaugurated in many cities besides Rome, and other completed works were formally baptised as a part of the nation-wide holiday celebration.

In Milan huge new public projects were started. These included new suburban power lines, street networks, drainage and water mains.

New Stadium Inaugurated.

The formal inauguration of the completed Mussolini stadium, a portion of which was inaugurated at the recent university olympics, and the baptism of a new police headquarters and public market, kept Fascist dignitaries busy in Turin.

A new students' home was opened in Messina, Sicily, and party heads in Aquila launched a program for the building of several big tourist hotels, schools, and sanitariums.

One of the many inauguration ceremonials performed by il duce held particular significance. It was the baptism of the newly paved triumphal way, a modern conception of the same roadway used by ancient Romans in their victorious entries into the capital.

Like the old road known by the same name, the shining new street passes under the arch of Constantine, a monument built by the emperor to celebrate his triumph over his enemies. By il duce's wishes this arch became a symbol for Fascist triumphs when Air Marshal Balbo returned from his mass flight to Chicago last summer. Cheering throngs watched Balbo stride through the arch and receive a fitting greeting from Mussolini. The procedure was recorded as a precedent for future Fascist triumphs.

Court Orders Return of Stolen Bonds to Senator

Eight $1,000 Illinois highway bonds which were stolen from the home of State Senator R. V. Graham, president pro tem of the senate, must be returned to him, according to a ruling made by Federal Judge Charles G. Briggle at Springfield. The ruling upholds a finding in the case made by a federal master-in-chancery several months ago against the White-Phillips company of Iowa, dealer in municipal bonds, which purchased the securities.

CONVICT TRIES PRISON BREAK WITH FAKE GUN

Waupun Deputy Warden Overpowers Him.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Fond du Lac, Wis., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Earl Loveday, notorious Kenosha killer, serving a life sentence in the state prison at Waupun, is in solitary confinement following a sensational break for freedom in the penitentiary bathroom early today.

The courage of William Hinzop, deputy warden at the prison, facing what he believed to be a blue steel revolver, was credited by Warden Oscar Lee as having prevented a serious outbreak.

Loveday had been the moving spirit in numerous prison break plots, it was ravealed today. He had worked for weeks fashioning a revolver out of a piece of wood which he had in connection with his prison work, the prison authorities learned.

The revolver was a perfect imitation, Warden Lee said. Loveday colored it blue with ink he had in his cell to write letters to his friends.

Perfect Imitation.

"I've been in prison work a long time," Warden Lee said, "and I never have seen a more perfect imitation of a revolver than the one used by Loveday."

There were three or four other convicts, employed in checking clothing in the bathroom at the time, Warden Lee said. However, he is convinced none of them had a part in Loveday's plot.

Deputy Hinzop was assigned to the detail and shortly after he had taken the convicts to the bathroom Loveday whipped out what looked like a real revolver.

Command to "Stick 'Em Up."

"Stick 'em up and back up against that wall or I'll drill a hole through your heart," was Loveday's command.

"I mean this," Loveday said, "Stick 'em up and back up against that wall or I'll finish you off."

The deputy warden jumped at the convict and overpowered him and it was not until then that he discovered that Loveday's weapon was an imitation.

TURKEY TO USHER ITS BIRTHDAY IN WITH BANG TODAY

3 Day Celebration Marks 10th Year of Republic.

ANKARA, Turkey, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Beginning tomorrow and for two days following, more than a million Turks will stage a strenuous three day show, observing the tenth anniversary of the Turkish republic.

President Mustapha Kemal Pasha's political organization, the People's party, is arranging the celebration. It has appointed one and one-half million men, women, and children to active rôles in parades, oratorical, and athletic contests, pageants and theatrical performances.

It has instructed municipal officials throughout the country to see to it that at least one-tenth of the population of every city, town, and village attends the main ceremony to be held tomorrow in the principal square of every town and city.

Carry Earth to Ankara.

One man from every community has been chosen to carry a bag of earth from each of these "squares of the republic," as they are to be called from tomorrow, to Ankara.

All these bearers of republican earth will arrive at the capital Monday, and will empty their bags on the site chosen for the building of a huge new edifice to be called "the house of the republic," which the nation will offer as a gift to Mustapha Kemal.

Tomorrow 1,000 speeches will be given throughout the nation glorifying the achievements of the last decade, and 500 plays specially written for the celebration will be presented.

Entire Fleet at Istanbul.

The entire Turkish fleet of 25 units, headed by the dreadnought "Yuvuz," the former German Goeben of great war fame, is in Istanbul harbor.

Tomorrow night the fleet, illuminated with thousands of electric lights, will steam from the harbor of the Golden Horn to the naval base at Izmit. It will return to Istanbul on the third and last day of the celebration.

Two hundred planes of the Turkish army's air force will swoop over Ankara tomorrow, Monday, and Tuesday. Divided into a number of squadrons, the planes will fly over the whole country, throwing down 50,000,000 Kemalist manifestos upon the modernized cities of western Turkey, the yet to be reformed mud villages of the central plateau, and the nomad tents of the untamed east.

Manifestos Carry Slogans.

These contain slogans prepared by the People's party, such as:

"The Trukish revolution crammed a century into a year."

"Let's not stop, lest we fall."

"United we stand, divided we fall."

"Hot blooded let us always be, but also always rational and orderly."

"In honor, in confidence, in freedom, lies our victory."

At 8 p. m. tomorrow night, the hour at which the national assembly declared Turkey a republic on Oct. 29, 1923, 101 salutes will be fired from cannons held ready in every city and town.

Observe Minute of Silence.

With the first salute, one minute of silence is to be observed throughout the nation, in memory of those who died in destroying the sultanate, in freeing Turkey from the allied occupation and the invasion of the Greeks, and in establishing the republic.

Immediately after this moment's silence, every boat and factory whistle, every drum and bugle, every native tomtom, everything in Turkey that can make a noise, must make it.

Torchlight processions, street dancing, mass singing of the new march of the republic, will turn this corner of the staid, contemplative east into an echo of the pandemonium dear to the celebrating west.

JAPANESE SPIKE RUMOR THEY WILL QUIT ARMS TALK

GENEVA, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Ambassador Naotake Sato today denied rumors that Japan was following in Germany's footsteps and gradually withdrawing from the disarmament conference.

Norman H. Davis, American ambassador at large, called on the Japanese representative and told him some misunderstanding evidently had arisen regarding Sato's recent statement that disarmament was primarily a European question.

Sato assured the American delegate that Japan had no intention of withdrawing, but would adopt a passive role regarding outstanding European problems and then decide Japan's attitude. He said the Japanese delegates to the disarmament conference would remain at Geneva.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE GOVERNMENT AS PRICE-MAKER.

Recommended to the attention of the forward looking is an article in the current number of the American Economic Review by Prof. Frank W. Fetter of Princeton. Prof. Fetter wondered what principles congressmen followed in the enactment of the Smoot-Hawley tariff act. He went to the Congressional Record to find his answer. He says:

"Despite a pretense in the debates that there was some objective test of national welfare, the record of voting on individual items furnishes much evidence in support of the cynical proposition that sound protection was that which raised the prices of things produced by one's constituents and unsound protection that which raised the prices of things made by some one's else constituents."

This is not precisely startling to any one familiar with tariff making, but it may throw some light upon the probable use to which the government's new price fixing powers will be put.

Until this year our government was in a position to influence prices somewhat obliquely through the tariff but at the same time it was required, under the Sherman act, to prevent any price-fixing agreements among American merchants and manufacturers. Now, of course, the government is empowered to fix the prices, for all practical purposes, of everything made and sold in this country. It has already done so for agricultural products of many sorts, including wheat, cotton, pork, milk, and a number of minor items. Mr. Ickes has so far avoided fixing the price of gasoline, but it is a question how long he can hold off. The signing of the coal code led to the announcement that coal prices would now be advanced with the blessing of Gen. Johnson. Within the NRA there seems to be some dispute about the rights of those who have signed the codes to agree upon prices without government approval, but there is no doubt that the trade associations in conjunction with the government can go as far as they like.

Under these circumstances, to expect anything very different in kind from tariff making but on a vastly greater scale is to expect a good deal. The principles which Prof. Fetter found operating in congress with respect to the tariff will continue to operate but on a far wider front and with correspondingly greater damage to the consumer.

This probability may be somewhat lessened, to be sure, by the circumstance that it is not congress but the executive branch of the government which is concerned now with price fixing. It would be a mistake, however, to be too hopeful on this account. After all, when congress or when the executive fixes prices the fact is that politics is fixing prices. The same considerations of prudence which have motivated one elected official may be expected to have considerable influence with another elected official.

Likewise it might be a mistake to place too much reliance either upon the temperateness of the trade associations in demanding higher prices or upon the protests of consumers. As Prof. Fetter says:

"To interpret . . . legislative thought in terms of the popular belief that congressmen are stupid or take particular delight in flaunting public opinion is easy, but is essentially false. Congressional thought was on a much higher level than that presented in the hundreds of letters and telegrams from self-interested constituents which are published in the Congressional Record. Contrasted with the inanities of this 'public opinion,' congressional views on the tariff attained almost the dignity of statesmanship. . . . The tariff situation was but one manifestation of a general post-war psychology, of a tacitly accepted belief that the way to promote the national welfare was to give each group what it wanted to make its members individually prosperous without any consideration of the relation of such action to the larger problems of national policy. . . ."

If Prof. Fetter's estimate is correct, those who have been talking about the new deal as at last providing a check upon unbridled greed may have a surprise in store for them. They may wake up some morning to discover what greed really looks like when it runs without wraps.

FILM INFLUENCES.

Ib'n Saud, ruler of a large part of southern Arabia, including Mecca and Medina, attended an international conference including representatives of the near and far east, and there gave vent to an understandable resentment against the parts assigned to characters of Asiatic or non-European tale in the dramas of the films. No film, he declared, is made anywhere that gives an eastern man a decent rôle. He is always the concentration of vice. He therefore proposed an agreement not to buy or hire any films tending to lower the prestige of any eastern nation nor to allow its importation.

Ib'n Saud evidently had not seen a Charley Chan thriller, but there is justice in his complaint. A Chinese, in spite of Charley Chan, would be even better justified in protest, as the Manchester Guardian remarks, for the romantic lure of Bret Harte's "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain" has fascinated many a writer of mystery stories and melodramas, and we confess that abolition of the inscrutable oriental in these pleasant tales would be felt by the western reader. But Ib'n Saud's protest raises a larger question than he realized or, at any rate, was concerned with. If the dramatic films devised by occidental playwrights and producers, especially Americans, tend to lacerate the race pride and reduce the prestige of eastern peoples, what of their presentation of western life and character? Virtue may shine from the white hero and heroine in all its colors, but there are plenty of white undesirables and, as for the presentation of our social manners, we can imagine nothing more likely to encourage the self-content of the eastern peoples. Film after film displays our youth drunken and shameless, our habits and manners without dignity, restraint, or moral sense. Our homes, hotels, and even our schools are shown as barbarous masterpieces of vulgar luxury and bad taste. The conception of occidental life and, of course, chiefly of American life such films must be spreading throughout the world must be far more hurtful to the reputation of occidental civilization than the occasional appearance of a romantic oriental villain can be to the credit of Asia or Africa.

In fact, and in all seriousness, this question of the implications and influence of film drama deserves a good deal more consideration than has been given it. Too many pictures are put forth with no sense of responsibility to the public. They are obviously the products of a low grade mentality and an even lower grade morality and they constitute a demoralizing influence wherever they are shown. We have no faith in official censorship which, in this respect as elsewhere, ignores the worst offenses and the most demoralizing tendencies, while harping on errors of less moment and easier correction. But certainly more attention should be directed to the general character and tendencies of many pictures which pervert logic and reality and spread false and demoralizing conceptions of life. When this phase of the popular film is given due attention a pressure of opinion may be expected which is the only effectual censorship.

GERMANY'S NATURAL POWER.

Germany is the most powerful nation in Europe. Its man power is superior to that of any of its neighbors except Russia, and its industrial foundation overcomes the Russian superiority in numbers. It is a martial nation, easily aroused to a patriotic solidity, and now with its states tightly federated under central control the German separatist weakness, which until modern times gave its states incohesion, has been changed to united strength. German national feeling may be the product of the last hundred years, but it is now predominant.

Most Germans favor and do not resist the regimentation required for national defense and military activities. The nation is physically vigorous, fond of military exercises and responsive to national appeals. It has great industrial genius and commercial enterprise.

None of these qualities shows any signs of impairment or decay. No handicaps which a repressive treaty can seek to impose upon such a people can be permanent. In the far view of the future of the German people the armament restrictions imposed upon them must be futile. Time is against compulsion and in the end the nations which seek to put arbitrary restrictions upon Germany will be worn out by their own effort. It is probable that Germany now could be forced by armed intervention to comply with the treaty, but years weaken the ability to do this and they exhaust the determination of the other nations.

If Germany took a quiet view of its innate power it might leave the question of arms unvexed for the present, knowing that whatever were the dictates of other nations they would be unavailing. If the other nations, particularly France, took a far view of their own interests they would know that the less the question is disturbed the better the future will be. They cannot forever deny the physical facts which make up the German nation, but they can by mistakes of policy insure that the return of Germany to its natural strength will be with a prevailing and deep seated sense of injury. The only excuse for the maddening restrictions would be in the cruel expectation that Germany would wither under them and disintegrate into feeble principalities or democracies. This being wholly out of the prospect, the despair of peace must lie in the determination of other nations to keep irritating the inevitable until, when nature has taken her course, it will have produced deplorable results otherwise avoidable.

A CORRECTION.

The writer of a column of social gossip, "Sauce for the Goose," included among the paragraphs in last Sunday's TRIBUNE a story involving the governor of Indiana. The governor of Indiana was not in Chicago at the time alleged and could not have taken part in the incident described. THE TRIBUNE regrets that the item, which escaped the attention of the responsible editor, was published, and extends its apologies to Gov. McNutt.

Editorial of the Day

CRUSADER FOR THE RIGHT TO PUBLISH IDEAS.

[Des Moines Register.]

Publication of a centennial year biography of Charles Bradlaugh, who was born in September, 1833, comes opportunely at a time when much serious thought is being given throughout the world to freedom of thought, freedom of speech, and freedom of the press.

For Charles Bradlaugh was one of those pugnacious champions of a "cause" whose methods may prove distasteful even to his contemporaries who share his views, but whose unyielding courage in support of a principle contributes importantly to posterity's enjoyment of rights he has established.

He had that quality which Talleyrand declared to be indispensable to real statesmanship—the courage to be unpopular. He espoused a cause to vindicate his ideas of liberty at the risk of his own liberty.

In 1876 an English publisher had issued an American pamphlet on birth control, was indicted, pleaded guilty, and received a light sentence. Bradlaugh and Mrs. Annie Besant, then his co-editor of the National Reformer, took up the challenge presented by the case, republished the pamphlet, and circulated it aggressively. They, too, were convicted. Heavy sentences were imposed upon both, but execution was stayed and subsequently the indictments were quashed through a technicality.

The trial became a test, and eventually a vindication, of the right to print. Because of Bradlaugh fewer tests of that right are imposed today.

THE HAGUE

BY MAY BIRKHEAD.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

The Hague, with its picturesque setting, its remarkable treasures, its quaint population, and its eventful story, is one of the most interesting cities in Europe for the wayfarer. Not only the French themselves, but Americans who frequent the ancient capital, are struck by its resemblance to certain old towns in France, and note the many traces of French influence of culture and architecture. The 400th anniversary of the birth of William the Silent was celebrated not only in The Hague but in the historic old town of Orange, for the illustrious statesman's title of prince of Orange was derived from the ancient principality in the Vaucluse, and was long held by his descendants. Queen Wilhelmina, who was born in August, 1880, combines several lines of descent from William the Silent, and also the lines proceeding from his brother, John of Nassau. Although born in 1533 and assassinated in 1584, William the Silent married four times. His last two wives were both French—Charlotte de Bourbon, daughter of Louis, Duc de Montpensier, and Louise de Coligny, daughter of the famous admiral, leader of the Huguenots. It will be remembered that one of William's great-grandsons, descending from his marriage with Louise de Coligny, was William III. of England, and he also bore the title of prince of Orange.

We had not seen The Hague for many years, and were glad of a chance to survey again the flourishing city, which is in numerous ways becoming modern. Nevertheless, much of its old-time cachet remains in the central section. The ancient structures around the Vivjer—or Vivier—or Vyver—we have seen it spelled so many ways in different languages—now have their present uses, and at the same time recall the medieval splendor of The Hague, which takes its name from S'Gravenage, the hedge or enclosure of the counts of Holland. The Vivjer or pond, now purely decorative, the watering place for their horses, was once in the heart of the woody and marshy hunting grounds of these grand seigneurs. The Hof van Hollandt, built as their residence, and in its glory one of the finest establishments in Europe, was long since converted into the Binnenhof, or inner court, where the states general and the two chambers still meet, and the Buitenhof, or outer court. It would be difficult to match the beauty of this set of edifices, built around, and heightened by, the striking body of water.

The visitor to The Hague will not fail to visit, even if he has already been there, the numerous museums, and especially the Maurits-Huis, containing some of the most famous canvases in Europe. The building is a typical patrician mansion of the 17th century, and is hardly large enough to house all its wonderful treasures. They include excellent samples of the work of Holbein, Rubens, Van Dyck, Velasquez and Murillo; but the most noted pictures are Rembrandt's "Lesson in Anatomy" and his "Presentation in the Temple," and the "View of Delft" by Jan Vermeer, a canvas which had a great effect on landscape painting in the 19th century. Curiously enough, no picture in the Maurits-Huis is more sought by the visitor than Paul Potter's "Bull." Nearly every one clamors to see it; we remember it is mentioned in the opening scene of one of Balzac's novels. The question as to where it is becomes so insistent that one Dutchman remarked: "They evidently expect to see it being led about the streets."

Until the early nineteenth century, when Louis Bonaparte, Napoleon's brother, became king of Holland and conferred on The Hague the privileges of a town, this city was known as "the largest village in Europe." Situated about two miles from the sea and reached by avenues which are shaded with lofty trees and paved with typical Dutch brick, The Hague, like so many other picturesque European capitals, is expanding and undergoing the modern touch. A number of the canals have been filled in and opulent suburbs of new villas stretch all the way to Scheveningen, the famous bathing resort which is becoming more and more of a Brighton. None the less, The Hague, to numerous travelers and residents, still merits its former reputation of being the most delightful of little capitals. A park of ancient trees and artificial water surrounds the older section and in the last generation it was said that The Hague, more than any other place, may recall what Versailles was just before the revolution and that it had thoroughly the aspect of a little royal city.

It is significant that most of the leading families of the Dutch nobility have town houses there. An old saying runs that in Rotterdam you make your fortune, in Amsterdam you consolidate it, and in The Hague you enjoy it. Indeed, it remains par excellence the court city, the home of the aristocracy, of the bourgeoisie—in the sense of the prosperous and cultivated families which have situation and consideration but no titles of nobility—and will always remain an interesting place to visit not only for the old world aspect of its residential and official quarters but for the extraordinary treasures of its museums, rich in many decorative objects besides pictures.

AN INDICATION OF CONVALESCENCE.

[Danville Commercial-News.]

Sixty-five Illinois cities turned in reports of nearly a thousand building permits last month, says the state department of labor. September showed a gain of 67.9 per cent in estimated expenditure over August, and of 88.7 over September of last year. New residential building increased 15.4 per cent and nonresidential 17.7 per cent. The really significant detail in the figures is the jump in permits for alterations, repairs, and installations from $454,056 in August to $1,239,971 in September.

We say significant because here is an indication of an awakening to the need for improvement of property which has been allowed to "run down," to go unrepaired, unpainted, and uncared for to the point of actual rotting. It is a healthy sign to see citizens beginning to spend money on their real estate holdings. When you spy a carpenter putting a few new boards in a porch floor or a tinner mending a leaky gutter spout you can be sure that the owner cannot have entirely lost faith in the future. For a time nobody seemed willing to invest a cent in property rapidly falling into decay, and that was a symptom of a state of mind.

A man down and out inevitably becomes careless of his appearance—perhaps not careless, but he is forced to put the little cash he can raise into food and shelter and must neglect his dress. When he comes out with a new suit and a hair cut you will find those a reflection of an altered outlook due to altered circumstances. So when men begin to spend a little on their homes and business places it is an assurance that some of the pessimism has been conquered. This report is more heartening than one dealing with decreases in names on relief rolls. It means we are on the way out.

PARONYCHIA.

NAIL biters are likely to be called on to pay for their bad habit in two easily seen and clearly recognized results. Their nails are never sightly, attractive, or neat in appearance, and paronychia repeatedly annoys them.

Much more important is the type of mind which is responsible for nail biting. People who are nervous, timid, poorly balanced, and poorly trained are those who bite their nails. Persons in strategic positions such as employment managers and personnel directors try to fight shy of persons of that type. They do not fit well into organizations, and they are not likely to be successes as employés. The mental quality under discussion can be remedied by training, but if a man remains a nail biter that fact is enough to establish that he has not tried to train himself or, if he has, his determination has not been strong enough to make him go on to success. A shrewd personnel officer will cast his eyes over the hand of the applicant to see whether the condition of his nails proves him to be a nail biter.

Periodic attacks of paronychia are good evidence of the nail biting habit. There are few chemical antiseptics that can equal the skin as a destroyer of germs. Arnold has shown that if you place one million microbes, alive and kicking, on an area of skin, close your eyes and count ten, not one live microbe of the one million can be found. If any one challenges the truth of this statement we are willing to scale it somewhat, but not materially.

This capacity of killing microbes is not maintained by the tissues around the nails nor by the lining membrane of the mouth. When, therefore, a person has the habit of putting his fingers in his mouth for nail biting or other purposes the chances of infection are good.

Paronychia is an infection of the tissues around the nails by ordinary pus germs. It forms boils or abscesses that have the essential characteristics of such. As a rule the boil comes to a head, the pus is discharged, the pain stops, and healing follows promptly. But the picture may be somewhat different. The nail is a rigid, unyielding structure built on to the end of the finger or toe as a shield therefor.

In a case of paronychia the suppuration may get under the nail bed and the coming-to-a-head process may be considerably interfered with. In a certain percentage of cases of paronychia the nail interferes with prompt healing. In come cases the nail is lost, and in a few it does not regrow. Therefore, cases of paronychia should be watched more closely than ordinary boils, and infection that gets trapped under the nails must be aided to reach the surface. The other possibility, a more remote one, is that the infection may reach the denser tissues that lie nearer the bone and may result in felon.

The best prevention of onychia is to protect the nail area of the fingers and toes against harmful chemicals and against infection. The best single preventive procedure is to refrain from nail biting.

BUNIONS AND GALL BLADDER.

F. G. M. writes: Some years ago I began to develop a bunion. I had never worn tight nor small shoes. In fact, I had always worn a very square, common-sense shoe, except for dressy occasions. Finally, not only did the bunion ache and cause all sorts of pain, but I had a knee infection, which I thought was rheumatism. I was treated for a gall bladder infection. The knee trouble disappeared and the bunion has never become larger or worse. In fact, the only trouble with it is the small corn which is caused by the large joint rubbing against my shoe. Most rheumatics have twisted finger joints and gnarled knuckles, but often the toe joint is most affected. I have told the above to numbers of people who have repeated it to their doctors and, in many instances, the trouble was gall bladder infection and not shoes.

STRINGY MILK.

Miss M. C. writes:

1. What causes good, rich milk to become stringy or ropy?

2. Is it injurious to health? In our town milk is sold raw.

3. At what temperature is milk pasteurized? I have tried scalding and boiling. It only increases the ropy condition and when it becomes sour it is too ropy to use.

4. What will help to cure this condition?

REPLY.

1. There is a group of bacilli that cause ropy milk.

2. No, but it makes the milk unattractive in taste and appearance.

3. The usual method of pasteurizing is to hold the milk at a temperature slightly higher than 140 degrees Fahrenheit for somewhat more than twenty minutes.

4. The bacilli of ropy milk are often found in unclean pails, pans, and cans. To get rid of them, all milking utensils must be sterilized. It is advisable to have the milk produced in a very cleanly fashion and then to pasteurize it. If pasteurized milk is allowed to stand in unclean pans, cans, or bottles it may be infected with this bacillus.

MENTAL HABITS WRONG.

L. D. Z. writes: I am troubled by insomnia. I eat regularly. I play at sports until almost fatigued. My body is willing; in fact, cries out for rest, but when I want to fall asleep I cannot. I am a deep thinker and like to ponder over all thoughts. I am 16 years old.

REPLY.

It is your mental and emotional habits that are at fault. Your physical habits may be perfect without curing insomnia. We are born with a perfect sleeping capacity. By faulty mental and social habits we lose this capacity. By training in equanimity, poise, and mental and physical relaxation we regain our birthright. There is no other way.

IT IS USUAL.

Mrs. E. H. writes: I am a woman past 60 and have ankles and finger joints enlarged and painful. What is the cause and is there any help?

REPLY.

One of the most prevalent maladies among women 60 and over is arthritis of the kind you have. Old men do not have quite so much of it. We know little of what causes it and less of curing it.

DERIVATIVE CITIZENSHIP.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—[Friend of the People.]—A Polish woman came to this country eighteen years ago as an immigrant, leaving an infant daughter in Poland. She was naturalized as soon as was legally possible and sent for the child when she was 15 years of age. What is the citizenship status of the daughter? F. P.

If the daughter made a legal entry into the United States while she was a minor she derived citizenship through the naturalization of her mother upon her arrival in this country.

FRED J. SCHLOTFELDT,
Dist. Dir. U. S. Dept. of Labor.

DEPENDS ON WORDING.

Highland Park, Ill., Oct. 19.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I shipped a trunk by railroad express and (1) insured by them. Thirty-six hours after it arrived at its destination in the railroad storage house it was broken into and part of contents taken. The express company refuses responsibility after twenty-four hours. Can I collect from the (2) railroad or the express company or must I stand the loss? Why the insurance if I must stand the loss? V. A. L.

1. Your rights on the insurance would depend on the wording of the agreement with respect to insurance.

2. Your letter does not make clear what responsibility the railroad company assumed. In general your rights against the express company and the railroad company would depend on the wording of their respective contracts.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PROPERTY SETTLEMENT.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A man and wife are living in a home free and clear and the home is in the husband's name. The wife leaves the husband due to marital difficulties and the husband threatens to sell everything. 1. Can he do so without the wife's signature and is the wife entitled to a share? 2. The wife takes the automobile which she paid for from her personal bank account, but car also is registered in husband's name. What can he do legally? D. G.

1. If the wife wishes to force a property settlement she should employ an attorney for this purpose.

2. It seems probable that he will leave her to make the first move.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

UNPAID BILL.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Two years ago I bought five tons of coal. The coal was no good. The dealer refused to take it out and I would not pay for it. He took me to court and got judgment against me without hearing. I am willing to pay for it in small payments, but he insists on $5 a month. 1. Can I pay him 50 cents a week and (2) must he send a collector after it? 3. Can the coal dealer garnishee my wages if I don't pay more than 50 cents a week? 4. Must I go to the dealer's office to pay it or must he send a collector to collect each week? 5. What shall I do if he garnishees my wages? L. G.

1. No payment of less than the full amount due will protect you from court proceedings.

2. No, in the sense that he can bring court proceedings.

3. Yes.

4. In order to protect yourself against garnishment you would have to see that the payment is made.

5. You can apply to your employer for your $20 a week exemption if you are head of a family.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PARTNERSHIP.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I bought a car in partnership with a friend. I did not go along when he purchased it. We had a disagreement and he now claims the car is his, although I have a number of witnesses who knew we were partners. The bill of sale is in his name. What can I do? Can he have me arrested if I should drive it, and can he use it until we settle up? D. K.

If you were carrying on a partnership business, then the proper remedy is to employ an attorney for court proceedings to wind up the partnership, sell the assets, and distribute the proceeds. We cannot advise to advantage without knowing more specifically the nature of the agreement between you. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

LIMITS PRESCRIBED.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Is there a law prohibiting the opening of a saloon within one hundred feet of a church or school? M. S.

Yes. Subsection 5 of section 6 of the malt and vinous beverage act of 1933 has substantially this effect.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FRIEND OF THE FARMER

[Inquiries on problems of farm management, financing or governmental regulations sent to this department must be accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope for reply.]

L. M. asks: I am considering the purchase of a farm in Michigan, for which the price is $1,350. I would like to know if I can get a government loan on this, and how much I can borrow? Let me know if the price is reasonable. The soil is sandy loam. To what type of farming would this be suited?

Answer: It would be contrary to our policy to advise you whether the sale price of the farm in Michigan is a fair one. To make application for a federal farm loan which would aid you in purchasing this farm, write to the agent land bank commissioner, Federal Land bank, St. Paul, Minn., which office has jurisdiction over farm loans in Michigan.

The amount of the loan which you might obtain may not exceed 75 per cent of the appraised value of the farm and buildings, as determined by appraisers sent out by the agent.

According to your description of this farm it likely would be suitable for poultry, garden crops, orchard and small fruits such as grapes, strawberries, and raspberries.

E. F. G. asks: How can I protect colonies of bees through the winter? Must I leave a certain amount of honey for food for them or is the protection from cold sufficient?

Answer: Bees will require both winter feeding and protection from the cold. The amount of honey to leave depends upon the size of the colony. Two types of cold protection are used; one is to remove them to a cellar where a uniform temperature prevails during the winter. Bees find it necessary to cluster and produce heat by muscular activity if the temperature falls below 57 degrees Fahrenheit. If the colonies are kept outside, beekeepers ordinarily use leaves, straw, sawdust, and other clean but loose materials for insulation.

FREEDOM OF THOUGHT.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—I wonder if the following throws any light on Father Dietz's views on a free press. M. R.

"To advance knowledge and to correct errors, unrestricted freedom of discussion is required. History shows that knowledge grew when speculation was perfectly free in Greece, and that in modern times, since restrictions on inquiry have been entirely removed, it has advanced with a velocity which would seem diabolical to the slaves of the medieval church. . . . If the history of civilization has any lesson to teach it is this: There is one supreme condition of mental and moral progress which it is completely within the power of man himself to secure, and that is perfect liberty of thought and discussion. The establishment of this liberty may be considered the most valuable achievement of modern civilization, and as a condition of social progress it should be deemed fundamental. The considerations of permanent utility on which it rests must outweigh any calculations of present advantage which from time to time might be thought to demand its violation. . . . To arrest a man who is not breaking the law or exhorting any one to break it, or causing a breach of the peace, would be an act of glaring tyranny." Bury, History of Freedom of Thought, 1913, pages 239, 240, 243.

RURAL IRELAND.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—As an Irishman I strongly resent the disparaging way in which you depicted rural Ireland in the pictorial section of last Sunday's TRIBUNE.

I cannot help but note whenever you show any pictures of England (which is very often), they always seem to be well selected, but when it comes down to giving Ireland a treat they seem to be of a nature which holds us up to the ridicule and sarcasm of your readers.

If you wish to represent us, can't you find something more suitable and picturesque? How about the Lakes of Killarney, Beauty's Home, or the Vale of Avoca, or several other scenes of similar interest and beauty which fill the minds of their visitors with admiration? Such scenes as "Pails of Water" with tattered individuals whose conditions are wholly due to the country's being subjected to a great oppressor for almost eight hundred years do not do justice to Ireland.

It seems to me that you never want to give Ireland a show either in press or pictures. You always play the part of the Good Samaritan for our "old enemy." But the lion's tail is constantly being twisted and some day it is going to snap. Wake up, CHICAGO TRIBUNE—give Irishmen a break.

THOMAS C. O'CONNOR.

MOVIE ADS.

Couer d'Alene, Idaho, Oct. 14.—I have to keep hammering away at the hard heads of Mr. Will Hays and his movie men to make any impression on them, and to show them that the present corruption of the movies is hurting their business and will eventually destroy that business. "It pays to be good."

Here is an excellent example of what a movie "ad" should not be: "The kind of a romance you would like to have! and the kind of a man you would like to be. . . . Admired by men—and envied! Adored by women! Gay. . . . Audacious . . . Carefree, utterly charming . . . Who did everything wrong . . . But was always right in a woman's eye!"

If this is the kind of man American men would like to be, God help American men, and God help America! What man who has any tattered shred of decency left clinging to him would want to be an utterly unscrupulous "sheik" and scoundrel who sooner or later inevitably lands in the penitentiary? The "ad" says that this "charming" fellow is admired by men and adored by women. But in real life the chap who is adored by women is cordially detested by men. A Don Juan or a Lovelace is never a "man's man." He shuns men and is shunned by men until at the last he is forced to mingle with men in the prison workshop. CHARLES HOOPER.

DUTCH IN THE PENNSYLVANIA DUTCH.

Chicago, Oct. 16.—While we're at this matter of the Pennsylvania Dutch we might as well be historically accurate. Your column of today prints a letter signed "A. R." saying that William Rittenhouse, the Philadelphia paper manufacturer of early colonial days, was of a family of paper makers in Germany.

His name at that time was Wilhelm Ruttinghausen of Arnheim, Holland, one of the few Dutch among us "Pennsylvania Dutch."

I'm a bit curious to know how Washington's soldiers managed to get to Philadelphia or Germantown to take those sheets to bed their horses or to drag Sower to Valley Forge "barefooted and partially clothed." By the route those soldiers must have traveled it was a two days' journey to Valley Forge. Philadelphia was in the possession of British at that time.

Sower's sons were accused of printing a Tory newspaper. His press was raided and, I suppose, his sheets taken.

ELMER C. STAUFFER.

LIQUOR ADS.

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 19.—As one who has been a frequent critic of some of the policies of your paper I cannot refrain from expressing my enthusiastic appreciation of your announced purpose of declining liquor advertisements. All who believe that only a sober America is competent to deal with our accumulated mass of problems will rejoice in your helpful stand. May your example be followed by all influential journals.

HUGH ELMER BROWN,
First Congregational Church.

Chrisman, Ill., Oct. 19.—I note with a good deal of appreciation this morning the announcement by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE that it will not accept liquor advertising.

I with many others who have struggled for temperance have felt that THE TRIBUNE has been our enemy. However, I have not felt that the eighteenth amendment was the ensign of success or failure of the temperance cause, yet I do feel that the good society will be an ordered society, one that recognizes personal limitations for the well being of all. For personal well being as well as for the good of society the individual will recognize that he must keep on his side of the road, whether he likes the law or not.

This morning I am able to forget many of the unfair thrusts by THE TRIBUNE in the belief that you, too, are working for temperance. Accept my appreciation of your declared policy.

LEONARD R. SUTTON.

AS OF 1926.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—One of President Roosevelt's aims has been accomplished in my case. I have returned to the 1926 scale in clothes.

In 1931 I wore out all my 1930 clothes.

In 1932 I wore out all my 1928 and 1929 suits.

In 1933 I have worn out my 1927 and am now wearing my 1926 suits.

My wife traded those of previous vintages for aluminum gadgets before I could salvage them.

In 1934 I expect to restore the 1865 scale. All I have left is my grandfather's civil war uniform and I shall have to wear that. C. B. ADAMS.

CHISELER.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—I notice with interest your comment on the ninth page of today's edition of the word "chiseler."

If the person who wrote the article will look at Webster's Unabridged dictionary he will find "to rob" is a crime and the party who commits the crime is a "robber." If he will look at the word "chisel" he will find it means "to cheat," and the one who cheats is, of course, "a chiseler." In no sense can the words "chisel" or "chiseler" be called slang.

The copy of the speech handed to the paper shows the word was used twice, whereas the President actually used it four times in talking over the radio.

GENERAL STRIKE CALLED BY LABOR LEADERS IN CUBA

Demand Government Halt Suppression of Workers.

BY GUSTAVO RENO.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Oct. 28.—Executives of the National Federation of Labor today unanimously voted a general strike in business and industry throughout the island, effective at midnight Monday, as a protest against strong arm methods allegedly used recently by the government in suppressing strikes.

The federation demands that the government reopen labor and syndicate headquarters closed during the recent army-labor clashes and that indemnification be made for labor organization properties which have been destroyed. Official recognition of the right to strike and annulment of laws empowering the government to deport foreign labor agitators and compelling business and industrial plants to employ 80 per cent native workers were also listed by the federation in their schedule of demands.

Many Strikes Already On.

The strike was called for 72 hours, "although it may be extended indefinitely according to developments," a statement by José Perez Arocha, president of the federation, said.

Many strikes are already in effect in the island, especially in Matanzas province. Employés of bus lines walked out yesterday, paralyzing service throughout the nation.

Cities in Cuba tonight faced the possibility of being without light, gas and water after midnight tonight. Employés of the Compania Cubana de Electricidad, which operates 95 plants in Cuba, gave their employers until midnight to comply with their demands for an 8 hour day, five day week, 20 per cent increase in wages and release of workers who have been imprisoned on charges of agitation.

Schools to Be Reopened.

The student directorate announced today that the national university and high schools in Cuba would be reopened on Nov. 20. The directorate announced that there would be no matriculation fees and that the institutions would be governed by revolutionary boards of faculty members and students who would not be controlled by government decrees and laws on public education already issued by the present Grau San Martin or past administrations.

Sporadic outbreaks occurred in Havana today with the return of bread after an absence of 11 days. Various groups objected to the price of 6 cents a pound.

The newspaper strike appeared broken today when former Congressman Alfred Hornedo, publisher of El Pais, announced it would reappear Monday with the aid of strike breakers. Rafael Govin, publisher of El Mundo, made a similar announcement.

Three newsboys were wounded last night when newspaper men protested against the reappearance of the Diario de la Marina, printed with strikebreakers hired by José Ignacio Rivero, the owner. Shots were fired from a café across the street from the newspaper offices, wounding the boys. Soldiers fired into the air to disperse the crowd but several hours later had not found the assailants.

HOLD HOSPITAL GUESTS AT BAY, ROB SAFE OF $75

Herding 22 hospital visitors into a reception room off the main lobby as they came out of an elevator, three young bandits late yesterday held up the day and night cashiers of the Lutheran Memorial hospital as they were changing shifts and escaped with about $75, taken from an open safe.

One robber stood on guard at the door and another searched the safe while threatening the cashiers, Mrs. Lillian Ince, who lives in the hospital, and Miss Ruth Oechslin. The other posted himself by the elevator. As he ordered the visitors into the reception room he warned each one, "I'll shoot the first guy that yells."

SHOT BY BANDITS; DIES.

Galesburg, Ill., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Adolph Weinberg, 60, who was shot by three bandits as they attempted to hold up his store at Augusta last night, died today.

NEW CRISIS GRIPS CHINA AS CHIEF OF FINANCE QUITS

Hand of Japan Is Seen as Soong and Chiang Split.

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Oct. 28.—A crisis in Chinese domestic and foreign policies was precipitated today by the resignation of Finance Minister T. V. Soong. The resignation of the veteran leader caused Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, Chinese dictator, to fly to Nanking from Kiangsi province, where Chiang's armies are involved in serious and as yet indecisive warfare with communist armies.

Dr. H. H. Kung, chairman of the central bank here and a brother-in-law of both Soong and Chiang, also hurried to Nanking with other high officials for discussions involving finance, the Japanese question, the league of nations, and the American RFC wheat and cotton loan.

Soong Silent on Resignation.

Soong remained at his residence in the French concession here. He refused to discuss his resignation. Differences between Soong as controller of finances and Chiang as controller of the army are of long standing and became more acute after Soong's recent return from Europe and the United States, where he attended the world economic conference and later conferred with President Roosevelt. Soong's activities on this trip aroused intense Japanese animosities and pressure was exerted to force his resignation. Tokio also charged that Soong was responsible for increased tariffs against Japanese goods as a means of fostering Chinese industries.

Yotaro Sugimura, former Japanese undersecretary of the league of nations, is now in Shanghai urging China to reject league coöperation and accept Japanese financial and technical assistance. This would lead in the direction of a Sino-Japanese economic and military alliance, including Chinese recognition of Manchukuo. Soong refused to see Sugimura, but unconfirmed reports say that Chiang, seriously pressed financially due to the communist menace, has ordered the national government to adopt a more conciliatory policy toward Japan.

Soong, who balanced China's budget last year, is professedly unable to raise the large sums which Chiang is demanding to prosecute his anti-red war. Soong recently floated a 15,000,000 silver dollar loan [about $4,500,000 in gold at current rates]. It is reported that Chiang is now demanding as much more and that this precipitated Soong's resignation.

Mme. Chiang, who is a sister of Soong, is trying to mediate the differences between the two leaders. She also went to Nanking from Shanghai today.

Sugimura said that while the Chinese lately have been more friendly, fundamental differences between the two nations have not yet been touched. He declared that communism in China constitutes a serious menace, since it adversely affects far eastern peace and that Japan is ready to help China uproot the Reds.

Soong Prefers Reds.

A spokesman at Soong's office declared that "if China is compelled to choose between Japanese control and Chinese communist control, then China will accept the communists, because they are Chinese."

As a result of the increasing Red menace, foreign naval commanders are increasing their flotillas along the Yangtze river near Wanhsien, Szechuen, and Ichang, in Hupeh province. Serious concern is felt for the welfare of the large American and Canadian missionary communities at Chengtu and Szechuen.

Indiana Habitual Criminal Act Upheld by High Court

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Constitutionality of the Indiana habitual criminal act was upheld today in a decision handed down by the State Supreme court which affirmed conviction in Starke county Circuit court of Meade Barr, sentenced to life imprisonment on the habitual criminal charge.

BROOKLYN CASE INVOLVES THREE GANG KILLINGS

Beer Garden Slugging Starts the Shooting.

New York, Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Three killings are involved in the case against four men who were held without bail today in the homicide court at Brooklyn for hearing on Wednesday. A fifth man, said to be associated with them was arrested at Springfield, Queens county, and held without bail on charges of violating the Sullivan law against the carrying of concealed weapons.

The four held at Brooklyn are: Eugene Cavanaugh, 28; John Duenigan, 33; Edward Dermondy, 31, and John Melville, 33. The other man is Sidney Martin, 39.

The four men are accused of being implicated in the killing of Edward Gill, on whom a price of $500 was set, it's said, and in the accidental killing of John Quinn, who was inside of a Brooklyn beer garden, outside of which Gill was shot. They also are accused of being involved in the death of Harold Morton, alleged gunman, taken for a ride when he is said to have demanded the $500 reward for killing Gill.

Gill, according to the police, had visited Cavanaugh's beer garden, quarreled with the proprietor and been beaten by Cavanaugh, Melville, and Dermondy. Later, by some days, Cavanaugh was outside of his place when Gill drove past, fired at him, but missed. The police charge that Cavanaugh put up $500, as anybody's money.

In front of another beer garden than Cavanaugh's on the night of Sept. 26, Gill was rubbed out. A stray shot killed Quinn, who was enjoying a beer. Morton is said to have been sent to Cavanaugh to collect the $500 on behalf of himself, Duenigan, Dermondy, Melville, and Martin. Morton is said to have gone riding with Cavanaugh and three others, to discuss matters. Morton's body was found in a Brooklyn street.

Two Americans Honored by University in Canada

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Honorary degrees were conferred today by Queen's university on Owen D. Young of the General Electric company, Maj. W. D. Herridge, Canadian minister to the United States, and W. D. Robbins, United States minister to Canada. Principal W. H. Fyfe, serving as vice chancellor, presided at the special convocation.

PERMIT TO MOVE BODY OF NEGRO SLAYER REFUSED

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Judge Eugene O'Dunne today refused to permit the transfer of Euel Lee's body to New York and gave the Baltimore city sheriff orders to shoot to kill in case of interference with burial of the Negro.

Lee was hanged Thursday night for murder of an eastern shore farmer. His attorney, Bernard Ades, since has made a determined fight to secure the body to take to New York, where a demonstration was planned. Judge O'Dunne issued an order restraining Ades from "interfering in any way" with the body of Lee.

Calling the attention of the sheriff to "the recent exhibition of the failure of the state constabulary" in the Princess Anne lynching, Judge O'Dunne reminded him that he could summon the entire citizenship of the community as a "posse comitatus" in case of need and that "side arms are made to shoot with, and not intended as mere official ornament and decoration."

"Three or more persons engaged in common in resistance of the law, to the public disturbance, constitute a riot," Judge O'Dunne told the sheriff, and added that "in the suppression of a riot, if justified in shooting to preserve authority and suppress disorder, you are also justified in shooting to kill."

Later Lee's body was taken to Mount Calvary cemetery on the Baltimore-Annapolis boulevard with a guard of sheriff's deputies and police and was buried. A guard then was set over the grave.

Dead Under Street Car; Believed Robber's Victim

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Police expressed the belief that John W. Coffey, 44, crushed to death by a street car last night, might have been robbed, slugged into unconsciousness, and placed on the tracks. Coffey was idle and a suicide theory also is entertained.

THE RULES: Who Can Enter: Every man, woman, boy, and girl is eligible, regardless of residence, excepting employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families. You pay nothing.

What to Do: Solve the series of Puzzle Pictures of Famous Flyers of 1933 appearing each Sunday in the Chicago Sunday Tribune. Follow the course of the airplane in each picture as indicated by dotted line. The first letter of the name of each object touched by the plane's course, as shown by arrows, makes the name of a flyer. Simply write the name of the flyer, as indicated by the picture, on the line below it. Three pictures will appear each Sunday in the Chicago Sunday Tribune until 42 have appeared.

Where to Send Entries: DO NOT send in pictures one at a time. Hold all pictures until you have the complete set of 42. Then send them to "Conquest of the Air," Chicago Tribune, Post Office Box 1539, Chicago, Illinois. All entries must be in by midnight, 15 days after Picture No. 42 has been printed. Send in your entry by first class mail. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the Post Office Department.

The Prizes: The Chicago Tribune will pay 795 cash prizes totaling $10,000.00 to the persons who send in the nearest correctly solved and nearest complete sets of pictures in accordance with these rules. You do not necessarily have to solve each of the 42 pictures correctly to win. Prizes will be paid to the persons whose entries rank highest. Elaborate entries are not necessary. Just make your entry simple and neat.

Judging: Entries will be judged by a Committee appointed by the Chicago Tribune and their decision will be final. Accuracy in naming the pictures will be the first consideration; neatness the next. In case of ties duplicate awards will be paid.

Nothing to Buy: This offer is presented for the entertainment and education of Chicago Sunday Tribune readers. However, it is not necessary to buy the Chicago Tribune to compete. You may copy or trace the pictures from the Chicago Tribune. It may be seen at public libraries or at the Tribune offices, free of charge.

MASSEN URGES U. S. LOAN FOR SUPERHIGHWAYS

Massmeeting on Plan to Be Held Friday.

BY HAL FOUST.

Ald. John A. Massen [48th], chairman of the city council traffic committee, yesterday joined in a proposal for a federal loan to finance construction of an elevated highway system for Chicago. It was under the direction of Ald. Massen's committee that Dr. Miller McClintock of the Harvard univeristy traffic research bureau recently completed a scientific survey of Chicago's street transportation problems, concluding with a recommendation for a superhighway system.

"The survey report," said Ald. Massen, "showed that construction could be financed by stages from current revenues from the gasoline tax. In normal times, I still believe that this would be the most economic and equitable scheme. However, these are not normal times.

Chance for Quick Relief.

"Considering the construction from the standpoint of an unemployment relief measure, much benefit could be derived from the gasoline tax method of financing. However, much more immediate benefit could be obtainod were the government to advance a substantial sum so that several of the elevated structures could be undertaken this winter. And this community will be in desperate need of such unemployment relief this winter.

"The routes recommended in the report are in the main free from right of way problems so that the picks and shovels could start work with a minimum delay. Next week the state legislature will probably decide how much of the gasoline tax will remain in the road fund. Then the state, the county, and the city will be free to decide upon a highway program with the remaining money. A portion of this gasoline tax revenue could be used as security in paying interest and principal on a federal loan."

Arrange for Massmeeting.

The Chicago Motor club yesterday completed arrangements for one of the most important massmeetings ever held in Chicago. It will be a gathering of civic and political leaders to petition the government for a loan for the elevated highway construction. The suggestion to use federal money for a maximum of unemployment relief came from Lester J. Norris of St. Charles, president of the Fox Valley federation, a civic organization embracing the river valley cities forty miles west of the Chicago loop.

Dr. McClintock, Harvard university's expert, reached by Ald. Massen on the telephone at Cambridge, Mass., said he will try to be here for the massmeeting. In his two year study of Chicago's traffic, Dr. McClintock is credited with one of the most comprehensive and thorough surveys ever undertaken in a metropolitan area.

Meeting to be Next Friday.

The mass meeting will be held at noon next Friday in the Hotel La Salle. It was set for late in the week in the hope that the legislature will have adjourned by then.

The invited guests include U. S. Senators James Hamilton Lewis and William H. Dieterich; 10 congressmen from the metropolitan area; Gov. Horner, 19 state senators and 57 state representatives; Mayor Kelly and the 50 aldermen; President Whealan of the county board and 14 county commissioners; Director Kingery of the state department of public works; State Highway Engineer Lieberman and his district engineer, Kendrick Harger; and the mayors of Evanston, Berwyn, Cicero, Oak Park, Hammond, East Chicago, and Gary.

Other Leaders Invited.

Others invited include Mr. Norris of the Fox Valley federation; J. T. Voshell, district engineer, United States bureau of public roads; Eugene S. Taylor, Chicago Plan commission; Joshua D'Esposito, regional engineer for United States public works; Oscar Hewitt, Chicago commissioner of public works; William W. Link, president of the city board of local improvements, and Daniel H. Burnham Jr., president Chicago Regional Planning association.

Invitations also have been sent to Col. H. L. Kellogg, chairman of the Chicago Association of Commerce roads committee; John T. Redmond, chairman of the Chicago Association of Commerce street traffic committee; State Representative David Hunter of Rockford, chairman of committee on future roads for the state of Illinois; Leslie Sorenson, city traffic engineer; Maj. George Quinlan, Cook county highway superintendent; Robert Nau, secretary Chicago Association of Commerce roads and streets committees; H. R. Olson, assistant general manager Chicago Regional Planning association, and E. A. Keplar, secretary Fox Valley federation.

$11,500,000 GIFT BY ROCKEFELLER TO AID HUMANITY

Distributes Funds in U. S. and Abroad.

New York, Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Appropriations granted during 1932 by the Rockefeller foundation for projects in the fields of medical, social, and natural sciences, the humanities and public health, amounted to $11,577,064, according to a report made public by the foundation today.

For the advancement of public health research and study, the foundation donated more than two and a half million dollars, the distribution of which virtually was world-wide. Yellow fever laboratories in Lagos, Nigeria, Bahia, Brazil, and New York City claimed a portion of the expenditure. Other grants went to four states and seventeen foreign governments for anti-malaria work and for malaria study in various parts of the world.

Support Tubercular Research.

The foundation also continued its support of tubercular research, assisted ten foreign governments in combating hookworm and financed inquiries into various phases of the common cold, undulant fever, yaws, and typhoid fever. Funds for the support of 225 international fellowships in public health were provided and central health administration of 43 governments and 164 counties were aided.

The objects of these grants, the report says, is "to fix attention upon problems of public health, to educate governments and to induce them to give increased attention to the fundamental health needs of mankind."

In the field of social sciences, the foundation recognizes the importance of poverty in social maladjustments. Commenting upon its objectives in this department, the report says, in part:

"Much physical illness, mental disorder, family disintegration, crime and political and social instability trace their origins to economic causes. In a time of depression, when millions of unemployed are unable to command the necessities of life, there is the incessant question as to why this distressing situation arises in a country where raw materials are plentiful, where technological equipment is of the best and where workers are eager to apply their productive capacities.

Not a Research Agency.

"The foundation, although not itself a research agency in the social sciences, is impressed with the importance of research in this field. It, therefore, seeks to strengthen existing institutions which are collecting and appraising basic information and to assist in advancing particular studies which deal with economic stabilization."

In 1932, the report shows, the foundation's main attention in medicine was focussed on psychiatry. The total amount expended on the medical sciences was $3,090,973 and the largest single appropriation, for $1,282,652, went to McGill university in Montreal for the establishment of a neurological institute.

N. THOMASSON, 94, DIES; FOUGHT WITH KIT CARSON

Chicago Realty Operator After Army Career.

Capt. Nelson Thomasson, 94 years old, a civil war veteran and later a companion of the famous plainsman, Kit Carson, in fighting Indians, died in his home at 1345 Astor street, yesterday after a brief illness.

CAPT. NELSON THOMASSON.

He was not only a soldier, but a lawyer, business man, and Chicago pioneer and his life, replete with adventure, was the kind the romantically inclined might dream about. Of his many experiences, one that he remembered vividly was in being an overnight guest at the White House while Lincoln was President. This experience was possible, he explained in telling about it, because his cousin was John Hay, Lincoln's secretary and years afterward secretary of state.

Assigned to Army of Potomac.

Capt. Thomasson was born in Louisville, Ky. He came to Chicago in 1857, studied law in law offices and later at Northwestern law school, being graduated with that school's first class in 1860. A year later the war between the states broke out and Capt. Thomasson enlisted in the Sturges Rifles. He was assigned to the Army of the Potomac and it was while in Washington that he spent a night at the White House.

The young volunteer saw Lincoln on that occasion and later, but never in after years, did he boast that he "knew Lincoln well," because, he would explain, he didn't. Shortly after the White House visit, Capt. Thomasson transferred to the regular army. As a southerner, he said, this pleased him, for in the regular army he would not be required to fight the south. The regular army at that time was busy on the western plains against the Indians.

Three Years with Carson.

Capt. Thomasson served a while under Sibley and Bailey in the campaign against the Texans and then got into the thick of the Indian scraps. For three years he rode side by side on horseback with Kit Carson against the Navajos and other Indians in New Mexico, Colorado, and Arizona. His fights were numerous. For almost ten years he served on the plains. Then, in 1870, he retired from the army as a captain and came to Chicago.

With a friend he invested $1,700 in south side real estate. He sold the property for $17,000. From then on he engaged in the real estate business, handling large loop and other properties. In 1910 he served as vice president of the Chicago Real Estate board.

Capt. Thomasson was a constant Chicago booster and a believer that Chicago will some day be the world's largest city. He was a member of several organizations, among them the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, of which he was a former Illinois chief. Surviving Capt. Thomasson are two sons, Attorney Nelson Thomasson Jr. of Chicago, and Leonard Thomasson of Detroit, and a daughter, Mrs. Nanienne Offutt, of Oakland, Md. Funeral services will be private.

REVEALS COLLECTING FUNDS FOR HARTZELL IN DRAKE CASE TRIAL

Sioux City, Ia., Oct. 28.—(AP)—The setup of Oscar M. Hartzell's collection organization was revealed today in his trial on mail fraud charges in connection with promotion of his Drake estate enterprise.

Amos M. Hartsock of Laurens, Ia., one of Hartzell's chief lieutenants, was the witness who revealed he had collected $55,000 since securing power of attorney from Hartzell, most of which money was cabled to Hartzell while he was in London supposedly establishing title to the estate of the famous British rover.

Receiving the power of attorney from Hartzell in March, 1931, Hartsock related that he had persons working under him at various points known as "co-workers."

He held meetings of prospective donors to the fund and spoke in various cities.

DR. C. T. DYRNESS, VETERAN PASTOR, IS DEAD IN EAST

The Rev. Christian T. Dyrness, 68 years old, for 43 years pastor of the Salem Evangelical Free church, California and McLean avenues, died yesterday at Chestnut Level, Pa., in the home of his son, the Rev. Franklin Dyrness.

Dr. Dyrness was one of the leading Scandinavian ministers in Chicago. He was chairman of the Scandinavian Alliance Mission board and a founder and former president of the Lydia Children's home, 4300 Irving Park boulevard. Dr. Dyrness was known to radio audiences, having given weekly talks over stations WIBO and WNBI during the last six years. He was born at Larvik, Norway.

Surviving Dr. Dyrness are his widow, Hilda; two daughters, Camilla Dyrness and Mrs. Dina Johnson, and four sons. The sons are Bert, Arthur, Dr. Franklin, and Prof. Enoch Dyrness. Enoch is a professor at Wheaton college. Funeral services probably will be held on Wednesday, with burial at Mount Olive cemetery. Dr. Dyrness' home was at 2814 McLean avenue.

Everywhere

IN every neighborhood Chicago families are realizing the nearness, the remarkable promptness, and the superiority of Hursen service in the direction of funerals. No matter what their distance away, these thousands of families have realized that Hursen is as near to them as their telephone—with a service nearer and far superior than is obtainable in their own neighborhood.

For over a quarter of a century these same families have had proof of the unusual elegance which Hursen lavishes on every funeral, large or small. They have preferred Hursen unusual automobile equipment—the finest in America, furnished at no greater cost than for less desirable equipment elsewhere.

They have preferred the unmatchable beauty and environment of Hursen Organ-Chapels, for the use of which there is no charge whatever. So, when necessary, call Hursen of course!

G. O. P. CHIEFS MEET TO PLAN 1934 CAMPAIGN

Fight to Recover Illinois Congress Seats.

About 500 persons from all parts of Illinois who attended a rally in the Congress hotel yesterday let it be known that there is still a Republican party, and one that is anxious to come back in the congressional election next year. Speakers assailed the new deal, which they paraphrased the misdeal, but credited the Democratic administration with unwittingly doing more for the Republican party than the Republicans could ever do for themselves.

The meeting was called by Congressman Frank R. Reid of Aurora, a member of the Republican party's congressional committee, and Congressman Chester Bolton of Ohio, chairman of the committee, declared that the attendance gave gratifying evidence of the interest in Illinois.

There were party leaders from each of the Illinois congressional districts and they were called upon for reports on the Republican prospects for next year by Chairman Reid.

Blame Primary for Losses.

The Republican primary was blamed by Mrs. Bertha Baur and Frank L. Smith for the loss of so many seats in the national house of representatives to Democrats. They made an appeal for unity and coöperation and urged that the convention system of nomination be substituted for the primary.

Smith, a one time rejected United States senator, spoke of the "man in the White House" as a man with great ideas, but without the ability to "follow through."

"He surrounds himself with men who lack the capacity for leadership," said Smith. "He has placed two men in the most powerful positions in the country, one to guide the destiny of the nation's industry and the other that of its agriculture, and I say that on their records both men are unfit for the positions they hold. I speak of Gen. Johnson and George Peak."

Getz Pleads for Support.

George F. Getz, newly elected treasurer of the Republican national committee, spoke of the impossibility of carrying out his job successfully without the coöperation of the ranks. Taking a crack at the number of speakers from the floor who announced their intention of running for congress next year, he declared that the Republicans would have a majority if they could all be elected, but suggested that more coöperation would give better results.

Congressman Bolton said reports to his committee indicated a growing feeling against things as they stand throughout the country, particularly against things the administration is doing. He expressed confidence that Illinois, the first state to hold its primaries in the congressional election next year, would start the march that will give the Republican a majority in the house.

40 CIVIC GROUPS LAUNCH A DRIVE ON DELINQUENCY

A mass drive against juvenile delinquency—"basic and early" crime—by 40 civic organizations was announced yesterday by the Chicago Plan commission which is leading this latest campaign by laying the groundwork for better housing in Chicago's blighted areas. According to a plan commission survey, which has been in progress for six months, these areas lie within the main part of the city bounded by Belmont avenue and 63d street, Kedzie avenue and Lake Michigan.

Juvenile delinquenqcy remains constant in the blighted areas, although nationality has succeeded nationality, according to Eugene S. Taylor, manager of the plan commission. The migrating nationalities, on the other hand, lose most of the delinquency as they take root in better environments, he said.

Although population has been decreasing in the blighted areas, the number of delinquencies still remains about the same. From these facts, said Mr. Taylor, the conclusion seems inescapable that better housing, more parks, and larger playgrounds are influential in raising standards of living and behavior.

USE OF ARROW WITH TEAR GAS IS ADVOCATED

Boston, Mass., Oct. 28.—(AP)—The spectacle of Boston policemen, armed with bows and arrows, pursuing bold, bad bandits may be presented in the early future if the suggestion of a Boston student of crime is adopted.

In a communication laid before the Massachusetts special crime commission today he suggested that the police be equipped with a modification of the old time crossbow, installed on the hoods of police cars. These bows would shoot arrows filled with tear gas under compression and would be used against criminals attempting to flee in automobiles.

Basing his argument for the device upon the great penetrating power of an arrow, the proponent said: "If such a gas filled arrow is fired at a fleeing car the arrow will penetrate the body of the car wherever it hits and after such a penetration the gas will be discharged under pressure to make all the occupants amenable to almost instant capture."

ASKS COURT O. K. FOR PAYMENT OF ILL. LIFE CLAIMS

Receiver Makes Report to Wilkerson.

Abel Davis, receiver for the Illinois Life Insurance company, recommended to Federal Judge Wilkerson yesterday that policy holders who do not wish to be reinsured with an Iowa company be paid 15 per cent of the cash surrender value of their policies in the Illinois Life. The insurance company, before it went into receivership, was controled by the Stevens family of Chicago.

The reinsuring company which would pay the claim if Receiver Davis' recommendation is approved by the court, is the Central Life Assurance Society [Mutual of Des Moines]. This company was approved by Judge Wilkerson several months ago after it had been selected by insurance experts from among several which made reinsurance offers.

10,000 Ask for Cash.

Almost 10,000 of the 70,000 policy holders in the Illinois Life have indicated to Receiver Davis that they wish to surrender their policies and collect whatever possible of the cash surrender value, the receiver's report to Judge Wilkerson said. A total of 8,883 policy holders have filed claims aggregating $2,772,146. Of this amount $2,614,501 was allowed by the receiver and recommended to Judge Wilkerson.

In addition, 578 other policy holders have filed claims totaling $170,876, but the proofs of these claims are as yet incomplete. Receiver Davis also listed 227 other claims, mostly from agents of the company, which total $2,840,627 and consist largely of renewal commissions and fees. Only $30,000 of these claims were allowed.

$2,957,000 Is Necessary.

The receiver's report said that a reserve of $2,957,000 is necessary to pay off all these claims in full. The immediate cash liquidating value of the Illinois Life's assets has been set at $4,240,000 by Master in Chancery Jacob I. Grossman. His report was made several months ago and the belief is that certain of the assets have since increased in value.

PARIS, Oct. 28.—(AP)—The new government of Premier Albert Sarraut, which will face the chamber of deputies for the first time on Nov. 3, is expected by officials to ignore the American war debt and to follow a "poyicy of watchful waiting" with the hope that the British will break the ice.

A third French default on Dec. 15, when $22,200,928 will be due, was predicted today by officials close to the premier.

The policies of former Premier Daladier, whose defeat last Tuesday was followed by the formation of the Sarraut cabinet, will be followed almost to the letter by the new government, it was said, particularly regarding the gold franc, armament vigilance, strict protectionist quotas, and commerce.

BOERS OPEN NEW DRIVE TO BREAK BRITAIN'S RULE

War Against Single Party in South Africa.

BY W. E. NASH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CAPETOWN, Union of South Africa, Oct. 28.—The Nationalist party, by overriding a most determined minority, has given consent to fusion with its traditional rival, the South African party, a combination which will practically eliminate opposition in parliament.

The minority, composed of militant Boers, or Afrikanders, as they prefer to be called, are fighting for legislation to consolidate their hundred year struggle from British rule, and, though defeated in the Nationalist party congress, their movement is not dead. The minority program was stated in a speech by Prof. Buckner de Villiers, congressman and newspaper magnate in Cape Colony.

Five points are enumerated as cardinal principles:

1. The next governor general shall be a citizen of South Africa.
2. The right of appeal to the privy council shall be abolished.
3. British naturalization in South Africa shall be abolished.
4. South Africa's right of neutrality in time of war between England or a dominion and any foreign country, as well as the right of secession from the empire, shall be frankly recognized.
5. Members of the fusion party shall have the right to make propaganda in favor of a republic.

British Governor Absent.

It is already predicted that the governor general, the earl of Clarendon, who has been away to England for seven months, will not return and that Prime Minister Gen. James Barry Munnick Hertzog, head of the Nationalist party, will appoint himself governor general and make Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, head of the South African party, his prime minister.

The right of appeal to the privy council, as a Supreme court, is dear to Britishers here, but so much criticism has been leveled at the preference that even diehard loyalists are beginning to see the writing on the wall. Gen. Hertzog's doctrine of "South Africa first" naturally implies an element of differentiation between British and South African citizenship.

More difficult to attain will be the right of neutrality. The last time this principle arose was in 1923, when Great Britain consulted the dominions about going to war with Turkey at Chanak and got such a chilling answer to her inquiries that she called off hostilities. Other instances where the principle might arise are: Trouble between Australia and Japan, rebellion in India, friction between Canada and the United States, or strained relations between Britain and United States or France or Germany.

Reversal of British Victory.

Propaganda in favor of a republic stirs Englishmen as the most outrageous of all because it implies a reversal of the victory won in 1902 in the Boer war. Nevertheless, republican propaganda in a more or less overt form has been spread for years by members of the Nationalist party and an organization called the Republican Bond has been in existence for years.

Villiers' speech was against single party rule, but his statement awakens echoes of some sort from all sections of South African opinion. Both Hertzog and Smuts urged the fusion, but subordinate politicians were reluctant to hand over the machinery they control. Two Nationalists who have allied themselves with the Villiers cause are Dr. D. F. Malan and the Rev. Dr. van der Merwe, as well as other prominent Boers south of the river Vaal.

Dr. Malan won the Nationalists in Cape Province to his side and so bitter was Gen. Hertzog that he said: "I have been deprived of any further responsibility towards the Nationalist party in Cape province." However, the general retained full control in the Transvaal, Orange Free State and Natal. In the federal council of the party Gen. Hertzog controls 13 seats and Dr. Malan seven. Five of the Malanites are from the Cape.

Put Off Election.

Gen. Smuts at the S. A. P. congress asked the party to accept fusion with the Hertzogites in principle, leaving the details to be worked out. A general election, he said, would be impossible until well into next year, and he advocated the continuance of the coalition in its present form until after the next session of parliament.

The Nationalists first put the South Africans out of power in 1924 by combining with labor. The present Nationalist-S. A. P. coalition cabinet was formed last March and won 139 seats out of 150 in a resort to the polls in May.

Gen. Hertzog and his partisans stand pat on accomplishments already achieved. A dangerous thing in politics, say his opponents, who point out that Gen. Hertzog, now 68, has expressed a desire to relinquish his hold on active politics.

CANADIAN RAIL WORKERS AGREE TO 15% PAY CUT

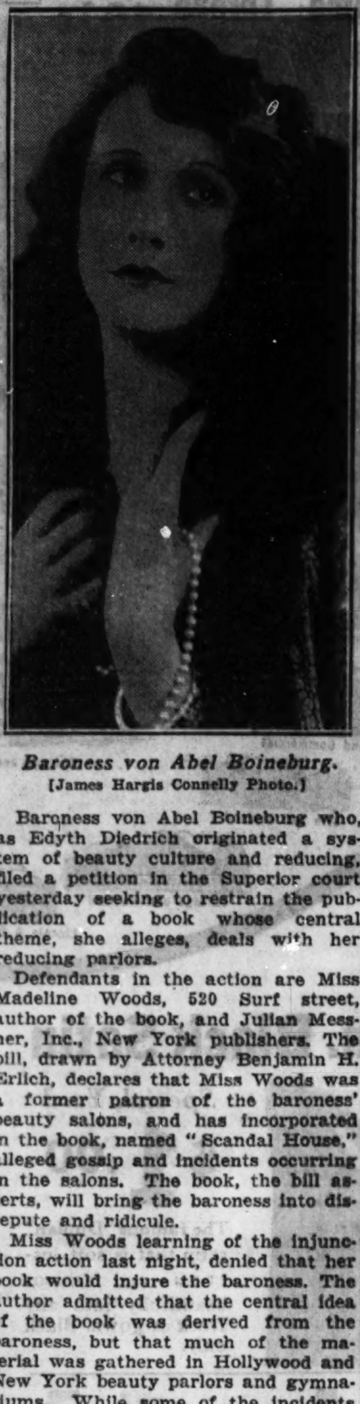
MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 28.—(AP)—A five per cent compromise was agreed upon today by the railways and the running trades in settlement of a dispute over a second 10 per cent cut in basic wage rates. The wage reduction from the high point a few years ago now will stand at 15 per cent. A formal statement issued jointly by the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National railways and leaders of the running trades unions reads:

"It was announced today on behalf of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railways and their engineers, firemen, conductors, trainmen and telegraphers that an agreement had been reached with reference to the wage adjustment controversy.

"The agreement provides for a 15 per cent deduction from Nov. 1, 1933, in lieu of the 20 per cent deduction which has been in effect since May 1 last.

"This is to continue for one year, or until Oct. 31, 1934, when the deduction drops to 10 per cent, with the provision that after Sept. 1, 1934, either party may serve notice of desire to change this percentage."

ASKS INJUNCTION



Baroness von Abel Boineburg.
[James Hargis Connelly Photo.]

Baroness von Abel Boineburg who, as Edyth Diedrich originated a system of beauty culture and reducing, filed a petition in the Superior court yesterday seeking to restrain the publication of a book whose central theme, she alleges, deals with her reducing parlors.

Defendants in the action are Miss Madeline Woods, 520 Surf street, author of the book, and Julian Messner, Inc., New York publishers. The bill, drawn by Attorney Benjamin H. Erlich, declares that Miss Woods was a former patron of the baroness' beauty salons, and has incorporated in the book, named "Scandal House," alleged gossip and incidents occurring in the salons. The book, the bill asserts, will bring the baroness into disrepute and ridicule.

Miss Woods learning of the injunction action last night, denied that her book would injure the baroness. The author admitted that the central idea of the book was derived from the baroness, but that much of the material was gathered in Hollywood and New York beauty parlors and gymnasiums. While some of the incidents are based on facts, the whole story is fiction, Miss Woods added.

5% Payment Ordered for Depositors.

Superior Judge Robert E. Gentzel yesterday allowed Louis J. Behan fees of $100,000 as attorney for the receiver of the closed Northwestern Trust and Savings bank and authorized the making of a 5 per cent payment of $460,000 to approximately 30,000 depositors. The order brought the total of Behan's fees to $180,000 and the total payment to depositors to approximately $3,000,000.

Behan's fee request was opposed by Attorney Edmund J. Szumnarski, representing the depositors' committee of the closed bank. The attorney contended that the fee was exorbitant and not commensurate with services performed. He argued that allowance of the fee would work undue hardship on the depositors of the bank, particularly at the present time.

Behan Defends Fee Request.

Attorney Behan argued that his request was reasonable, pointing that he had three attorneys working with him on the affairs of the bank. He had originally demanded $126,000, he said, but $26,000 was cut from his bill by State Auditor Edward J. Barrett. The auditor found $100,000 to be a fair and just fee, Attorney Behan declared.

Behan has previously been allowed fees of $80,000. The additional $100,000 was awarded for services to last May 31. A bill for legal work from that date is to be presented later, he said.

The bank closed on June 10, 1931. It was estimated that Attorney Behan has been paid at the rate of approximately $90,000 a year. In addition he has received $10,000 as attorney for the receiver of the closed Immel State bank and $15,000 in the same capacity for the Roosevelt State bank.

A Master in Chancery.

Attorney Behan is a master in chancery of the Superior court. He was appointed by Judge Gentzel. Behan and Judge Gentzel are former law partners. From 1915 to 1920 they were associated in the practice of law with Homer K. Galpin, west side politician.

In the first six months of 1932 Behan heard 34 cases as a master in chancery. These, according to a report in the Illinois Law Review on masters in chancery, brought him total fees of $72,540. Several of these fees were approved by Judge Gentzel.

One of Largest Outlying Banks.

The Northwestern Trust and Savings bank was one of the largest outlying banks in Chicago. At the time of closing its deposits totaled more than $10,000,000, of which $8,869,000 was in savings accounts. Nearly 20,000 of the accounts were below $100.

Most of the depositors live in the neighborhood of Milwaukee and Ashland avenue and Division street, at which intersection the bank was situated.

The bank's receiver is David E. Shanahan, former speaker of the Illinois house of representatives. He has received $12,000 for his services, according to the state auditor's office.

Farmer's Wife Telephones to Roosevelt; Saves Farm

Danville, Ill., Oct. 28.—(AP)—The foreclosure sale of the Osman farm near Dana, Ind., was called off today and John Carithers, attorney at Newport, Ind., said Mrs. Osman saved the farm by making a telephone call to President Roosevelt. She phoned yesterday afternoon and, while the sale was to be held at Newport today, several hours before the scheduled time the insurance company which held the mortgage instructed Carithers to call it off.

Co-operation of Realty Bondholders Urged for Quick Results

BANKER TELLS HOW HOLDOUTS TIE UP PLANS

Calls Them Victims of Own Inaction.

This is the third of a series of articles quoting outstanding figures identified with Chicago's real estate mortgage bond reorganization situation, regarding the benefits bondholders obtain by coöperation with organized procedure. Another will appear shortly in this department.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

THEODORE BUENGER.
[Morrison Photo.]

"When bondholders coöperate they get things done; when they fail to get together, they invariably are the victims of their own inaction. Obviously, the future of the bondholders rests on their own shoulders and all the committees and attorneys in the world can't help them if they're unwilling to coöperate." These comments were made yesterday by Theodore A. Buenger, president of Dovenmuehle, Inc., and chairman of its bondholders' committee, who told of cases where funds intended for bondholders had been lying idle for two years because of lack of complete coöperation.

"The committee is powerless to distribute this cash to the bondholders and these delays, which are proving a hardship for those who really need the money, can be blamed entirely on a few selfish bondholders who don't need the money and won't give the consent necessary to complete the transaction," he said.

Pioneers in Avoiding Foreclosure.

Mr. Buenger pointed out that the Dovenmuehle committee was among the first to take a public stand against excessive foreclosure costs and was perhaps the first to make public its efforts to reorganize peacefully through getting the full coöperation of both bondholders and equity owners.

A few months ago the Dovenmuehle committee announced completion of twelve of its reorganizations by means of mediation and told of the substantial savings the bondholders made by coöperation.

Mr. Buenger also serves as chairman of the Hoppe Bond and Mortgage company bondholders' committee, where similar reorganizations have been completed without foreclosure.

Coöperation Necessary.

"It's high time that the bondholders realize that the only chance they have for an early return on their defaulted bonds must come through their coöperation with their respective committees" said Mr. Buenger. "They should know that when defaults occur, their recourse is to acquire the property.

"If they all coöperate this can be done with greater speed and less expense than by any other method. If they fail to coöperate, the only possible way is by foreclosure.

"If a few misinformed or selfish bondholders hold out their bonds, seeking to create a nuisance value for themselves, they either force a foreclosure on all the bondholders, or else they tie up the property for many months, or even years."

Owner Deposits Cash.

Mr. Buenger told of the case of the Bella Fuerst apartments, at the northeast corner of 28th street and Ridgeland avenue, Berwyn, where cash deposited in escrow by the owner to be paid out to the bondholders as soon as an extension was granted, is still on deposit owing to one bondholder, owning 3 per cent of the bonds, refusing to go along with the 97 per cent who agreed to the plan.

"The owner then agreed to turn over his title under an option agreement, and the second mortgage man agreed to surrender his redemption rights," said Mr. Buenger. "Still the hold-out refused to coöperate. It then was necessary to take steps for the protection of the 97% of depositing bondholders and file a foreclosure bill."

A majority of the building's tenants worked in a big plant which closed most of its shops about that time, rentals fell off, vacancies increased and it was impossible to secure funds to complete the foreclosure.

Refuses to Listen.

"Again the holdout bondholder was appealed to by members of the committee and also by his fellow bondholders, who urged him to support the plan they all wanted," said Mr. Buenger. "So far he's refused to listen to these appeals and the bondholders are prevented from taking peaceful possession of the property."

Mr. Buenger also told of the La Vergne apartments, at the northeast corner of Patterson and La Vergne avenues. The owners asked for an extension and interest reduction, and 95 per cent of the bondholders approved the plan. As 5 per cent balked the owners made another offer in which they agreed to cancel about 30 per cent of the bonds which were owned by members of their families.

The owners made other offers, but the 5 per cent refused them all and as a result money deposited by the owners to pay interest is lying idle when it might as well be in the hands of bondholders.

Fail to Benefit Themselves.

"The irony of the whole situation is that these holdouts don't gain anything by their greed," said Mr. Buenger. "They merely add to the difficulties of those with whom they should cooperate and don't benefit themselves at all."

Mr. Buenger then told of another Dovenmuehle issue where all of the bondholders coöperated. The owner of the Powell apartments, at the southwest corner of Powell and Canton streets, was unable to make interest and principal payments. He agreed to turn over title for the benefit of the bondholders under a liquidation trust agreement, with an option to repurchase and the junior mortgage holders agreed to waive their rights under the reorganization plan.

"Details of the plan were submitted to the bondholders, who approved it 100 per cent," said Mr. Buenger. "As a result, within four months of the original default the bondholders had possession of the property and the building was in a position to pay out one-half the interest coupon due four months previous without the necessity of procuring a new loan."

THIRTY-FIVE REAL ESTATE MEN FORM CO-OPERATIVE BODY

A group of north and northwest side real estate brokers yesterday formed an organization called the Coöperating Realty Brokers, which announces as its purpose the stimulation of sales and renting of real estate through coöperative efforts, to be directed from a central office.

"Exclusive listings will be encouraged," said George J. Kappes, a director. "All properties listed for sale with one broker will be distributed immediately to all brokers in the association. Thereby an owner will receive the benefit of the work of about thirty-five brokers, who have been geographically selected in the district and who have proved themselves successful in the past."

Contracts Awarded

Contracts awarded in Chicago the week of Oct. 20 to 26, according to figures supplied by the F. W. Dodge corporation, totaled 14, with a combined cost of $129,630.

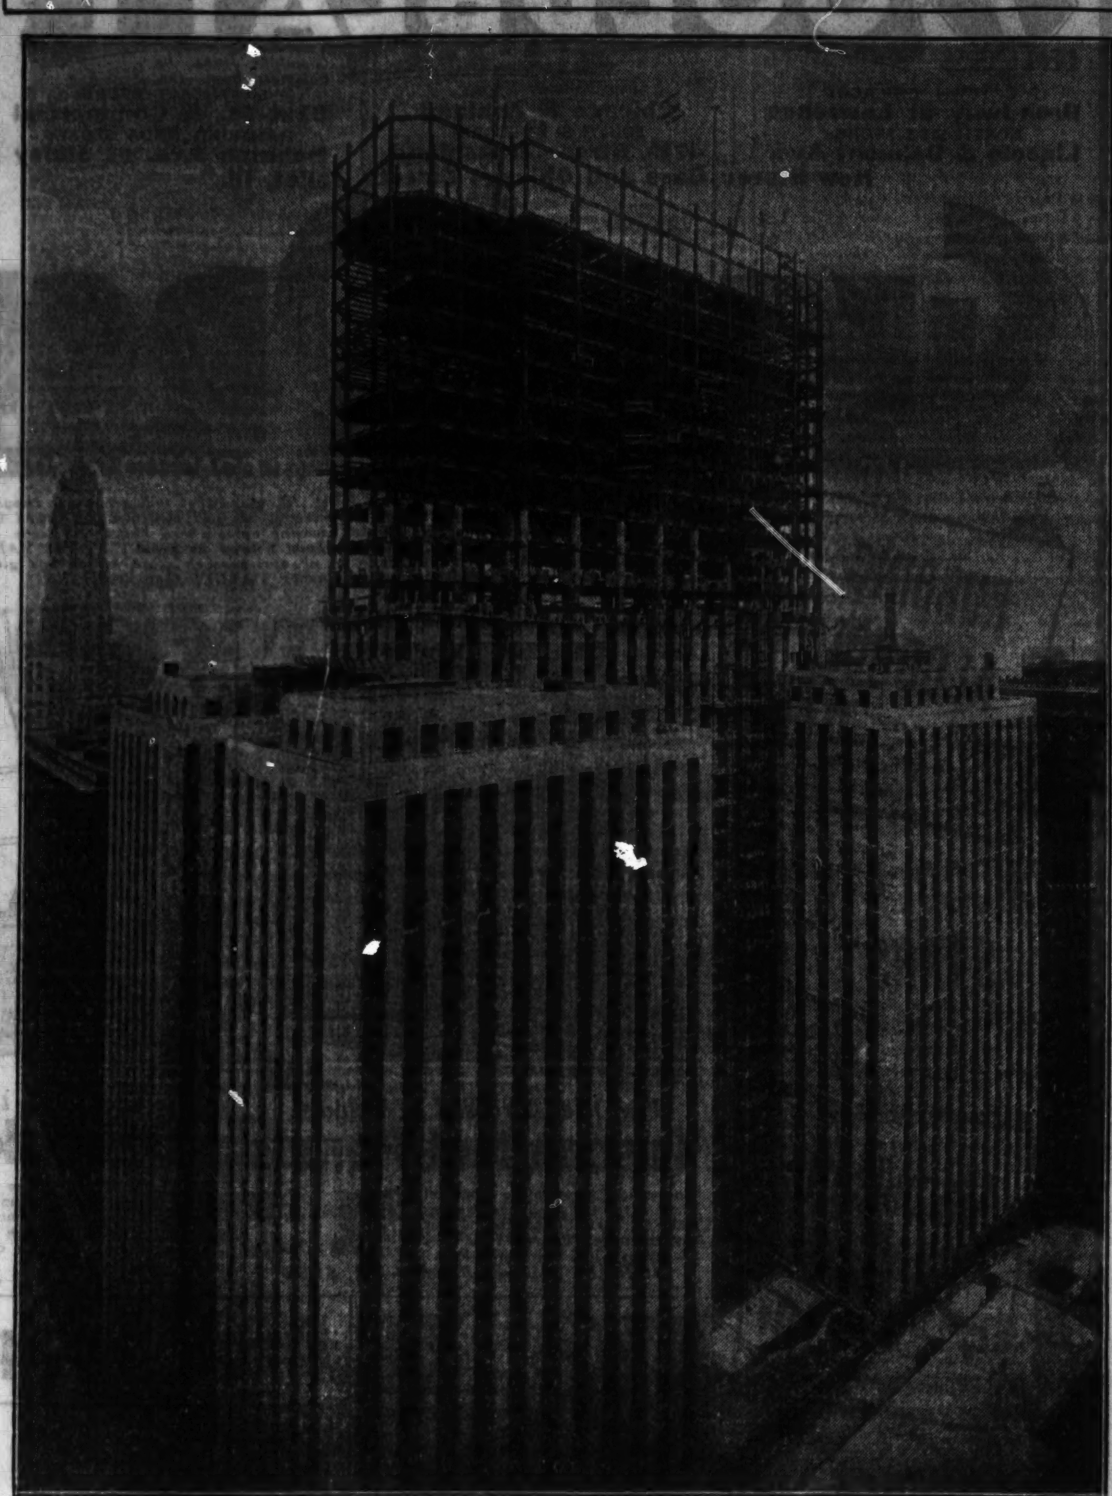
CLIMBING SKYWARD



Chicago's largest office structure, the Field building, now under construction on Adams, extending from Clark to La Salle, is close to its height limit of forty-three stories. The steel in the tower section reached the fortieth floor yesterday. The entire building will be completed and ready for occupancy by May 1, 1934, according to Robert Carpenter, its manager. Construction of the tower section started on Sept. 23. The total amount of steel in the tower will be 4,000 tons.

Loop Literary Liquor Shop Planned by Ernest Byfield

ERNEST BYFIELD.

A literary liquor store, where both academics and alcohol will be dispensed to patrons, is announced by Ernest Byfield of the Hotel Sherman company, for the northeast corner of La Salle and Randolph. In this extremely ultra modern "Hotel Sherman Wine Shop," to be opened about Dec. 6, the liquor will be sold in packages only. The literary distribution will be achieved by means of a series of lectures on alcoholic beverages by such well known authorities as Mr. Byfield himself, Frank Bering, manager of the Hotel Sherman, and other connoisseurs of wines and whiskies.

"We intend to have one or two lectures every week on the history of wines and whiskies," said Mr. Byfield. "Our lecturers will explain the reasons for quality in certain wines and will tell how various alcoholic beverages are made. They'll educate the public as to values and uses of good beverages.

"Whether we'll go into the details of what wines should go with certain courses of a well planned dinner hasn't yet been decided. The average American doesn't care enough for details to study such intricacies of imbibing."

Mr. Byfield, who recently returned from a visit to Scotland, will probably give an address on Scotch liquors as his first lecture to his customers.

He stated yesterday that not only did he order while in Europe a carefully chosen selection of the liquid output of France, Germany, and Scotland, but the new Sherman wine shop will have on its shelves bottles from the private cellars of himself, Mr. Bering, and the Hotel Sherman, all of which have been under bond since 1920.

The 20 by 70 shop will be modern in design with many novelties which Mr. Byfield refuses to disclose until just before the opening date. There will be no bar and no drinking on the premises, he said.

Better Housing Meet to Be Held at Union League Club

Close to a thousand persons are expected to attend the two day conference at the Union League club beginning next Tuesday under the auspices of the National Association for Better Housing. New and expeditious methods of financing home building will be one of the principal problems to be discussed, according to J. Soule Warterfield, chairman of the conference. Yesterday Mr. Warterfield announced the appointment of a finance committee to help work out the best plan to stimulate home building. It will be headed by Herbert U. Nelson and will comprise James S. Adams, Walter S. Schmidt, Harvey Harris, and Edward A. MacDougall.

Plan New Restaurant in 100 North La Salle Bldg.

George T. Roumel has leased the stores at 108 North La Salle and 158 West Washington, in the 100 North La Salle building, for ten years on a guarantee and percentage basis and will join them into one large room. It will be known as the Blue Eagle restaurant and will be operated by interests identified with the Fox Head inn. Jordan & Co. were brokers.

Two New Cafes Announced for Near No. Side

With the prohibition era nearing its end the local café situation is getting more and more bullish. Yesterday two swanky new restaurants for the near north side were announced simultaneously. For one an investment of $100,000 is reported to be contemplated; the other calls for a $25,000 expenditure, it was stated.

The latter, to be called "The Ranch," will be the more unusual of the two, as the colorful southwest, around Santa Fé and Albuquerque, will be its decorative background. It's to be opened at 123 East Oak street by a group of north side business men.

Plans have been completed by H. C. and Lucille Holling of the Palmolive building, who conceived the idea. The general design will be Indian, that of the Navahos, Hopi, and the pueblo peoples of the southwest deserts, with vivid purples, blues, reds, and yellows used with a free hand.

Ready for Equestrian Guest.

The exterior of "The Ranch" will be of adobelike plaster, with the large window framed in carved beams, painted posts, and corbels. There will even be a gayly painted tie rail out front for the prospective customer who might some day come galloping up on a mustang.

It will seat about 150 people. The lunch counter and bar will reflect a more humorous atmosphere than the main dining room. There will be horseshoes for coat hangers, stools in the form of small saddles, complete with stirrups, and above the bar will be depicted the hilarious side of ranch life, with cowboys, miners, bronchos, and burros in jovial disarray.

On East Ohio Street.

The proposed $100,000 café, as yet unnamed, is announced for 321-29 East Ohio street, just east of Fairbanks court. The 100x109 site has been leased for ten years at an undisclosed rental by Charles Weid, contractor, from the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company.

The café will have a stag bar, a general bar, and a main dining room seating 500, with dance floor and stage.

TWO ARCHITECTS' GROUPS TO HOLD JOINT SESSIONS

JOHN REED FUGARD.
[Walinger Photo.]

Beginning next month the Illinois Society of Architects and the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects will hold their monthly meetings together at the Architects' club. The meeting of the Illinois Society of Architects scheduled for the fourth Tuesday of the month and that of the chapter for the second Tuesday have been abandoned, and the merged meeting will be hold on the third Tuesday of November.

The combined session also will be held on the third Tuesday of December, January and February. The subject of the November meeting will be "Housing and Its Ramifications." The speakers will be announced later. John Reed Fugard is president of the Illinois Society of Architects.

Iowa Insurance Co. to Have Offices in Midland Building

Edward P. Wells, manager of the Midland building, at 176 West Adams, reports leases for office space signed with the National Life Insurance company of Iowa and the General Insurance agency. The building now has a greater percentage of occupancy than at any time since it was erected in 1927, according to Mr. Wells.

Protective Committee Buys Troy Apartments

The Troy apartments at 6059 South Troy street, containing thirteen suites, have been purchased by the bondholders' protective committee from Anton Maros for an undisclosed consideration. G. Knight Nesbitt was broker. The property was security for a $45,000 first mortgage bond issue underwritten by the Depositors' State bank.

Brokers' Notes

Selz & Southman, Inc., announced recently that Charles I. Hopkins has been made manager of their sales department. He entered the realty business in 1910 and later was associated with the firm of Byron M. Hopkins & Sons from 1914 to 1931.

The Cicero Realty company state that Benjamin J. Sabel, formerly connected with that firm, again has joined the organization.

Lewis T. Doods, real estate broker of Winnetka, has opened a new office in Willoway subdivision at 1700 Willow road, Northfield.

Give the name of the underwriter and the full title of the bond.

Beecroft Building Company.

I would like some information regarding the first mortgage 6 per cent bonds of the Beecroft Building company of Madison, Wis.—O. C.

R. E. Wood of the Central Republic Trust company gives THE TRIBUNE this information regarding this issue: "According to our records, $425,000 of the bonds were originally issued and on Oct. 1, 1933, there were outstanding $180,700, maturing in installments of $4,000 on Dec. 1, 1933; $10,500 on June 1, 1934; $7,000 on Dec. 1, 1934; $10,000 on June 1, 1934, and $149,200 on Dec. 1, 1935.

"The bonds are now in good standing as to principal and interest requirements, and the trust indenture securing the bonds provides for the deposit on the fifth day of each month an amount equivalent to one-sixth of the face amount of the next maturing coupons and one-sixth of the par value of the next maturing bonds.

"The deposits due from the fifth day of June to the fifth day of November, both months inclusive, should, therefore, be sufficient to retire the bonds maturing Dec. 1, 1933, and the interest coupons that date, should deposits be made as per schedule.

"The full amount of the sinking fund deposits have been received, according to our records, to and including the payments due Oct. 5, 1933."

Lynne H. Bump, Manitowoc, Wis.

Can you give me any information regarding bonds issued by George Brothers, Manitowoc, Wis., July 1, 1922? They are second mortgage 7 per cent, maturing 1937. The First National Bank of Manitowoc is trustee for the issue. E. F.

Arthur H. George of George Brothers writes THE TRIBUNE as follows: "The Lynne H. Bump second mortgage 7 per cent bonds, due in 1937, were not underwritten by us. They were issued by us and have since become first mortgage bonds. As the original first mortgage bonds have all been paid up in full and no other encumbrance is ahead of the second morgage bonds they are now first mortgage bonds. They are, in my opinion, a very good investment and have never defaulted on interest payments."

Bond Owners May Get Title to Property Without Cost

Bondholders in the North Kedzie apartments, at 4927-33 North Kedzie avenue, may acquire a deed to the property without cost through an agreement with the owners, according to A. Aronson, secretary of the Schiff bondholders' committee. The property is in foreclosure and all income is being applied to taxes, according to Mr. Aronson. He states that the bonds have been called for deposit and as soon as all are in the issue can be reorganized and complete ownership vested in the depositing bondholders. Kirkland, Fleming, Green & Martin are attorneys for the committee.

Reports Palmolive Bldg. Now 89 Per Cent Rented

With inquiries for space in the upper Michigan avenue district showing considerable improvement, the Palmolive building is now 89 per cent rented, according to C. E. Olin, manager of that structure for Ross & Browne. He reports the following new leases: Fawcett Publications of Minneapolis, Arthur W. Straus, A. C. Spark Plug company, Drake Travel Bureau, W. S. Woodfill, president Grand hotel, Mackinac island; Norman W. Marsh, and Oscar U. Zerk.

Bernard N. Sack Reports Three Residential Sales

Bernard N. Sack of the Sack Realty company reports the following sales: The two flat building at 6508 South Morgan street by Alberta Baxter to Elnora Condit for a reported $9,500; the two flat building at 6632 Justine street by Carolyn Mussfeldt to Nicholas Marich for a reported $4,250, and the residence at 6125 South Bishop street by Mrs. Anna Fogerty to Lester Pollachek for a reported $2,500.

Gregory's Sport Shop Will Have New Oak Park Store

Gregory's Sport shop, now at 204 South Marion street, Oak Park, has leased for a term of years the store at 121 North Marion street, at the northwest corner of Westgate and Marion. E. H. Mundt of the George R. Hemingway Organization, Inc., was broker.

NORTH HERMITAGE AVENUE DEAL.

Charles J. and Mary Z. Rowan have bought the brick bungalow at 6424 North Hermitage avenue from Minnie G. Glenn for an undisclosed price. John J. Kern was broker.

O'BRIEN LASHES OUT AT HIS FOES; HITS THE PRESS

Thanks Lord for Radio to Address Voters.

New York, Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Tammany today switched from the defensive to the offensive in the three cornered race for the mayoralty. Departing from its stand "on the record" of the O'Brien administration, it lashed out at the press of the city, and its Fusion and Recovery party opponents.

The mayor personally delivered the attack upon the newspapers of the city in a speech before the members of the Women's Democratic club of New York City, at the Hotel Commodore.

"Thank the Lord we have the air to go to the voters on, and we don't need the press of New York," the mayor declared.

O'Brien Protests News Stories.

"In my campaign last year they sent out reporters—and I want to say that they are fine, upstanding young men and women, and brilliant in their line—but they were under orders to conduct themselves, and they had to turn in just the sort of fodder that was wanted. And what they didn't, the rewrite men made up, and the caption writers did the rest.

"It was a planned, determined effort to make me appear ridiculous and unable to cope with city affairs, and lacking the qualities to make me a good mayor."

At the luncheon today of the Women's Democratic club, the mayor declared that "where the men leaders showed the white feather, the lady leaders stood by the party, and refused to go away."

Abraham Kaplan, Tammany's campaign manager, carried on the attack against fusion, Joseph V. McKee, and the Literary Digest, whose mayoralty poll shows Tammany far behind.

Johnson Telegraphs McKee.

The protest of F. H. La Guardia, Fusion nominee for mayor, against use by the recovery party of the Blue Eagle insignia of the national recovery administration had effect today when Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, telegraphed Joseph V. McKee, candidate for mayor, that the use of such insignia was in violations of the NRA regulations. Gen. Johnson's telegram follows:

Joseph V. McKee:

"The use of NRA insignia or letters on a political poster in such a manner as to tend to identify it with a particular political faction is unauthorized and contrary to NRA circular number one of July 23, interpretation of Sept. 27, executive order of October 14 and regulation of Oct. 17.

"Hugh S. Johnson, administrator."

Candidate Faces $500 Fine.

In President Roosevelt's executive order of Oct. 14, cited by Gen. Johnson, a fine of not more than $500 and a jail sentence of not more than six months or both was prescribed for display or use of the NRA insignia in violation of rules or regulations.

United States Attorney George Z. Medalie, when asked if he intended to take action, said he had received no complaint through the proper channel, which, he said, would be from Washington. For the sake of uniformity, no NRA prosecutions are being made except by instruction from Washington.

The pamphlet, of which Mr. La Guardia complained, was issued in behalf of James J. Hoey, Recovery party candidate for borough president of Manhattan, and it became known at the Federal building that a complaint against it had been sent to Washington. It also became known that Mr. Medalie is opposed to undertaking any prosecution of political significance at this time.

McKee Denies Responsibility.

Mr. McKee said he had nothing to say about the Hoey pamphlet. Informed that an employé of the McKee headquarters had been collecting and destroying them, presumably on his instructions, Mr. McKee said:

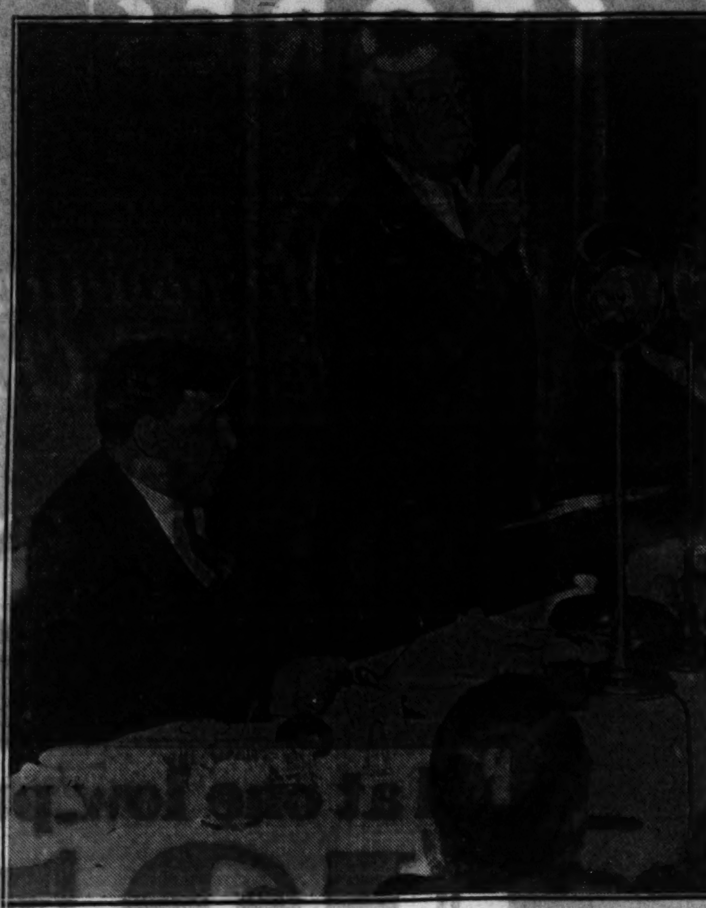
"He did not do it on any instructions from me. In the first place, those pamphlets were not mine, were not printed on instructions from me nor with my knowledge. Questions about those pamphlets should be taken up with those who issued them."

Richard C. Murphy, secretary of the Hoey campaign committee, took full responsibility for the issuance of the Hoey pamphlets with the NRA insignia.

Shot by Stranger Without Reason, He Tells Police

John Doyle, 19 years old, 556 West 42d street, was found shot in the groin in front of 624 West 43d street last night. He told police at the county hospital that two men attacked him with no reason whatever in front of 4209 Lowe avenue and that one of them shot him.

Seabury Speaks for La Guardia



Samuel Seabury, speaking, tells New York Advertising club a thing or two about the election campaign there, while F. H. La Guardia, seated, listens. La Guardia is a candidate for mayor on a fusion ticket.

OPEN GIRL SCOUT 21ST ANNIVERSARY ACTIVITIES TODAY

Budget Concert Series Starts Tomorrow.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

Girl Scout week, beginning today and celebrating the 21st anniversary of the founding of the organization, will be observed in a threefold manner by the 6,000 scouts and their leaders in Chicago. Tomorrow and Tuesday representatives of the organization, with Camp Fire Girls, will be pages to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt during her visit to Chicago. The first of a series of concerts to raise funds for the scout council's annual budget will be given tomorrow evening in the Auditorium theater. The third feature of the week will be daily programs, each emphasizing an activity of the Girl Scouts.

Go to Church Today.

Today the Girl Scouts will go to church and many of the pastors will note the beginning of Girl Scout week in their sermons. Tomorrow is Homemaking day, and in the evening many plan to attend the first of the series of concerts.

Tuesday will be Handicraft day, with emphasis upon the accomplishments of the deft and active fingers of the scouts. Wednesday will be Thrift day; Thursday, Hostess day, with mothers as guests at tea in many troop meetings; Friday, Community Service day; and Saturday, Health day, with outdoor events. Each day will be celebrated in individual troops within their own localities.

Massmeeting Saturday Evening.

The massmeeting of the week will be on Saturday night when a pageant will be given in the Auditorium theater by the scout council. This will be attended by Girl Scouts and leaders only.

Girl Scouts in two north shore suburbs have planned exhibitions of their activities as business men return to their homes on Thursday and Friday evenings. The scouts will pitch their tents opposite the Chicago and North Western stations at Ravinia and Highland Park. Cookies will be baked over camp fires and served hot. The girls will exhibit first aid and demonstrate the art of signaling. The program will be carried out for an hour, beginning at 5:30 both evenings.

Capital Punishment Act for Kansas Is Indorsed

Topeka, Kas., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Capital punishment was indorsed in principle by the Kansas legislative council working today on proposals to present to the special legislative session, starting Monday. The council, composed of members of the legislature, asked Representative D. E. Reber to work on some general capital punishment measures.

OVERCOME BY FUMES; REVIVED.

Mrs. Stella Trynesslewski, 2119 Turner avenue, was overcome by fumes from a coal stove in her home yesterday afternoon. Her husband, Stanley, discovered her unconscious and summoned firemen, who revived her after working with an inhalator for nearly an hour.

AIR ACROBATICS BY LINDY THRILL FRENCH AVIATORS

PARIS, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh had a "postman's holiday" today and was busy studying aviation in the air and on the ground, while Mrs. Lindbergh was just as thoroughly occupied in window shopping. Both ended the day with leading figures of the French aviation world at an informal dinner given by Air Minister Pierre Cot.

In the morning Lindbergh performed some stunts in an acrobatic plane. French flyers called the exhibition "superb."

For the first time since their arrival the Lindberghs tonight became the center of a popular greeting as they left a restaurant with Air Minister Cot. The flyers' movements have been under cover of mystery, but word got around they would be at a restaurant near the famous Madeleine church, and a crowd of about 150 women waited for two hours in the cold to catch a glimpse of Lindbergh and applaud him.

Guests at the function included Maryse Hilze, French aviatrix; Under Secretary of Air de la salle; Gen. Denain, chief of the French air forces; Emanuel Chaumier, director of civil aviation; Dieudonne Coste, and Michael de Troyat, aviators.

Two Dry Agents Are Shot by Rum Runners in West

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 28.—[U.P.]—An attack by rum runners with guns today resulted in the wounding of two federal prohibition agents who surprised a band of five or six men unloading liquor from a boat off the Sonoma county shore. Critically wounded was Norman D. Austin, 52, agent, shot in both arms, the left chest, and side. Sam Byrd, 44, also an agent, was knocked down by a bullet which cut through his scalp.

SIX FAMILIES FLEE FIRE.

Six families were forced to flee to the street in night clothing when a smoky fire was caused by an overheated furnace early yesterday in a three-story apartment building at 3710 West 18th street. Firemen extinguished the blaze.

GIRL BECOMING A MAN; DOCTORS ACT TO SAVE HER

Losing Curves, Muscles Harden, Beard Sprouts.

Oakland, Cal., Oct. 28.—[U. P.]—Glandular specialists, spurred by a girl's tearful pleas to save her from "becoming a man" applied an adrenal diet today to arrest the startling transformation of a once attractive young woman into a person with decidedly masculine characteristics and tendencies.

Her once wavy golden hair became brown and coarse during the strange change. She also developed mustache and sideburns, which made shaving necessary almost daily.

Rounded feminine contours were altered into the broad shoulders, the rigid muscles of an athlete; her hands were changed from the soft flesh of feminity into masculine hardness.

Internal Changes Occur.

"Internal changes occurred; to make child bearing impossible at present and to begin the atrophy of her female organs," said the specialists attending her. They requested anonymity, consenting to make the strange case public "only in the interests of valuable medical information."

Two years ago the transformation started, according to the girl, now 23. She appeared at a hospital clinic 10 days ago begging the doctors to arrest the condition.

Frequently, she said, she found herself doing things a man would do under certain circumstances. To illustrate she thrust her hand forward to shake hands. Her gesture was decidedly masculine.

Remove Thyroid Gland.

Examination showed a disturbance of the delicate balance between the thyroid and the adrenal glands. The specialists removed the thyroid, leaving her temporarily speechless, then put her on the adrenal diet.

In 10 days, they said, the result of the operation might be known. But "Miss X" faced the probability of many months in the hospital before it could be determined definitely whether the alarming transformation had been arrested.

"It should not be understood," an attending specialist said, "that this woman is becoming a man in fact. It is only the characteristics of a man she is assuming. It is a rare case. In our years of experimenting we have never seen anything like it."

BING CROSBY AND TWO ACTRESSES SUED OVER FAILURE TO PAY DEBTS

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Three collection suits involving two actresses and a singer, Billie Burke, Marjorie Beebe, and Bing Crosby, were filed in courts today.

The Irving Trust company, as trustee in bankruptcy of the Savoy Plaza Hotel company in New York, filed a $1,250 suit against Miss Burke, charging she failed to pay the hotel that amount.

Crosby has neglected to pay $450 due for rental of a limousine, Mrs. Violet Wildey charged in a suit she brought against him.

Dr. A. A. Hummel sued Miss Beebe for $50, charging she failed to pay him for stitching up a deep laceration in her arm which she suffered at a Hollywood party recently.

Amy Johnson Ordered by Doctor to Take Long Rest

New York, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Mrs. Amy Johnson Mollison, trans-Atlantic flyer, has been advised by her physician that it is imperative she take a complete rest of at least six or eight months and not make any long distance flights in that period. She underwent a slight operation recently. It became known today that she suffered a relapse last Tuesday, the day before she was scheduled to sail for Bermuda to join her husband, Capt. Jim Mollison.

TRAIL OF 'HEART DISEASE' DEATHS LEADS TO INQUIRY

Murder Plot Seen as Four Die.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 28.—(AP)—A trail of deaths, originally ascribed in part to heart ailments, was under investigation today by the district attorney's office in the case of Alfred L. Cline, insurance man of Glendale, Cal.

Cline, arrested a week ago, is being held at San Bernardino on a charge of grand theft in connection with the robbery of a Los Angeles man, Martin Frame, 60, who said, he had become drugged after drinking a glass of buttermilk given him by Cline.

Quantities of a hypnotic drug and also of a swift acting poison were found in the possession of Cline when he was arrested, San Bernardino county officers said.

Sift 4 Deaths.

The deaths under investigation include those of Cline's wife, Mrs. Bessie Van Sickle Cline; her brother, Lucas Brandt McCreery; the Rev. E. F. Jones, English evangelist, and Mrs. Carrie May Porter. The death of the latter at Reno, Nev., two years ago was brought into the investigation today.

The bodies of the wife and brother-in-law have been exhumed and are under chemical analysis. The remains of the evangelist and Mrs. Porter were reported to have been cremated.

In the deaths of Mrs. Cline and the evangelist, estates were left to Cline as beneficiary, $33,000 by the former and $11,000 by the latter.

Mrs. Helen Fisher of Barstow, told investigators that her brother, Lucas McCreery, had appeared in good health and death occurred shortly after he had partaken of a glass of buttermilk.

Heart Found to Be Normal.

Mrs. Cline died last month, a physician's certificate giving the cause of death as "heart failure." A preliminary examination of the exhumed remains here resulted in an official announcement that the heart appeared to have been normal.

The death of the evangelist occurred in Bakersfield, Cal., in June, 1931, while he was on a motor trip with Cline. Two days before he had signed a will at Paso Robles, Cal., bequeathing his estate to Cline. In the cremation order for the evangelist, investigators said, Cline had given a fictitious address.

Reno, Nev., authorities, today reported that Mrs. Porter had died in a hotel there, from what a doctor believed to be heart failure, on Oct. 16, 1931. This was four days after she had registered at the hotel with a man giving the name of A. L. Cline.

BEG YOUR PARDON

An item published in THE TRIBUNE on Oct. 25 gave 4856 Evans avenue as the address for William McKinley Ferguson, colored, who was arrested as a prowler in Mayor Kelly's backyard. Mrs. Florence Thomas, who lives at that address, says Ferguson never lived there.

UNIVERSITY HEAD FACES TRIAL OVER RIOTS IN WARSAW

WARSAW, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Prof. Stefan Pienkowski, president of Warsaw university, will be tried on a criminal charge growing out of recent student riots which resulted in the closing of the university.

A magistrate today fixed the responsibility on the president and announced he would be tried on a section of the penal code concerning complicity in violence resulting in grave human injuries which is punishable by a sentence up to five years in prison.

The magistrate indicated Pienkowski's failure to call in police was held against him. He was elected president of the university last autumn.

It has to have that look that says I know real smartness and not its imitation, and that my home address is as good as I know it is.

Most of all, after I've spent a careful session at the dressing table, I want to arrive places looking as I did when I started, and not as if a hurricane had hit me.

Now you see why Body by Fisher rates so high in my scoring, and why that Fisher No Draft Ventilation simply has to be on any car I'd choose!

ALL FISHER BODIES HAVE NO DRAFT VENTILATION

At any speed in any weather it changes the air in the car without drafts. Draws out smoke and stale air. Prevents dangerous interior fogging of windows or windshield. Each passenger regulates ventilation to suit himself.

OTHER BODIES DO NOT

—which means that the speed of the car sends air currents whipping in the windows—whirling against the back of the neck—increasing the hazard of colds—making one person's comfort another's discomfort—without giving real ventilation.

MICHIGAN POWER TURNS BACK CHICAGO, 28-0

OHIO RECOVERS TWO N. U. FUMBLES FOR 12-0 VICTORY

GILLMAN TAKES BALL ON 38 YARD TOUCHDOWN RUN

Leeper Drops One in End Zone.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Columbus, O., Oct. 28.—Northwestern's Wildcats were sunk by Ohio State's Buckeyes this afternoon, 12 to 0, for the reason there were no handles on the football. Purple fumbles were directly responsible for both of Ohio State's touchdowns. One fumble was made by Leeper in the first quarter while he was trying to run back a punt which he had chased into the end zone, and the other by Olson, which popped through the air in Capt. Gillman's arms for the start of a 38 yard touchdown sprint.

Northwestern made six first downs on running plays to three for Ohio State, and three first downs to one on passes. The Wildcats gained 209 yards by rushing to 106 for the Buckeyes. They made 71 yards on passes as compared to 20 by the victors. The Evanstonians were penalized 10 yards to 25 for Ohio. Despite these statistics, it is doubtful if there were many of the crowd of 34,987 spectators who have thought that the outcome should show anything but a triumph for the Ohioans.

Other Fumbles Disastrous.

There were, we say, no handles on the football. And Northwestern knew in preparing for the game that there wouldn't be. It will take a mighty partisan Purple follower to laugh off not only the two extremely disastrous fumbles, but two others which were recovered by Ohio to cause great embarrassment to the Northwestern lads.

Then there was another shortcoming which blocked Wildcat endeavor. Of 15 passes attempted, Ohio intercepted no fewer than six, including one in the closing minutes of play which Heekin grabbed on his two yard line and ran back 52 yards to destroy Northwestern's best rally of the day.

Kabealo, Pincura the Heroes.

Two new conference heroes came to the fore at this Ohio State homecoming game—John Kabealo, son of a Youngstown steel worker, who played in his first conference game last Saturday as a substitute, and Stan Pincura, another sophomore, who showed enough in the Michigan game to bench the once famous Carl Cramer.

Kabealo's punting was superb. He averaged 40 yards and the average would have been greater had he not chosen to kick the ball out of bounds inside the ten yard line on four occasions. He had great control of the ball's height as well as direction and made the usual brilliant kicking of Ollie Olson seem commonplace. Kabealo otherwise contributed much to the Wildcat downfall, one of his accomplishments being the interception of a pass and the other a recovery of a fumble.

Runs Team Well.

Pincura ran the team well, proved a great handler of punts in his rôle of safety man, and it was his characteristic following up of the ball that enabled him to make the victory touchdown, flukey as the marker may have seemed at a distance.

The first touchdown was a heartbreaker from the standpoint of the Wildcats, for they had forced Kabealo to punt from his end zone only a few minutes before the smashup. After an exchange of punts and some maneuvering Kabealo got another chance to punt, this time while standing on his 25 yard line.

That Lively Ball Again.

Kabealo kicked one of his wind cutting spirals and, after touching it, Leeper followed the ball into the end zone. He got a good hold on the ball and dodged valiantly in an attempt to avert a safety. Then he fumbled and Pincura recovered for the touchdown. The second touchdown came when Northwestern seemed to be gaining the upper hand. When Duvall came up to his own line the ball jumped out of his arms almost as though it had been socked from below by a punching bag expert.

If it had hit the ground Ohio State couldn't have run with it, as you

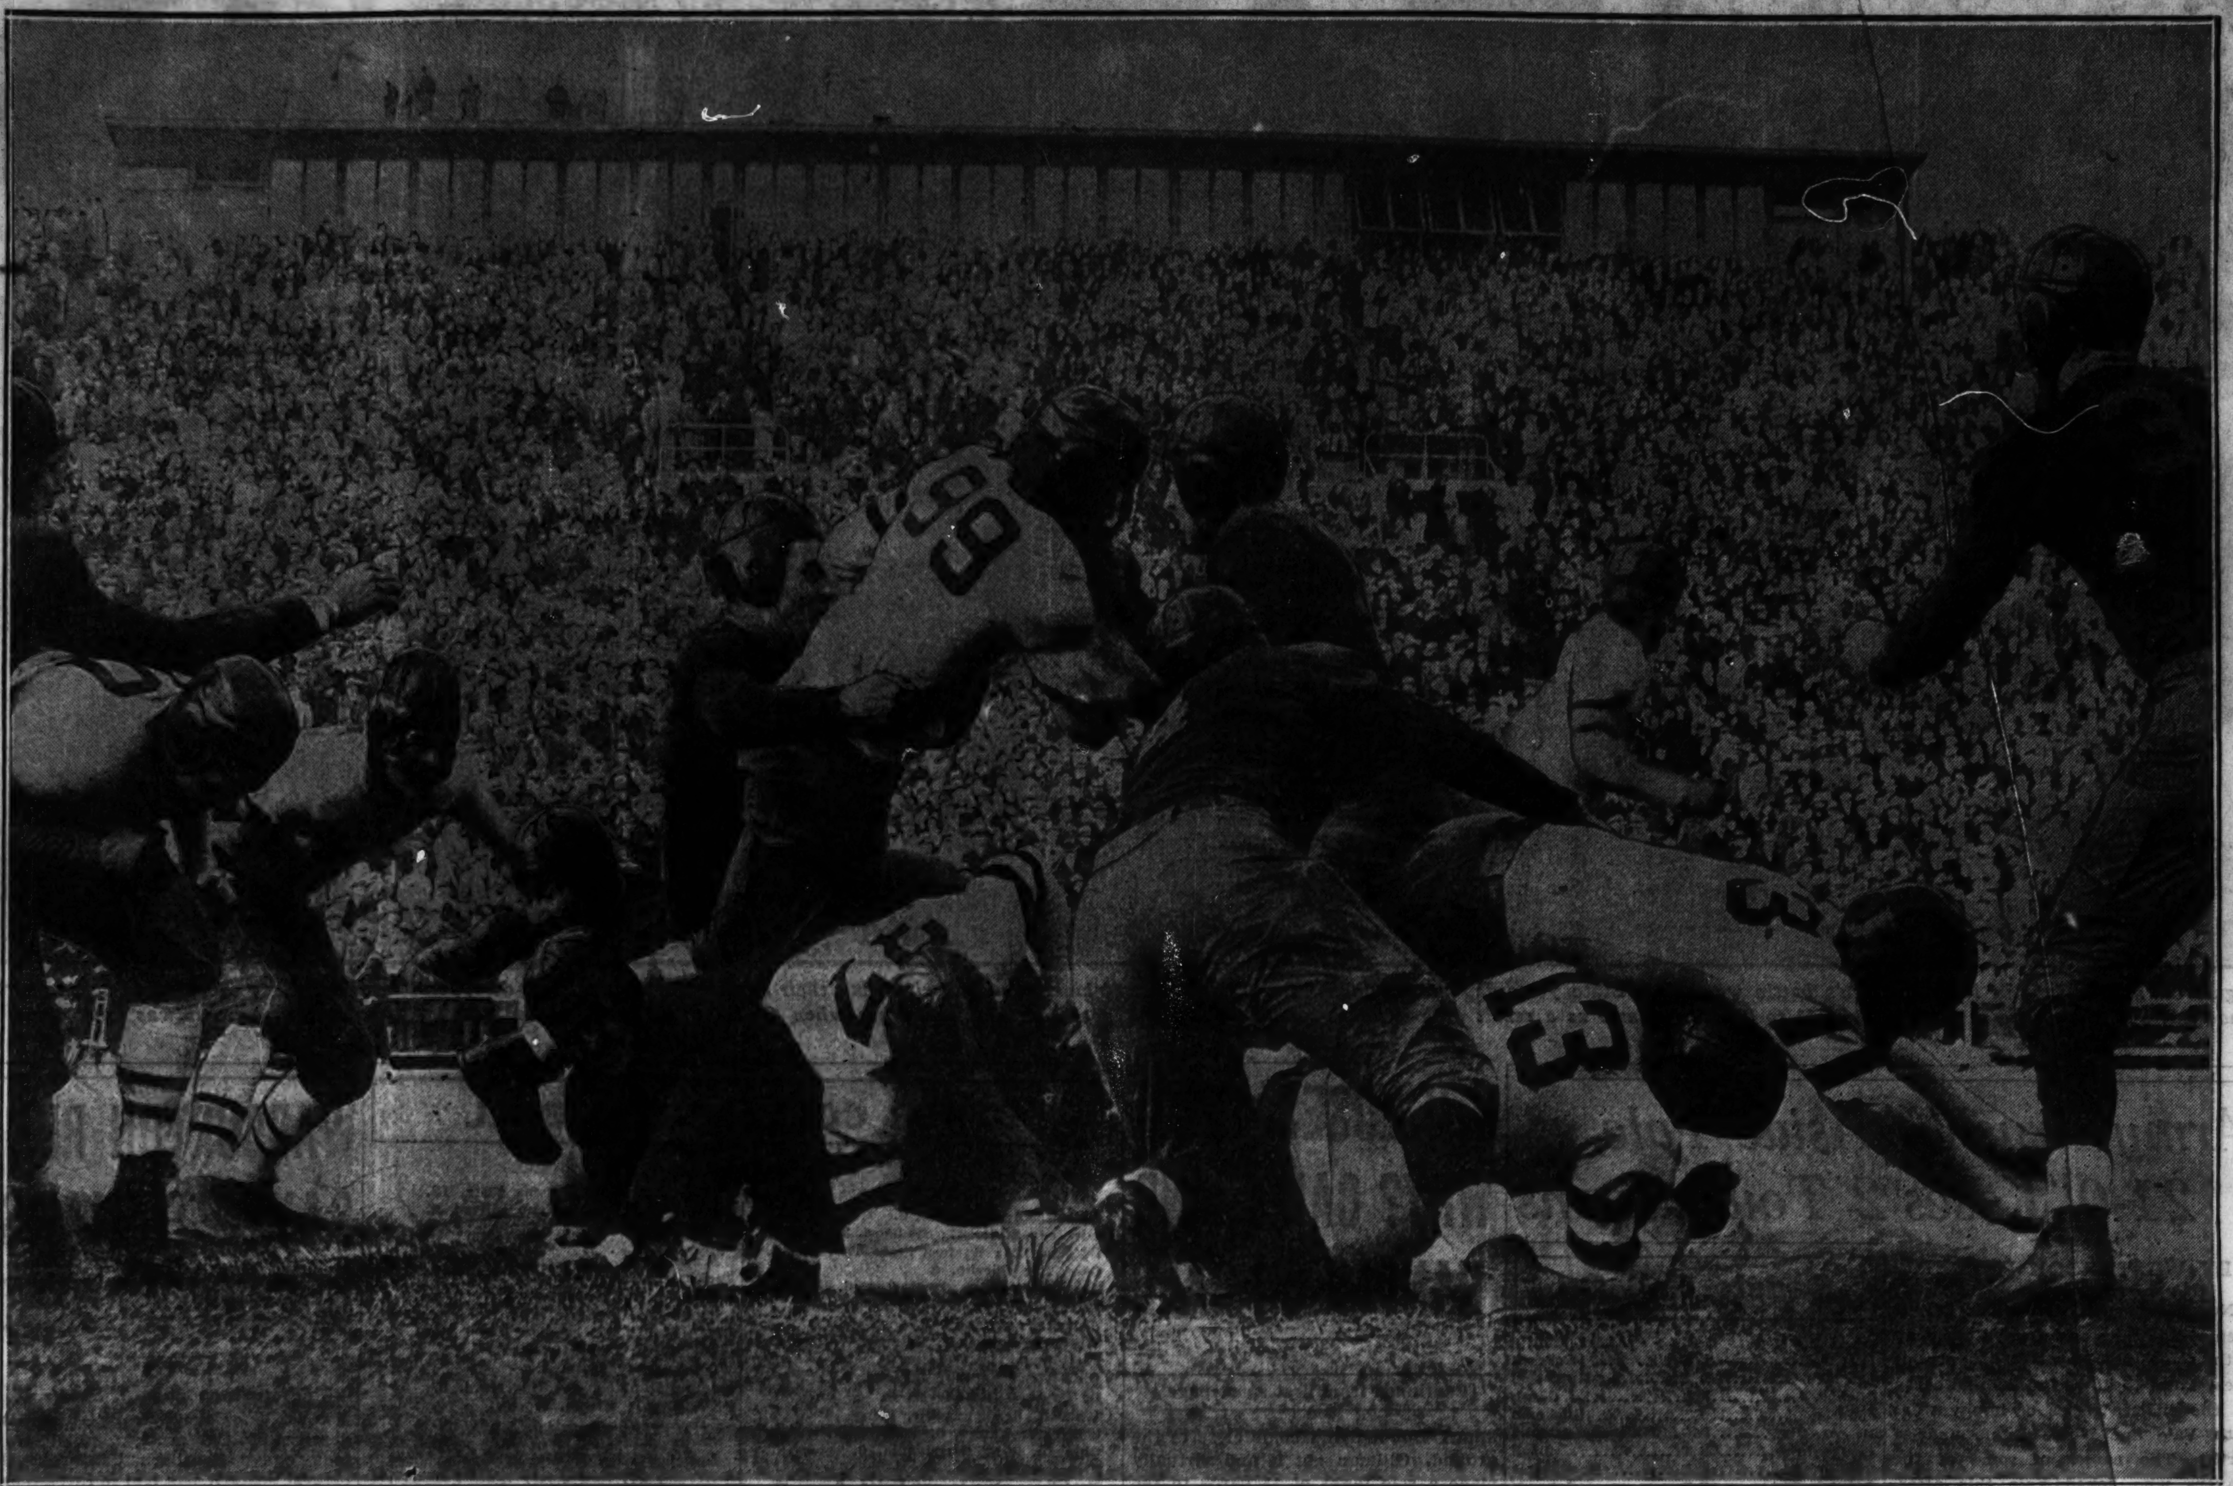
MAKING MAROONS SING "MICHIGAN RULES THE WEST"



Jay Berwanger of the University of Chicago football team finds out that all reports he had heard concerning Michigan's strong line are true. Berwanger, with other Maroon backs, was stopped cold in yesterday afternoon's battle on the Midway, won by the Wolverines, 28 to 0. Michigan scored twice in the first quarter, was kept away from the goal line for a couple of periods, and then came back with two more touchdowns in the fourth quarter.

Gophers Halt Hawkeye Title March, 19 to 7

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 28.—The whir of an airplane above Memorial stadium here caused 44,392 chins and Adam's apples to stretch upward into the somber sky of this north country this afternoon to decipher the serpentine streamer wriggling from its rudder. The streamer read "Go to it, Minnesota! Shock Iowa." Within the next hour Minnesota's hardy Gophers had obeyed the streamer and the campus sentiment by practically electrocuting Iowa's ambitious young Hawkeyes, 19 to 7.

Minnesota, after stumbling through two profitless ties with Indiana and Purdue, appeared to be its own rambuctious self in handing Iowa, the surprise team of the conference before today, its first defeat. The manner in which the Gophers scored all three of their touchdowns gave rise to the suspicion that their three remaining conference foes—Northwestern, Michigan, and Wisconsin—had better get set for a team which seems to have only one destination in mind, and that is their opponents' goal line.

Julius Escapes a Licking.

It was Julius Alfonse, the Cumberland, Wis., boy whose big brother promised to whale the daylights out of him if he didn't make good with the Gophers, who first made contact on the "Shock Iowa" program. He applied a double charge, scoring the first two Minnesota touchdowns, but not, it should be pointed out, without superb blocking. Babe Levoir, who came into the game in the second half, slipped through the Iowa line without an introduction for the third touchdown.

A tow-headed young man from Rice Lake, Wis., Pug Lund, who used to oppose Alfonse in prep games, played the football game of the day, and the crowd rose as one when he left for a recess in the third quarter.

There was one Hawkeye who proved immune to the local electrical storm, and even the home folks admitted it. He was Dick Crayne, the full back, who had been keeping Iowa up there to date. He intercepted a Minnesota pass and returned it unattended 50 yards for the losers' only touchdown, outpunted Lund, and was the most effective workman of his team on defense.

The Iowa line, from tackle to tackle, also did its best against the smashing Gopher backs, twice stopping the home

PURDUE'S SPEED, POWER DEFEAT BADGERS, 14 TO 0

BY FRENCH LANE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis, Oct. 28.—Purdue's Boilermakers put on no acts of chivalry on Camp Randall field this afternoon as they took the edge off the University of Wisconsin homecoming celebration by smacking the Badgers down, 14 to 0.

The Boilermakers didn't do it in a brutal way, however, for they let the Badger old grads cheer themselves hoarse during the early part of the game, took just a little zip out of their whoops by scoring seven points in the second period, then waited until late in the last quarter to put the game away with the last touchdown.

Thus the merry Badger alumni marched off the field behind the big Cardinal band singing "On Wisconsin" hardly realizing what might have happened if the Boilermakers had turned on all the speed and the power they appeared to possess.

Score on Two Sensational Plays.

Two sensational plays—one of them a spectacular 41 yard run to a touchdown by Jim Carter, Purdue half back, the other a 40 yard pass, Hecker to Purvis, which brought another touchdown—gave Purdue the victory and sent thrills up and down the spines of everybody in the homecoming crowd of 30,000.

The touchdowns were accomplished so easily against a faltering and crippled Wisconsin team it was evident the Badgers might have been buried under a much larger score had the Boilermakers been allowed to turn loose their real punch more often.

The weather man turned out to be no falsifier when he assured bright, crisp weather for the game. Early in the day, however, it appeared he might be wrong. Homecomers awoke this morning in the midst of a brisk snowstorm. Then came rain, which washed away the snow. Later on the sunshine he had promised broke forth just about the time the homecoming crowd began to move toward Camp Randall. When the crowd had draped itself around the playing field conditions were ideal.

Hold Purdue in First Period.

Play was fast, yet of the hard smashing variety from the beginning. The Badgers encouraged homecomers by playing the Boilermakers to a standstill throughout the first period. The second quarter was not far

TONY CANZONERI WHIPS KLICK IN 10 ROUND FIGHT

New York, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Tony Canzoneri, former lightweight titleholder, won a decision over Frankie Klick of San Francisco in ten rounds, here tonight. There were no knockdowns. Tony weighed 133½; Klick 133.

The decision was unpopular with the fans, but it was the unanimous verdict of both judges and the referee. Tony made a fast start and a strong finish, but from the third to the eighth rounds Klick was able to hold his own and at times do even a bit better than that.

In the eight round semi-final, Lew Feldman, 130, New York, outpointed Patsy Rubinetti, 136¾, after being knocked down twice in the early rounds.

Varias Milling of the Philippines won a decision over Frankie [Kid] Covelli of Brooklyn, in six rounds.

PITT RIDES DOWN NOTRE DAME LINE TO WIN 14 TO 0

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Notre Dame, Ind., Oct. 28.—The Fighting Irish of Notre Dame will be happy when Mike Sebastian of Sharon, Pa., converts his cleated shoes from tools of the trade into trophies. The Italian ball lugger got loose again today in a bigger edition of his 43 yard exploit in 1932 and proved the key man in a battle that lifted Pittsburgh to a 14 to 0 triumph over Notre Dame. The game attracted 25,000.

It was the second consecutive time the Panthers have clawed the Irish into submission and the first time Notre Dame has faded out twice in a row since Army and Southern California collaborated in a similar achievement in 1931.

Score Is Deceiving.

Notre Dame was whipped by a vaster margin than the score indicates. It penetrated deep into Pitt territory on rare occasions and then was stopped short by defensive brilliance. None of these serious thrusts came until after Pitt was smugly complacent as the result of a dazzling outbreak in the second quarter. That's when Sebastian did his stuff—a 75 yard run. It wasn't many minutes later that the second touchdown went over.

The whole story is one of lines, despite the brilliance of the Panther ball carriers. Notre Dame's line was completely eclipsed. The Pitt backs drifted through large holes from start to finish. The line was so soft that Pitt didn't have to try its speed at the ends. The Panthers also drifted through persistently whenever Notre Dame had the ball. Steady changes in the Irish line brought no improvement.

Because of this difference the Notre Dame backs never could get started. Andy Pilney, a Chicago lad, flashed occasionally because of individual ability. Don Elser, the bulky full back, did it persistently, solely on his own brute power, but his gains were usually so limited that the coveted first downs didn't pile up quickly enough to be profitable.

Pitt All the Way.

Statistics of what happened can tell the story better than fancy words.

Pitt accomplished 13 first downs, against seven for Notre Dame. The victors gained 274 yards from scrimmage, whereas the Irish had to be content with 193, half of it when they

ONLY SIX PLAYS ARE NEEDED FOR 1ST TOUCHDOWN

Maroons Brace in 2d, 3d Periods.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Six plays in the opening period, one an important forward pass, decided the Michigan-Chicago football game yesterday afternoon at Stagg field. This opening attack by the Wolverines was followed by three more touchdowns, and Michigan registered its second conference triumph of the season, 28 to 0.

Twenty-four thousand saw the one sided contest, and while Michigan was not at all impressive, particularly in its running plays, the Wolverines' hope of a fourth consecutive Western conference championship seemed well founded on defensive power and offensive passing, the formula pursued these many years.

Line Takes It Easy.

Chicago had been lightly regarded. Perhaps this accounted for the lethargic line play of the Michigan forwards. But the Wolverine ball carriers, save for two marches following Chicago misplays, did nothing of consequence. They had little help once the line of scrimmage was passed.

Chicago's only brilliance was a second half stand on defense which turned back Michigan three times near the goal line. But when Michigan decided to pass, Chicago was as impotent in breaking up those passes as it was in completing its own.

Chicago's offense was negligible. Less than 60 yards were gained from scrimmage, principally the result of one pass and one run, both in the final quarter. The Maroons' shift, an interchange of positions, did not confuse Michigan in the least as it went about the business of finishing the hour of play in preparation for the battle next week at Champaign with Illinois, now the only other undefeated and untied Big Ten team.

Maroons Fail to Block.

Jay Berwanger had less success than a week ago against Purdue. Pete Zimmer broke away for one run in the last quarter, but neither could hope to crash Michigan's line when their mates missed blocks entirely or ran by their opponents. Repeatedly Chicago's ball carrier, at the conclusion of a line thrust, would be the only Maroon player on the ground, ample proof of inefficient blocking.

Michigan might have been accused of pulling its punches except that the Wolverines finally broke loose in the fourth period to double the score. The opening drive had swept Chicago backward so easily that none could understand the stalemate of the second and third quarters.

The game was decided as soon as Michigan got possession of the ball. Chicago received the kickoff, and, failing to gain, kicked on third down. Berwanger's punt, partly blocked, was downed on Chicago's 40 yard line. Two thrusts by Michigan accomplished nothing. Then Wistert, left tackle, exchanged positions with Fred Petoskey, left end. He came back on an end around play and passed to Louis Westover, who was tackled on Chicago's 9 yard line.

Bernard Clears the Way.

Herman Everhardus, the flying Dutchman whose slashing drives were material in turning back Cornell and Ohio State, brought the ball to Chicago's 2 yard line in two tries. From here Capt. Stanley Fay followed the broad shoulders of Charles Bernard across the goal line. Everhardus' kick from placement, with Fay holding, gave Michigan a 7 to 0 lead.

Again Chicago received. Again the Maroons could not gain, and after Berwanger's punt Michigan paraded 58 yards for a second touchdown.

Westover started the procession with a sprint to Chicago's 27 yard line. Fay and Jack Regeczi advanced 10 yards in two plays. Four more line smashes between the tackles, the last two by Everhardus, and the ball was three yards from the goal. Everhardus then ran wide, cut back inside of Chicago's right tackle, and went across the line untouched. His point from placement set the electric lights on the scoreboard at: Michigan, 14; Chicago, 0.

Chicago Hopes Soar, Fade.

After this advantage, accomplished in 14 plays, Michigan either lost the

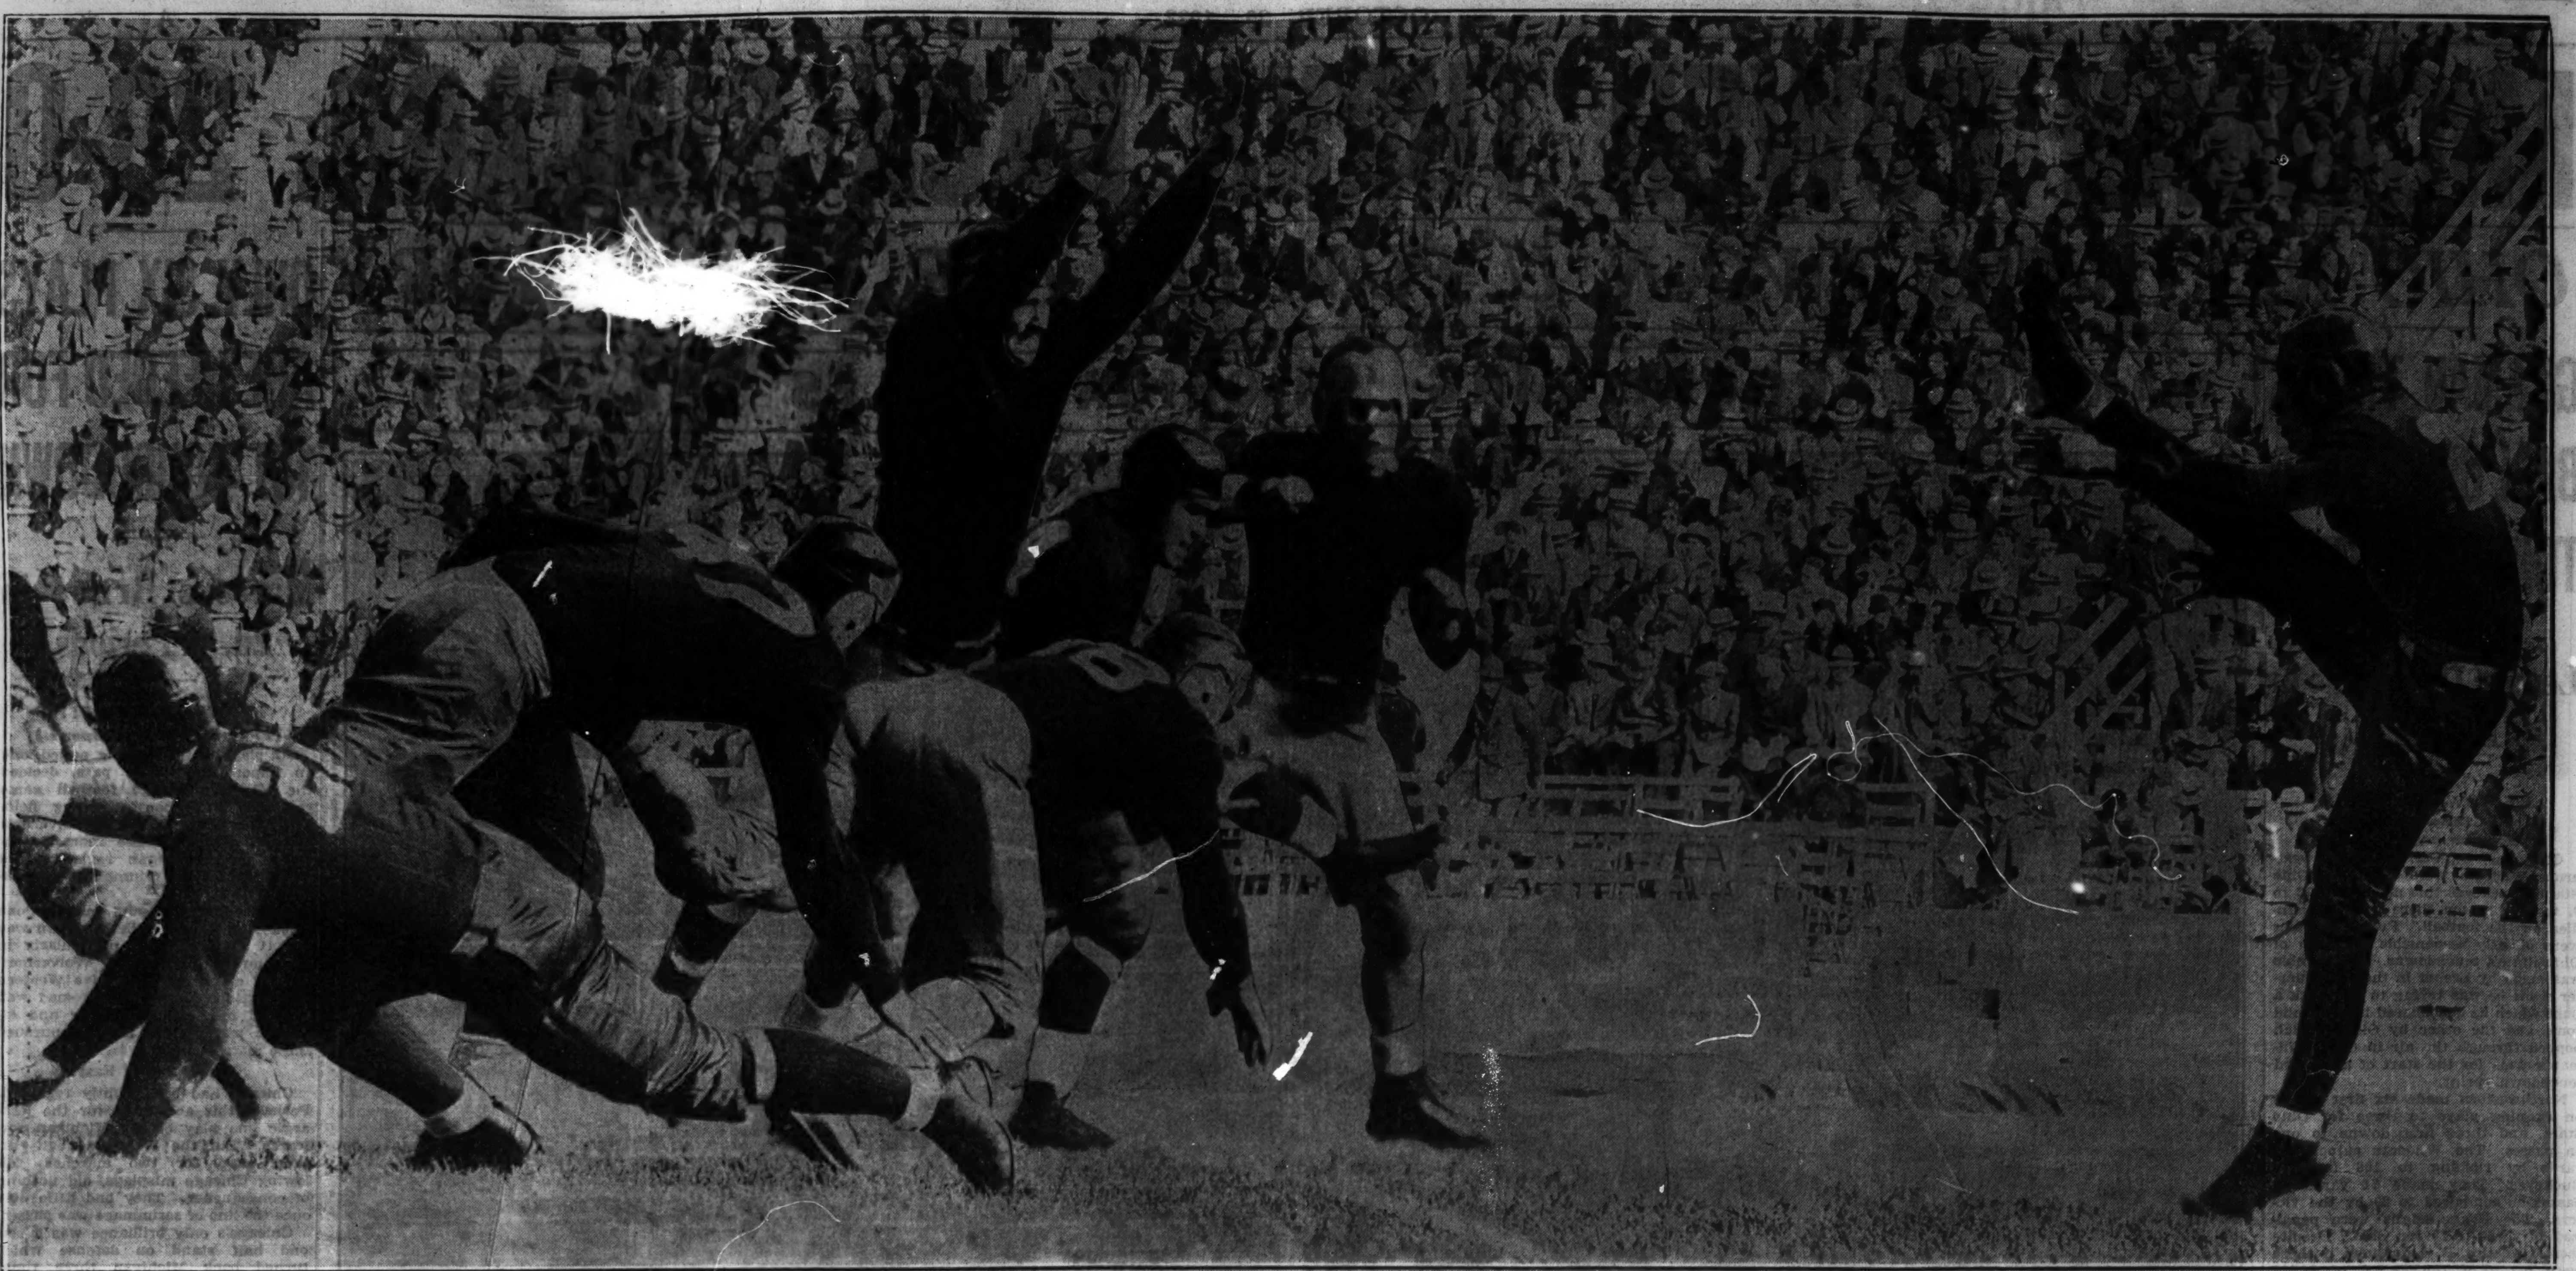
IT TAKES MORE THAN KICKING TO REPULSE A POWERFUL OHIO STATE TEAM



Ollie Olson of Northwestern gets off a long punt in Northwestern's battle with Ohio State yesterday at Columbus, O. The Wildcats' kicking was all right, but their handling of the ball was disappointing to every one except the Buckeye partisans who chortled over the manner in which Ohio State made its touchdowns. The first one in Ohio State's 12 to 0 victory came as a result of a Wildcat fumble behind the goal line and the other when Co-Capt. Gillman plucked the ball out of the air as it was flying from the arms of a Northwestern back and raced 38 yards to the goal line.

NEBRASKA WINS GAME OF FUMBLES FROM OKLAHOMA

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 28.—(AP)—In a game marred by fumbling Nebraska defeated Oklahoma, 16 to 7, to hold its Big Six leadership.

The Cornhuskers played heads up football in streaks. One was on the first play of the game, when Hub Boswell, half back, recovered an untouched Nebraska kickoff for a touchdown. Another was midway in the first half, when they mixed their passes and running plays to march 72 yards for their other touchdown.

Oklahoma returned after the half to stop the Cornhuskers' attack and to take advantage of Boswell's fumble on his own 19 yard line to send Bob Dunlap across for the first 1933 touchdown against Nebraska. An Oklahoma fumble a few minutes later gave George Sauer, Nebraska full back, a chance to score a field goal to keep the game safe.

Army Brushes Aside Yale, 21-0; Loses 2 Touchdowns

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 28.—It seems that they can always come up with some new football players at West Point to fill the ranks and carry on the endless series of happy wars with Yale and Notre Dame and so forth. The names of some of the players who licked Yale this afternoon, 21 to 0, with two touchdowns above that figure to throw away on penalties, are Paul Johnson, Jack Buckler, Ed Grove, Ralph Bucknam, Travis Brown, and Joe Stancook.

Not all these names are strangers to the public eye and ear and the fingers of the linotype men, but the boys mentioned and some others were not generally supposed to be as good as they were this afternoon when they walloped a first class enemy of the traditional type in the presence of a Tom Thumb attendance of 50,000, scant. But always at the Army school when the big, famous football players go out to their life of genteel poverty among the troops, leaving the point behind, it seems that next year is going to be a very dreary year in football for the U. S. Military academy.

Always Can Rattle Along.

And then such happenings happen as occurred this afternoon, amid the autumn glories of the New England foliage, to remind one and all that there is never a man so good but that the world can rattle along without him.

The cadets were downright contemptuous in the way they set about running up a score for themselves. They kicked off and pretty soon Stan Fuller, the Yale back, sent them a punt against the wind which gave the Army the ball on Yale's 32 yard line. Buckler hit the line for four yards, and passed to Stancook, the full back, for a first down at the 15 yard line. On the Army's third offensive play of the game, Johnson scurried through a hole in the left side of the Yale line and rambled over the goal, amid warlike noises from the corps of cadets, sitting in a gray block on the sunny side of the house.

Come Right Back.

This sound turned to a growly roar as the officials not only disallowed the touchdown, but also set the Army back to the 30 yard line on a penalty for holding on the play. But without the waste of a single down, Buckler shied a long pass to Brown, who caught the ball on the goal line and flopped cozily into the end zone for a touchdown which nobody could deny. Brown kicked the extra point.

They were back in the Yale country again before the period ended, and, with a first down at the 17 yard line, and the sluggish Yale defense wobbling around before them, missed another chance when Buckler threw a pass on first down which grounded in the end zone, giving Yale the ball.

The Army's second official touchdown occurred at the end of a 65 yard sweep in which Johnson made 20 yards on one pass from Buckler and nine yards and a first down on another. This first down brought the ball to Yale's 6 yard line. The Yale wall stood fast against two slams to the tune of old gloomy howl of "Hold 'em Yale," but on third down this Johnson went bombing right through the Yale middle and when the wreckage was cleared away, there he was with the touchdown.

Wind Whips Banners.

Buckler kicked this goal against the wind. It was a strong, whippy wind, too, which had the big Yale and Army banners up on the rim standing out like sheet metal.

Both teams sent in a large, scattering detachment of replacements along toward the end of the first half. In Yale's case almost any change was likely to improve matters. The new crowd of Yales changed their minds and tore into the Cadets to rush the ball about 75 yards. Tommy Curtin, the Yale back, finding nobody free to accept a pass, and the Army all engaged in covering receivers, tucked the old squash under his wing and raced off on a 20 yard gain of his own, without benefit of interference.

Curtin threw a lateral to Nikkel for a 16 yard gain and then kicked off 28 yards for himself on another lone expedition, apparently informal and strictly impromptu. The Yales were only seven yards from the goal with a first down when the whistle caught them at half time.

Halt Yale at Goal.

Stancook's gilt helmet gave off a glint of something not at all like glory when he tried to field a punt which was bound for the end zone in the third period and fumbled it into Yale's possession on his four yard line. Clare Curtin, the Yale tackle, recovered the ball, and Tommy Curtin, on the next play, shoved it two yards closer. But on third down the Yales tried something fancy, a three handed lateral pass, and Paul Burlingame, the Army end, fouled up the play for them and got the ball for West Point.

The final official Army touchdown occurred in the last period, when the West Pointers got the ball on a punt at their own 45 yard line and Buckler flipped a 25 yard throw to Grove. This youth, an understudy, found himself free and clear, as the realtors say, and crossed the line in haste but untouched. So Buckler kicked another one and the score was as you see it, 21 to 0.

Johnson carried the ball across again in this period, but some one on his team was offside, and though this happened on first down from Yale's 4 yard line, the boys couldn't make good this time.

Louisiana State Holds Vanderbilt to 7 to 7 Tie know. But it didn't come close to the ground. Gillman got it and virtually made a solo flight of 38 yards to the Wildcat goal line.

Strike Called Off.

The Buckeyes, who had threatened to strike until squelched by George W. Rightmire, president of the university, announced before the game that they had not eased their fight on State Representative Grant P. Ward, lawyer, football reporter, ex-coach, and radio announcer. The players had threatened their strike on the demand that Ward be forbidden from announcing their games, the opposition being based on Ward's criticisms of the head coach after the debacle at Michigan a week ago.

Just before the game the players said they had decided not to carry out their strike plans through deference to the attitude of President Rightmire, but that they would persist in their opposition to Ward until they "get him away from the microphone."

Score in First Quarter.

The first touchdown, the one that long will linger in Mr. Leeper's memory, came about two minutes before the close of the first period, after an earlier warding off of trouble for both teams through the splendid kicking by Kabealo and Olson.

Shortly before the touchdown, however, Olson put the Buckeyes in a jam by punting out of bounds on Ohio's five yard line. Kabealo followed with a yard at center and then dropped back into the middle of his end zone and punted over Leeper's head, the ball bouncing to Northwestern's 41 yard line.

After failure to gain Olson kicked to Pincura who returned nine yards to Ohio's 28 yard line. Three plays, including a bad pass from center to Kabealo, failed to gain first down but an off side by Northwestern gave Ohio the ball on the 37 yard line.

Great Punt Starts Fireworks.

Then came the big surprise. Kabealo dropped back to his 25 yard line and kicked a wonderful punt straight down the field. Leeper touched it, but not enough to retard the ball. It rolled into the end zone with Leeper after it. Eventually he seized the ball and zig-zagged back and forth in the end zone in a frantic attempt to avert a safety. Just as it seemed the Wildcat was about to escape the cage he was downed, and as he went to earth in the end zone he dropped the ball. Pincura pounced on it for a touchdown. Vuchinich's try for the extra point was blocked by Jens.

Shortly after the start of the second period Ohio State negotiated the first down of the game, aided by a penalty on Northwestern for holding on defense. This put the ball on Ohio's 32 yard line. An end run, a pass, and a line plunge failed to gain for Ohio, whereupon Kabealo punted to Sullivan, who fumbled, Rosequist recovering on Northwestern's 32 yard line. The Ohio threat was abated when Pincura attempted to pass over the goal line on fourth down, and falling short, the ball went to the Wildcats on their own 32 yard line.

Gillman Grabs Fumble.

For a few seconds the Wildcats seemed to be clicking. During this interval Cruice made nine yards through tackle and Olson made it a first down on Northwestern's 44 yard line. Further progress seemed imminent by virtue of a four yard gain by Sullivan and an offside penalty for Ohio. Then, once more in stalked the fumble bugaboo. Olson took the ball, but when he hit off his left guard he let loose of it. It popped into the arms of Gillman within a yard of terra firma and the Buckeye co-captain found little hindrance in spinning around and legging it for 38 yards to a touchdown. Vuchinich's try for the point was wide.

Early in the third period Augustson joined the fumbling crew. He dropped the ball and Smith recovered on Northwestern's 44 yard line, after which a pass, Kabealo to Heekin, made 13 yards, giving Ohio first down on Northwestern's 31 yard line. Smith promptly added another first down on an eleven yard sprint around left end. This march was halted, however, when Tangora intercepted a forward pass and was downed on his 14 yard line.

Wildcats Make Threat.

Near the close of the final period Northwestern made its greatest threat of the afternoon when a pass, Olson to Cruice, was good for a 30 yard gain to Ohio's 33 yard line and another pass, Cruice to Leeper, was allowed on Ohio interference, putting the ball on Ohio's nine yard line. This chance to avoid a shutout disappeared when Heekin grabbed an Olson pass on Ohio's two yard line and ran 52 yards toward the Purple goal before being overtaken by Kawal.

WARBURTON RUN SAVES TROJANS IN FOURTH PERIOD

Berkeley, Cal., Oct. 28.—The University of California football team today gave Southern California the biggest scare it has had in three years, but by dint of a brilliant 60 yard run by Cotton Warburton in the fourth period, U. S. C. won, 6 to 3.

California scored its three points on a place kick in the first period. The Bears' chance came when Stewart returned Southern California's opening kickoff to the Trojan 18 yard line. Two bucks at the line gained five yards and left California directly in front of the goal posts. Arleigh Williams then booted the points that gave California an advantage Southern California was unable to break through until the final period.

Warburton Gets Going.

The game was only two minutes old when California scored and there were only eight minutes left when Warburton got loose for the touchdown which meant the ball game. At that time Warburton received a California punt on his own 28 yard mark and returned it nine yards. He followed by going off right tackle on a spinner to his own 40 yard line. Once again Warburton spun in his tracks and swung into the right side of his own line. Shaking one tackler and taking a single sidestep, Warburton was away.

For two periods the California line outcharged and outmaneuvered the Southern California line. In the third period the Trojans got going. Southern California's passes brought 75,000 spectators to their feet time and again. Once the overhead attack took the Trojans to California's 5 yard line.

Misses Second Field Goal.

Shortly before the close of the game Warburton misjudged a rolling punt and fumbled. Three Bears slid after the ball, but Warburton's teammate, McNeish, recovered on his own five yard line. The Bears rushed Clemens so hard his punt from behind his line sailed out of bounds on the 16 yard mark. With scoring ground only a short distance away California lost four yards on two line plays and then tried a place kick in an effort to at least tie the score. Williams dropped back to about his 27 yard line for the boot, but the ball sailed to the right of the goal posts.

A rain soaked crowd of 12,000 saw Smith boot his first field goal high and true from the 14 yard line in the first period. Again in the third period with the ball on the 14 yard line Smith kicked perfectly and Washington had the game sewed up. The victory was a stunning upset to Stanford's conference hopes and a tribute to Washington's fighting comeback.

OREGON STATE WINS.

Corvallis, Ore., Oct. 28. — (AP) — A blocked punt which rolled behind the end zone in the second period gave Oregon State college a 2 to 0 victory over Washington State today.

The eleven Iron Men, who last week fought the University of Southern California to a standstill, battled together again until a spine injury took out William Tomscheck, left tackle, just after the winning play. He was replaced by Stanley McClurg. It was the only substitution for Oregon State.

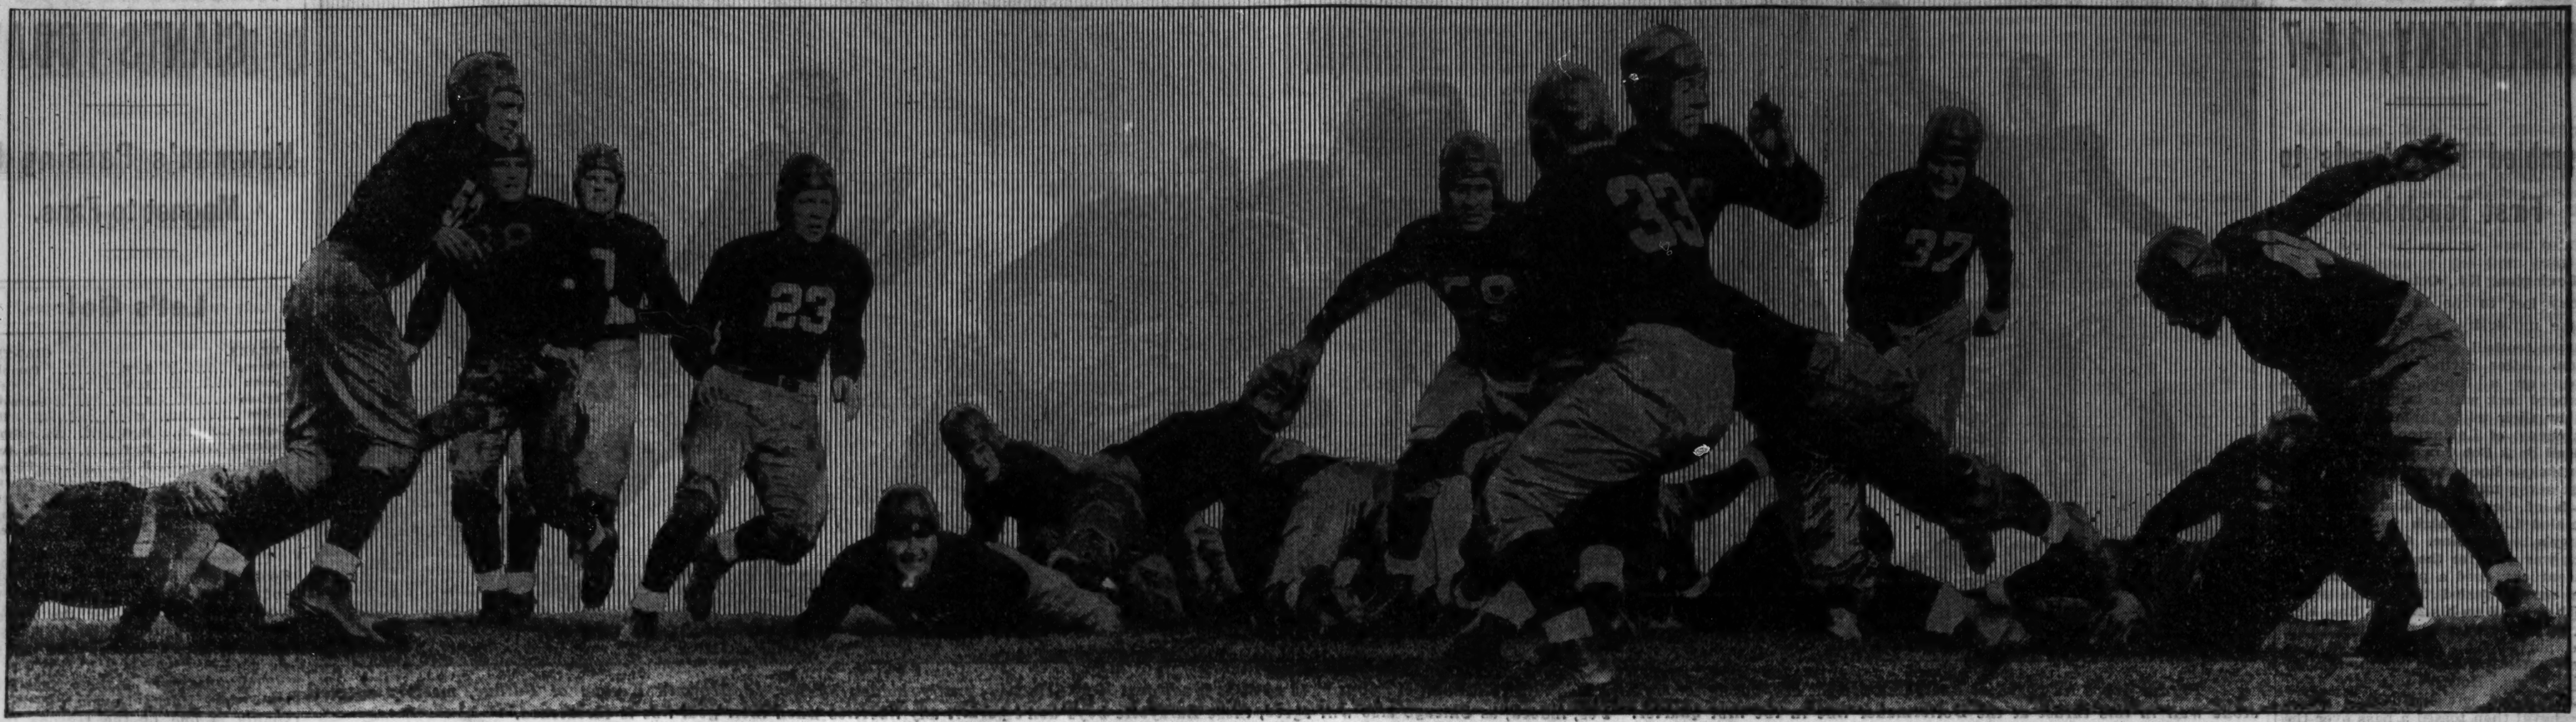
Long Run and Pass Enable Purdue to Defeat Wisconsin—Notre Dame Whipped by Pittsburgh



[TRIBUNE Photo.]

PUZZLE: HOW DID JIM CARTER EVER WRIGGLE OUT OF THIS TRAP AND RACE 41 YARDS FOR PURDUE'S FIRST TOUCHDOWN IN THRILLING 14 TO 0 VICTORY OVER WISCONSIN AT MADISON YESTERDAY? Bob Schiller (33) of the Badgers appeared to have a grip on fleet Boilermaker half back, but in a twinkling Carter was free and off to the goal line. The spectacular run occurred in the second quarter, but, for good measure, Purdue sent across another touchdown in the fourth period on Fred Hecker's long pass to Duane Purvis. The homecoming festivities at Madison drew a gathering of 30,000 who were cheering for the Badgers to snap out of a losing streak of two games. (Story on page 1, Sports.)

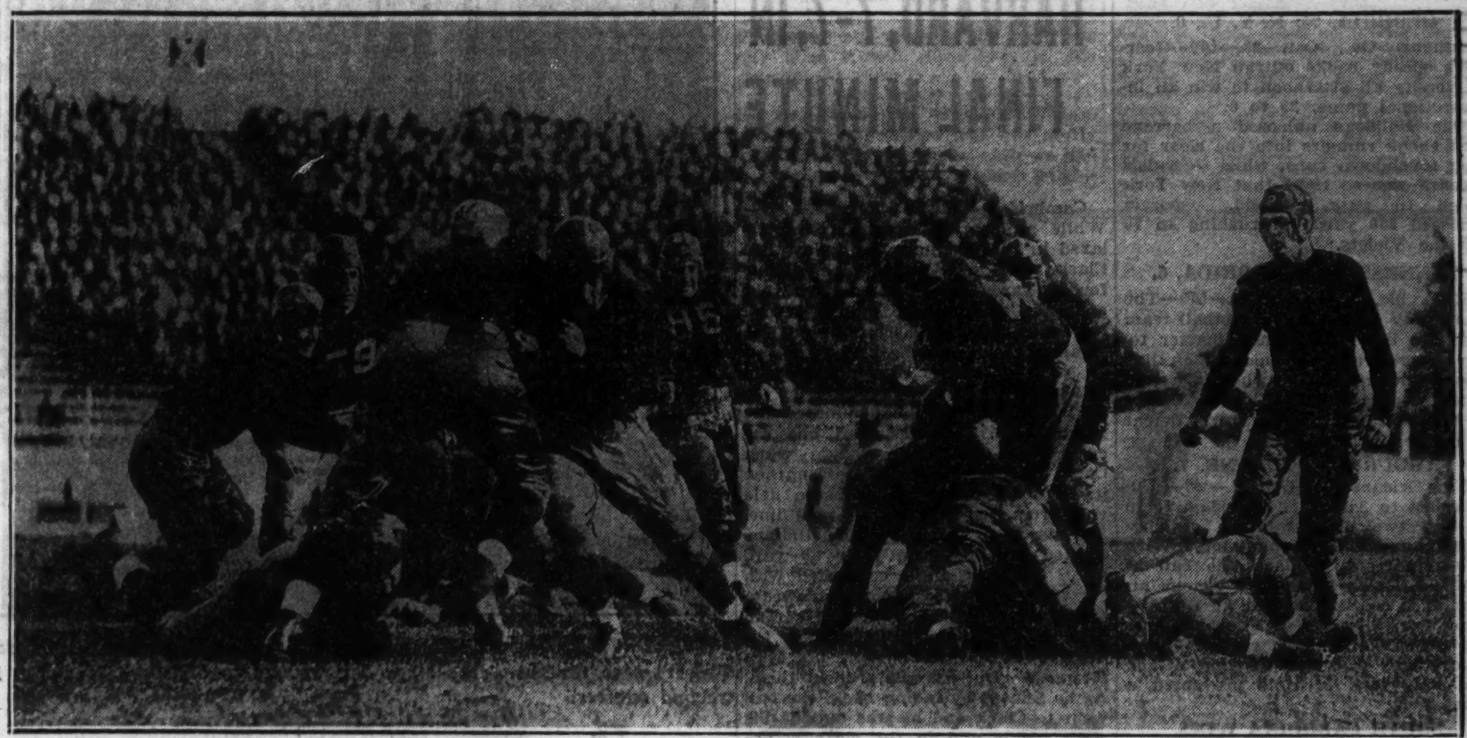
NOTRE DAME PUNCTURES PITTSBURGH'S DEFENSE WITH FORWARD PASS IN SECOND QUARTER. Tony Mazziotti, sophomore quarter back, making his first start of the season for Irish after being on injured list, takes an aerial from Andy Pilney during game which was won by Pitt, 14 to 0, at Notre Dame yesterday. No. 16, who is near Mazziotti, is Robert Hogan of the Panthers. (Story on page 1, Sports.)

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

POINT AFTER TOUCHDOWN SAILS OVER CHARGING NOTRE DAME TEAM FOLLOWING PITTSBURGH'S SECOND SCORE. Place kick by Henry Weisenbaugh clears the tugging squads and goes between the uprights for the fourteenth and final point of yesterday's battle at South Bend. The Notre Dame players are: No. 48, Nick Lukats; No. 80, Don Elser; No. 84, Harry Wunsch; No. 51, Tom Gorman; No. 68, Joe Pivarnik, and No. 12, Ray Brancheau. It was the second defeat of the year for Notre Dame, both touchdowns in the 14 to 0 setback coming in the second quarter.



BOILERMAKERS IN FRONT AND BACK, SO IT'S TIME FOR BADGER BALL CARRIER TO HALT. Lynn Jordan of Wisconsin is about ready to sprawl over a Purdue tackler after a short gain in the second quarter. Jordan won his spurs in the Iowa game and again distinguished himself yesterday, although Capt. Hal Smith and Karl Schuelke shaded him in yards gained. [TRIBUNE Photo.] (Story on page 1, Sports.)

SAVES TROJAN HIDES. Cotton Warburton runs 60 yards for touchdown that wins, 6 to 3, for Southern California.

IOWA'S TITLE HOPES CRUSHED BY POWERFUL MINNESOTA ELEVEN. Joe Law tries a smash at the line in game at Minneapolis yesterday but is buried under a mass of piled up Iowa interference and Minnesota tacklers. The Gophers won, 19 to 7, for their first Big Ten victory of the year. Two previous encounters with conference teams ended in ties. (Story on page 1, Sports.)

MAROONS' BACK KEPT BOTTLED UP BY AN ALERT WOLVERINE DEFENSE. Capt. Pete Zimmer has ideas of going places around end in the second quarter, but his interference is not having much luck in removing the Michigan wingman from his path. Michigan won, 28 to 0. (Story on page 1, Sports.)

COX SCORES TWO AS DUKE WHIPS KENTUCKY, 14-7

Fumbled Punt Leads to First Touchdown.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Kentucky lost to the Blue Devils from Duke university, 14 to 7, in a hard fought football game here this afternoon. After giving Duke a touchdown on a fumble, the Wildcats snapped back with a brilliant offensive led by their triple threat man, Ralph Kercheval of Lexington.

Full Back Bob Cox of Duke smashed Kentucky's line for a touchdown in the first seven minutes of play after Pug Bach of Lexington, Kentucky half, fumbled Laney's high punt on Kentucky's 14 yard line. Cornelius' place kick was good for the extra point.

Kentucky used a passing attack in the second period to tie the score. With the ball on his 29 yard line, Kercheval shot a pass to Joe Rupert, end, that put the ball on Duke's 46 yard line. After Kercheval hit the line for four yards, Robert Pritchard, half back, skirted left end for 22 yards. Kercheval then tossed a pass over the Duke goal line into the arms of John Frye, right end, for a touchdown. Kercheval place kicked the extra point.

GEORGIA, 25; N. Y. U., 0.

Athens, Ga., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Georgia's speedy backs outran New York university all afternoon to win an intersectional game, 25 to 0.

The Bulldogs unloosed a barrage that shook runners into the clear for long touchdown runs, while Georgia's defense was so tight that New York failed to pass midfield. Georgia amassed 360 yards in rushing to 70 for the Violets.

TENNESSEE, 13; FLORIDA, 6.

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 28.—(AP)—The University of Tennessee football team came to life in the final quarter today, scored two touchdowns on line drives and beat its Southeastern conference opponent, the Florida 'Gators, 13 to 6. It was Florida's first defeat of the season.

AUBURN, 13; TULANE, 7.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 28.—(AP)— Tulane lost to Auburn here today, 13 to 7, but two more minutes of play might have told another story. With five minutes to go and the ball in midfield, Tulane opened a vicious attack that carried the ball to the five yard line when the whistle blew ending the game. Auburn was paralyzed before the passing and line attack and only lack of time prevented a touchdown.

SOUTH CAROLINA WINS.

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Scoring in the second and fourth periods, South Carolina defeated Virginia Tech today, 12 to 0. Victory enabled South Carolina to retain a perfect standing in the Southern conference and was the first conference defeat of the season for Virginia Tech.

V. M. I. WINS, 13-12.

University, Va., Oct. 28.—(AP)—The Virginia Military Institute won, 13 to 12, over University of Virginia today, after coming from behind.

Billy Smith, Cadet quarter back, shot a pass to Tucker Watkins, who took it on the run in the end zone for the winning touchdown in the closing minutes of play. He held the ball as Meredith Urich place kicked the deciding point.

T. J. HICKEY IS ARRESTED AS CAR HITS LAMP POST

Thomas J. Hickey, 72 years old, 1444 Fargo avenue, president of the American association, was arrested for damaging city property yesterday afternoon after the automobile he was driving crashed into an ornamental lighting standard at Sheridan road and South boulevard, Evanston.

Hickey told Evanston police he had been traveling east in South boulevard and slowed down for the corner, when his car was struck in the rear by another eastbound machine, driven by Richard T. Davis, 1246 Hinman avenue, Evanston. The Hickey car was driven 60 feet by the force of the impact, getting out of control and striking the lamp standard. Damage to the pole was estimated a $160.

Davis took Mrs. Hickey, who was riding with her husband, to her home. Police announced they would seek a warrant for his arrest on a charge of speeding.

CULVER WHIPS CRANBROOK OF DETROIT, 27-0

Culver, Ind., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Culver Military academy entertained a homecoming crowd this afternoon by defeating Cranbrook school, Detroit, 27 to 0. The Cadets held the visitors to one first down. Tanner scored the first 21 points on long runs. Lineups:

NORTH CENTRAL RUNNERS DEFEAT WHEATON, 27-28

North Central college remained undefeated in cross-country by nosing out Wheaton, 27 to 28, at Wheaton yesterday. Culver and Haag of North Central tied for first. Hanna of Wheaton was third, followed by Phillips of Wheaton.

North Central has defeated Loyola university and Elmhurst and Wheaton in a triangular meet.

Jordan College Ties Northwestern "B," 6 to 6

Menominee, Mich., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Jordan college, upper Michigan collegiate champions, held the Northwestern "B" team to a 6 to 6 tie here today.

IT'S NO EASY JOB TRYING TO REACH PURDUE GOAL LINE

Purdue keeps its goal line uncrossed for the second consecutive Saturday while beating Wisconsin, 14 to 0, at Madison. Karl Schuelke, partly hidden by No. 86, Howard Keegan of Purdue, meets a virtual stone wall in this thrust at the Boilermaker line in the first quarter. Yes, indeed, as Chicago also will agree, these Lafayette boys don't permit any liberties when their goal line is threatened.

DARTMOUTH TIES HARVARD, 7-7, IN FINAL MINUTE

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 28.—(AP)—While a superior Harvard team relaxed in the last minute of play, Bill Clark raced outside his right tackle for 55 yards and a touchdown that enabled Dartmouth to gain a 7 to 7 tie today before 30,000, one of the smallest crowds in the history of this 40 year old New England gridiron rivalry.

The Crimson, which dominated the game for 59 minutes, had one ear cocked for the final whistle when Capt. Johnny Dean tried to lengthen its 7 to 0 lead by attempting a field goal from Dartmouth's 30 yard line. His try was short and the Indians started passing from their 20 yard line. George Stangle connected with two consecutive tosses to put his team on its 45 yard line. Harvard spread its passing defense and waited for Stangle to cut loose with his long forwards. But Stangle crossed them. As he feinted by fading back, the ball went to Clark and he was outside his right tackle and in the clear before Harvard realized he had the ball. Don Hagerman, another Indian replacement, place kicked the tying point.

Harvard made several impressive threats, which were halted by penalties, before the fleet Fergy Locke scored early in the third period. Bob Haley, third of the quarter of signal callers that directed the Harvard offense, tossed a flat pass to Locke on the 44 yard line and that sprinter, aided by perfect interference, reversed his field twice before going over the last Dartmouth line. Dean kicked the seventh point.

FORDHAM WINS, 2 TO 0.

New York, Oct. 28.—(AP)—A sturdy Alabama line which twice threw back an enemy attack on its own goal line weakened for just one play in the first period against Fordham at the Polo grounds today, let a lineman through to block a kick and went down to defeat, 2 to 0.

It was a bruising battle between two powerful lines, with whatever advantage there was going to Fordham, which made five first downs to three.

Fordham had threatened all through the first period, Alabama once stopping it on the one yard line, inches short of a first down. Fordham came back immediately but Quarterback Frank Moseley intercepted a pass from Capt. Ed Danowski of Fordham on his own two yard line. Dixie Howell dropped behind his own goal line to punt out of danger. As Howell's toe met the ball Amerino Sarno, Fordham tackle, leaped high in the air to knock it down. Howell won the race to the ball and downed it for a safety.

TEMPLE LOSES, 20-7.

Lewisburg, Pa., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Bucknell extended its home winning streak to 17 games today by defeating Temple university, 20 to 7, before a homecoming crowd of 13,000.

After a scoreless first quarter, Bucknell scored near the end of the half on a 12 yard dash by Rhubright. Myers and Peters added a touchdown apiece in the second half.

Stephens scored Temple's touchdown in the fourth quarter, after Bucknell had been penalized 36 yards to its one yard line.

PRINCETON WINS, 6-0.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Princeton added Washington and Lee to its list of football victims today to keep its 1933 record unblemished, but despite the 6 to 0 triumph it found itself outplayed.

Washington and Lee came within two yards of tying the score in the final period and many times before that pushed deep into Princeton territory. It outgained Princeton and collected 11 first downs to 10.

The lone score came in the first period when Princeton took Sawyer's punt on the Washington and Lee 44 yard line. Pepper Constable drove through the line for two first downs in a row. Then Chick Kaufman sidestepped his way the remaining distance for a touchdown. John failed in the extra point try.

HOLY CROSS TANS BROWN.

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Holy Cross took the hide off the Brown Bear today with a 19 to 7 victory and continued along its undefeated football path.

A crowd of 20,000, the largest in Worcester's football history, saw Brown outplay the Purple throughout the first half and then go down in defeat in the face of Holy Cross' aerial attack and spectacular runs.

COLGATE HELD TO TIE.

Hamilton, N. Y., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Colgate's record of consecutive victories was snapped today as Lafayette held it to a scoreless tie. Although Colgate was in a position to score at least five times, each time Lafayette throttled every thrust.

Colgate outplayed Lafayette, but lacked the scoring punch near the goal line. Lafayette was at its best when it had its back to the wall.

NAVY, 13; PENN, 0.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Navy's veteran eleven threw two broadsides into a luckless Penn team today to win their annual battle, 13 to 0, before a crowd of 60,000. Navy charged 48 yards down the field to score in the opening minutes of the first period. Fred Borries, Middie half back, bounced off tackle 17 yards for the touchdown. Then for two full periods and the better part of a third Penn rallied to outplay the midshipmen. Time and again it thundered down futilely into Navy territory, once reaching the 7 yard line. Two fumbles by Lima were particularly costly.

With two minutes left to play, still striving desperately to get over that six point lead, Penn began throwing passes. Dorran Brown, quarter back, drifted back to his own 16 yard line looking for a receiver and was rushed off his feet by the Navy.

But just before he went down he raised his arm and threw blindly toward the center of the field. Bob Dornin, Navy end, intercepted the pass and scored.

CARNEGIE TIED, 0-0.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Washington and Jefferson today held Carnegie Tech to a scoreless tie. The sturdy W. & J. eleven not only led in gains and first downs, but put on the only serious scoring threat of the game, a 70 yard third period march that collapsed only when a forward pass grounded in the end zone.

Tech's last scoring attempt failed as Capt. Red Stewart's deep angled placement kick went wide of its mark in the final minute of play.

Carnegie, victor over Temple, Xavier, and Notre Dame in successive contests, could not match the W. & J. aggressiveness. The Presidents gained 193 yards to 173 for Tech and made 13 first downs to Tech's 9.

along, however, when things began to happen.

The ball was in midfield when Jordan of the Badgers attempted to take his team out of danger by punting. He was tackled before he could get the kick away and the ball went to Purdue on Wisconsin's 47 yard line.

Purvis made six yards. An instant after the next play started Carter was off on his long run. He ripped through the left side of the Wisconsin line, shook off a half dozen tacklers, and raced on down the field 41 yards to the touchdown.

Toriello place kicked the goal.

The Break Never Comes.

The Badgers rallied later in the period. When they continued to hold the Boilermakers early in the fourth quarter it appeared that a break in the game might make it possible for them to tie the score.

They never got the break. Instead, they suddenly crumpled. The battering they had received from the Purdue linesmen and hard running backs was beginning to take its toll. The Cardinal clad athletes were beginning to limp and give evidence of bruises. Before they could recover further disaster had come to them.

Punting against the wind Peterson temporarily had pushed Purdue back. His kick came down on the Purdue 36 yard line. Hecker then dashed around Wisconsin's right end to the 50 yard line.

Purvis Takes Long Pass.

The Boilermakers lost no time getting right back into action. Hecker heaved a long pass down the field. It dropped into the waiting arms of Purvis on the Wisconsin 10 yard line. He took three strides and was over with the last touchdown. Pardonner kicked the goal to hoist the score to 14 to 0 for the Boilermakers.

It was all that was needed to subdue the Badgers, although they finished full of fight.

The statistics show Purdue made ten first downs, compared to seven for Wisconsin. Wisconsin surpassed Purdue in length of punts by an average of seven yards. The Badgers averaged 37 yards. Wisconsin completed one of its five passes, while Purdue completed three of its six, intercepting two Badger attempts.

Gain 312 Yards from Scrimmage.

Purdue made 312 yards from scrimmage in 63 attempts, while Wisconsin made 133 yards in 48 tries. Moore of Purdue averaged 13 yards on each of his four runs. Purvis averaged 6½ yards on each of his 20 attempts. Carter of Purdue and Kundert of Wisconsin were tied for third honors in line plunges with an average of five yards each. Purdue averaged five yards gain on each charge, compared with 2 2-3 yards for Wisconsin.

CARTHAGE WINS OVER BRADLEY IN UPSET, 13-6

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 28. — [Special.] — Carthage college vanquished Bradley, 13 to 6, in the latter's homecoming game today. The result was a distinct upset in the Little Nineteen conference.

Bradley gained 177 yards from scrimmage to Carthage's 47 and made 15 first downs to the visitors' four, but well directed punts and passes gave Carthage its victory.

Bradley scored a touchdown in the second quarter on Crowell's 20 yard pass to Harms on the goal line. Carthage scored in the third period as Markel, an end, intercepted a Bradley pass. Mueller kicked goal, giving Carthage a 7 to 6 lead.

In the last few minutes of play Markel intercepted a Bradley pass on Bradley's 12 yard line, and scored again. Lineup:

CARTHAGE [13].		BRADLEY [6].
Phelan	L. E.	Sepich
Sayles	L. T.	Sayles

Dimmitt	L. H.	N. Harms
Medley	R. H.	Crowell
Wilson	F. B.	Usnick

Substitutions: Carthage—Purdum for Meyers; Morrison for Kipling; Mueller for Clifton.

Bradley—G. Hendley for Sepich; Wilson for Fennell; Morgan for Wilson; Meeske for Zimmerman; McDonald for Lindenmeyer; Lintz for N. Harms; Davis for Lintz.

Touchdowns—N. Harms, Markel [2]. Point after touchdown—Mueller.

AUGUSTANA, 14; MONMOUTH, 13.

Monmouth, Ill., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Augustana's football team defeated Monmouth, 14 to 13, today. Robert Marack scored both touchdowns for Augustana. Smiley added the extra points.

Bobby Woll ran 65 yards through the entire Augustana team on an intercepted pass for Monmouth's first score and threw a pass to Frantzen over the goal line for the second touchdown. Catanzaro made good one try for the extra point but his second attempt was wide.

WESLEYAN, 39; EUREKA, 0.

Bloomington, Ill., Oct. 28.—[Special.—Illinois Wesleyan scored its Little Nineteen victory of the year by beating Eureka today, 39 to 0. Tony Kaska, full back, scored in the first minute of play when a Eureka punt was blocked. E. Sweasy, Wesleyan right half back, intercepted a Eureka pass on his 10 yard line late in the first quarter and ran 90 yards for the second touchdown.

In the third quarter, Kaska, on three long plunges from the Eureka 35 yard line went over for his second touchdown. Tony Blazine, Wesleyan left tackle, intercepted a Eureka pass a few minutes later and ran 15 yards for the fourth Titan touchdown.

In the third quarter Frank Leach, half back, ran thirty yards for the fifth touchdown. Kaska crossed the goal line for the third time a minute before the gun cracked ending the game.

CARROLL, 13; LAKE FOREST, 6.

Lake Forest lost its homecoming game to Carroll, 13 to 6, yesterday, at Lake Forest. Carroll scored in the first minute of play and again in the second quarter, both scores resulting from passes. Lake Forest scored after a blocked kick was recovered on the seven yard line. Both teams played well until the last five minutes when Carroll drew penalties for roughing.

AURORA, 6; ELMHURST, 2.

Aurora, Ill., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—A forward-lateral pass that went for a touchdown in the last two minutes of play was all that an Aurora college eleven needed to beat Elmhurst today, 6 to 2. Elmhurst collected a safety in the second quarter and led until the final minutes of the game when a pass from Seibert to Barr to Fowler brought the winning touchdown for Aurora.

team when it was in sight of a touchdown.

The statistics gave Minnesota 15 first downs against Iowa's eight. The Gophers gained 271 yards from scrimmage against the Hawkeyes' 117. Crayne got 426 yards in 11 punts and Lund 266 in 8. Minnesota gained 22 yards on three of nine passes completed and Iowa five on one of five. Lund gained 108 yards in 20 attempts, Biese 80 in 14, Alfonse 54 in 13, Crayne 6 in 22, and Laws 54 in 12.

Iowa Threatens Early.

After Minnesota had received the kick-off, Lund quick kicked to the Hawkeye 29 yard line, after which Crayne and Coe went to work. Crayne carried the ball twice and came up with a first down on the second effort. He and Laws divided the business of gaining eight yards on the next three plays, and Crayne finally kicked out of bounds on the Minnesota 12 yard line. Thus ended the Hawkeye offensive for many moments, while the Gophers were causing the stadium to become an outdoor asylum with their ball carrying tricks.

Lund swung around his own right end to the Minnesota 24 yard line. An off tackle play brought the Gophers' star 17 more yards. Lund was given a recess and Alfonse went around the Iowa right end to the Hawkeye 46 yard line.

Iowa Stops This Drive.

Lund tossed to Larson, bringing the ball to the Iowa 31 yard line. Seidel passed to Lund, who scampered to the Iowa 20 yard line. There the Hawkeyes became obdurate, taking the ball on downs.

Lund quick kicked over the Iowa goal line after Iowa had punted and Crayne punted back, the ball bouncing out at the Gopher 48 yard line. Lund came back with an end sweep for 16 yards. Biese sifted through the Iowa line for a first down on the Hawkeye 18 yard line. Alfonse contributed four yards on a spinner just as the quarter ended.

Lund passed the Hawkeye left end for another first down on the Hawkeye 6 yard line, and Alfonse dashed around right end on the next play for a touchdown. Bill Evans made it 7 to 0 with a place kick.

Early in the third quarter the Gophers came through with their second touchdown. The Hawkeyes were on their 30 yard line when Laws, fading back to pass, dropped the ball on his 16 yard line and Minnesota recovered. Lund went to the Iowa 9 yard line and Alfonse went around the Iowa right end for a touchdown. Bevans' place kick failed.

Crayne Goes to Town.

Later in the same quarter the Gophers took the ball on the Iowa 32 yard line, when Dee caught Crayne's punt, causing a 15 yard penalty to Iowa and loss of the ball. A lateral pass with Lund as the receiver brought the ball to the Iowa 17 yard line. Lund and Alfonse dragged it up to the Hawkeye 8 yard line and Levoir, who had replaced Seidel, made it first down on the Iowa 3 yard line. He then sneaked through the right side of the Iowa line for a touchdown, making it 19 to 0. Champlin failed to kick goal.

The Gophers took the ball again late in the fourth quarter and Champlin tossed a pass in the general direction of the Iowa goal. Crayne seized it in midfield and ran for a touchdown. Rook, substituting for Russ Fisher, kicked the extra point to make the score 19 to 7.

Predicts Son Will Star, Then Drops Over Dead

Lewisburg, Pa., Oct. 28.—(AP)—They felt his father would have wished it, so they let Edgar Smith, acting captain of the Temple university football team, play against Bucknell today, although back in Easton, Pa., the father, Harry Smith, had fallen dead a moment after predicting Edgar would be in there fighting."

If the son learned the news it might affect his playing, the neighbors reasoned. They waited until after the game to tell him.

THRONG TO SEE BEARS BATTLE GIANTS TODAY

Newman's Passing Is Magnet to Fans.

The biggest crowd to see a National Football league game here in years and possibly a record crowd for the west is in prospect for the Chicago Bears-New York Giants' National league battle at Wrigley field this afternoon.

The appearance of the former Michigan star, Harry Newman, with the Giants is one of the reasons for a public turnout. Few players have approached Newman's record in their first big league season. In six games with the Giants Newman has given every indication of setting a few records in a circuit that teems with standout players from every part of the country.

How He Throws 'Em!

A comparatively light back [he weighs 175 pounds], Newman is one of the ground gaining leaders with an average of 5 yards plus for 44 tries from scrimmage. He has returned punts 145 yards in six games.

He is second in scoring and the ace of 'em all at firing forward passes with almost a .500 per cent record. His throws have been completed 20 times out of 43 for a total gain of 424 yards.

While the Bears worked all week in a defense for this aerial attack, they will not enter the game to watch Harry at the expense of letting some of the other easterners get away, for with Newman are Jack McBride, Ken Strong, Bo Molenda, and Dale Burnett, all stars in their own right.

Remember that 1925 Game?

McBride incidentally was with the Giants in 1925 when the Bears invaded New York for the first battle with the team. Red Grange was on his first post-graduate trip and he contributed one of the three winning touchdowns. Link Lyman was also in the Bear lineup. They are the only players of that contest who will be on the field today.

The rival coaches, George Halas of the Bears and Steve Owen of the Giants were in that 1925 contest as players. The game attracted 65,000 fans. The Bears won, 19 to 7, McBride making the Giants' score.

Since then the rivals have met thirteen times, the Bears winning eight and the Giants five. The Bears trimmed the Giants twice last year, 28 to 8 and 6 to 0.

Giants Sign Satenstein.

Owen said the Giants are in good condition, only one man being left behind. He is Stew Clancy, the undertaker. To fill the complement of twenty-two men Owen signed Satenstein, a former Stapleton lineman. He is expected to start today.

George Corbett, the only ailing Bear, is recovering from the banging he received in the Green Bay game and there is some possibility that Coach Halas will use him should the team be in need of some solid punting at any critical stage.

The Giants lead the eastern division and the Bears the west division. As New York is the best offensive outfit and Chicago the best defensive team in the league the only conclusion to be drawn regarding the outcome is that the breaks may decide it.

Record of the series:

1925—Bears, 19; Giants, 7.
1926—Bears, 7; Giants, 0.
1927—Giants, 13; Bears, 7.
1928—Bears, 13; Giants, 0.
1929—Giants, 26; Bears, 14. Giants 14; Bears, 9
1930—Giants, 12; Bears, 0. Bears, 12; Giants, 0.
1931—Bears, 6; Giants, 0. Bears, 13; Giants 6. Giants, 25; Bears, 6.
1932—Bears, 28; Giants, 8. Bears, 6; Giants, 0.
Total played—13. Won by Bears—8. Won by Giants—5.
Total points—Bears, 139; Giants, 111.

CHICAGO EASY FOR MICHIGAN ELEVEN, 28-0

Wolverines Score Early in First Period.

edge to its attack or was content to wait for scoring opportunities. Shortly before the end of the quarter Chicago had the ball in Michigan territory for the first time, but nothing happened. Westover's fumble was recovered by Maneikis on Michigan's 41 yard line, but the sudden enthusiasm of Chicago's partisans in the north stand was checked abruptly when Berwanger could gain only nine yards in three tries and then kicked.

Michigan's fumble kept the ball near the center of the gridiron until the middle of the second period. Then Michigan's advance, after a first down registered by Everhardus, collapsed when an offside penalty on the Wolverines nullified a pass, Renner to Fay, on Chicago's 15 yard strip. The Maroons held and Michigan had to kick.

Ward Blocks Kick.

Willis Ward, Michigan right end, blocked Berwanger's kick shortly afterward, and Savage, left guard, recovered on Chicago's 15 yard line. But the Maroons would yield only four yards in the three plays, and Everhardus missed a field goal from Chicago's 20 yard line.

Expiration of the half stopped Michigan from making a third touchdown. Zimmer set the stage when he fumbled, and Oliver, substitute full back, recovered for Michigan on the Maroons' 31 yard line. Two passes were incomplete, but a third, Renner to Fay, placed the ball on Chicago's 2 yard line. The gun sounded before the teams could line up.

The third period and the early minutes of the final quarter were drab. Michigan failed in three opportunities. Kowalik recovered Berwanger's fumble on Chicago's 20 yard line for the first chance. Four line plays lacked inches of a first down, the measurement being so close that the officials huddled over the proceedings.

Chicago Short Changed.

Michigan's running attack collapsed a second time on Chicago's 18 yard line after a 27 yard advance. Everhardus and Renner were the ball carriers, and a lateral pass which lost five yards on fourth down ended Chicago's suspense.

A dispute, which brought Clark Shaughnessy, Chicago coach, to the side line at the start of the fourth period, enlivened the game. The Maroons contended that in moving the line between quarters they were short changed five yards. The stands set up a mild boo, but the protest was unavailing.

Shortly afterward Michigan intercepted a Chicago pass in midfield. This advance, third unsuccessful march of the half, was stopped on Chicago's 6 yard line when Fay, on fourth down, needed 3 more yards to keep the ball in Michigan's possession.

Renner Goes Across.

Chicago's luck now failed and Michigan went on to pile up the score. Zimmer fumbled and recovered on his one yard line. Berwanger punted to his 31 yard strip. Five yards were assessed against the Maroons for fourth time out. With this invitation Michigan reached the goal in four plays, divided between Renner and Oliver. Renner scored on an 8 yard sprint inside of tackle and Petoskey place kicked the point.

One minute remained to play. Remias intercepted Berwanger's pass after the kickoff and returned 7 yards to Chicago's 4 yard line. A plunge was checked, but Renner then tossed to Westover, who outran Chicago's secondary to catch the ball and jogged five yards to the end zone. Chapman place kicked the point. The game ended seconds later with Chicago firing an unsuccessful series of passes.

11-4 on First Downs.

Michigan made 11 first downs, three by passes and eight by running. Chicago accomplished 4 first downs. One was made by passing. In 10 forward passes Michigan completed 6 for 153 yards. Four were incomplete. Chicago tried 12 passes [7 in the last two minutes of the game] and completed two. One of these lost 2 yards and the other gained 27 yards. Three Chicago passes were intercepted.

Michigan lost 35 yards by penalty, including one for 15 yards. Chicago's 25 yards lost on penalty included one for offside, one for extra time out, and three penalties for unsuccessful passes.

RIPON GETS THE BREAKS; WHIPS LAWRENCE, 10-0

Appleton, Wis., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Ripon college spoiled the Lawrence college homecoming today by winning, 10 to 0. A touchdown and two safeties gave it the margin of victory.

In yards gained and in first downs Lawrence was the stronger team. A fumble, a bad pass from center, and a blocked punt paved the way to the Ripon scores.

Walter and Holzwart scored safeties and Powell of Ripon plunged for the lone touchdown after Baldwin of Lawrence had fumbled on the Lawrence 15 yard line.

Texas Passes, Drives Way to Victory Over Rice, 18-0

Austin, Tex., Oct. 28.—[U. P.]—University of Texas passed and plunged its way to an 18 to 0 victory over Rice institute in a Southwest conference game today. A pass over the goal line gave Texas its first score. Jurecka intercepted a pass and ran 25 yards for a touchdown in the last period and a few minutes later Hadlovk plunged four yards off left tackle for the final score.

North Dakota State Ties North Dakota, 7-7

Grand Forks, N. D., Oct. 28.—(AP)—North Dakota university and North Dakota State battled to a 7-7 tie today. Both scores came in the first half. What honors there were in the second session went to State which narrowly missed a second touchdown when a pass was grounded in the end zone.

The Panthers lost no time furnishing a hint of the eventual outcome. Inside of a minute they began to prove the Notre Dame line wasn't impregnable by reeling off three first downs in quick order. Pivarnik was rushed in to Schrenker's right guard post in hopes of plugging up a weak spot, but the march ended only when Lukats intercepted Matesic's pass on Notre Dame's 27 yard line.

No End of Trouble.

After emerging from this jam Notre Dame fell right into another because of a fumble by Mazziotti on one of Munjas' punts. Walton recovered for Pitt on Notre Dame's 29 yard line. Weinstock ripped into the line a few times and O'Dell and Matesic completed another first down on the ten yard line. Matesic plunged for three yards and then for three more to reach the four yard line just as the period ended.

When the second period opened the Panthers tried a forward pass to Munjas in the end zone, but Schiralli intercepted Matesic's throw on the four yard line to end Pitt's second threat. Elser punted from behind his own goal line and the ball after being partly blocked, rolled out of bounds on Notre Dame's 18 yard line. This might have developed into another Panther threat, but Pitt linemen had charged into Elser and the play was ruled a touchback, giving Notre Dame the ball on its 20 yard line. Elser then kicked to midfield.

This was where Sebastian came into the party. An exchange of punts followed, Pitt taking the ball on its 12 yard line. Pitt was penalized to its one yard line for holding and Hogan, who had replaced Munjas, punted to Pitt's 35 yard line. Notre Dame hadn't been that close before. It tried to make the best of the situation by passing, but one was slapped down by Weisenbaugh and a moment later the same fellow intercepted another on Pitt's 16 yard line.

Sebastian Sets Out.

In the twinkling of an eye Notre Dame saw what it had feared most. Sebastian smashed the line for seven yards and Weisenbaugh got two. Then came the crash. Sebastian charged through a hole between center and Notre Dame's left guard. The Irish secondary rushed up and before they could turn the elusive Panther had burst past them. O'Dell swung in from one side to form a barrier between Sebastian and the three Notre Dame men who tried to catch up from behind. This trio, led by Mazziotti, carried on the 75 yard chase right up to the finish but they couldn't get past the guarding O'Dell. Onder kicked for the extra point, making it 7 to 0.

On the kickoff following the touchdown Notre Dame took the ball on its 20 yard line and with Pilney running and passing, checked in with a first down on its 35 yard line. Brancheau offset a five yard penalty for too much time out by picking up six yards, but a moment later Ormiston, who had replaced Onder, intercepted Pilney's pass on Notre Dame's 37 yard line. O'Dell shot a pass to Sebastian, who was dropped on Notre Dame's 18 yard mark by Mazziotti.

Panthers Claw Onward.

Then the Panthers resumed ripping open the Notre Dame line. Sebastian headed into center for two yards. Weisenbaugh broke through Notre Dame's left tackle for 13 yards to the three yard line. Then the same gentleman rammed through center for the second touchdown and place kicked the fourteenth and final point of the game.

Passing, which was about the only mode of advance that stood a chance, gave Notre Dame a choice opening in the fourth period. Pilney threw a long pass to Young, who was dropped on Pittsburgh's 17 yard line. Notre Dame was stopped cold in two line plays, so went back to the aerial route, but O'Dell intercepted on Pitt's 11 yard line.

Drive Fizzles Out.

Later in the game Pilney put on Notre Dame's choicest bit of offensive labor. He grabbed Hogan's punt on Notre Dame's 9 yard line and scooted back 58 yards to Pitt's 33 yard line. A pass, Lukats to Banas, who ran 15 yards after taking the throw, drove the Panthers back to their 14 yard line. Lukats passed into the end zone to Mazziotti, but the ball slipped off the tips of the latter's fingers. Pitt was offside, however, and the ball was brought back and Pitt penalized five yards. Another pass was tried, but Ormiston intercepted it and the game ended two plays later.

Ray Brancheau, Notre Dame's senior right half back from Monroe, Mich., received two broken ribs in the game, an examination disclosed tonight. He played an entire period with the injury and was finally removed with a leg injury.

ARKANSAS BEATS SO. METHODISTS WITH FIELD GOAL

Fayetteville, Ark., Oct. 28.—(AP)—The University of Arkansas jolted Southern Methodist's Southwest conference title hopes today by whipping the Mustangs, 3 to 0, with a last quarter field goal.

It was Arkansas' first victory over an S. M. U. team in 11 years. A 69 yard dash by George Jordan placed the ball on the Methodist 11 yard line. Elvin Geiser then kicked the field goal.

The victory was Arkansas' third in as many conference games and kept it in the lead. Until today's reverse Southern Methodist also had been undefeated in conference competition.

WABASH ELEVEN HELD TO 0-0 TIE BY EVANSVILLE

Crawfordsville, Ind., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Wabash college's football team was held to a scoreless tie by Evansville here this afternoon. Late in the fourth quarter Wabash, using only straight football and making five successive first downs, worked the ball from its own 45 yard line to Evansville's one yard line. Then four plunges failed to gain an inch. Graham, Evansville half back, raced forty yards through the Wabash team before he was downed on the 20 yard line as the final gun sounded.

Zeigler, Ill., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Zeigler Community High school gained undisputed leadership of the Central Egyptian conference today by defeating Duquoin, 47 to 0.

DETROIT PASSING ATTACK DEFEATS MARQUETTE, 22-6

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—The University of Detroit's Nott to Reisterer forward passing combination failed to net the Titans a touchdown today, but it worked effectively to place the ball in position often enough for a 22 to 6 triumph over Marquette university.

After a scoreless first quarter Detroit took a punt on Marquette's 44 yard line midway through the second. Nott hurled a long pass to Reisterer, who was rushed out of bounds on the seven yard line by Krueger. Dick Lutz, sophomore half from Chicago, started at right end, sifted back through tackle, and scored the opening touchdown. Nott's kick for the extra point was blocked.

The Titans scored again late in the third quarter after a Nott to Reisterer pass had put the ball on Marquette's 11 yard line. The Hilltoppers held for three downs, but on the fourth Nott shot a short pass to Vince Kadi, who weaved his way through to the end zone. Nott's kick was good this time.

Becker of Marquette tried to run from the end zone as the fourth quarter opened, but was tackled for a safety by Hansen, Titan end. Rajkovich carried the ensuing kickoff 49 yards to Marquette's 29 yard line. On the next play Lutz broke away at right end for the third and final touchdown for his team. Nott again made good in his try for the extra point.

Marquette, with the back field manned by reserves, opened up a passing attack in the waning moments, and a toss from Marv Bell to Dick Quirk finally netted the invaders' lone touchdown.

Pekin Prep Eleven Beats Peoria, 12 to 0

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Pekin high school defeated Peoria Manual, 12 to 0, in a Big Twelve conference game today.

ACTUAL FOOTBALL PLAY.

FOOTBALL playing time is 60 minutes, divided into four periods of 15 minutes each, with one minute intermission between first and second, third, and fourth periods, and 15 minutes between halves. With various time outs, spectators are at the game from 2 to 2½ hours. These spectators no doubt will be surprised to know how small a proportion of the actual time is consumed by movement of the ball.

We have figures of an official who took a London busman's holiday to view the Northwestern-Stanford contest. He operated with a stop watch such as he uses in officiating. His statistics show that the ball actually was in movement for 15 minutes 37 7-10 seconds of the prescribed playing time of 60 minutes.

In this record, time was taken from the kickoff to the time the ball was blown dead by the referee. On rushing plays, it was from the time the ball was actually snapped until it was blown dead. This included time consumed by punts and passes. One wonders where the rest of the time went. It hardly seems as if the calling of signals could account for the remainder of the legal time, but here are the figures of an experienced timekeeper:

	Minutes.	Seconds.
First period	3	44.4
Second period	4	23.9
Third period	3	41.1
Fourth period	3	48.3
Total	15	37.7

DE PAUL PASSES WIN, 25-6, OVER WESTERN STATE

Kalamazoo, Mich., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—De Paul university defeated Western States Teachers today, 25 to 6, flashing a great passing attack which netted three of the Blue Demons' four touchdowns.

The first half was an even battle. De Paul scored in the first quarter when Stadler passed 17 yards to Delaney for the first touchdown. In the second quarter the Hilltoppers had a decided edge, taking the ball near midfield and marching for a touchdown on four first downs, with Smythe passing six yards to Adamczyk for the touchdown.

On the first play after the kickoff in the third quarter Stadler broke inside of tackle, reversed, and ran 79 yards for a touchdown. After the next kickoff four first downs put De Paul on the 14 yard line, where Stadler passed to O'Brien for a touchdown. The final touchdown came in the last quarter when Stadler passed 45 yards to Sullivan.

De Paul made 13 first downs and Western 7. It was the first time that De Paul had been scored on this year.

SWEETHEART ON PARADE TAKES 5 GAITED STAKE

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Sweetheart on Parade was formally recognized as America's greatest saddle horse last night when she won the $1,000 five-gaited stake at the World's Fair horse show. Amid the stormy applause of 14,000 spectators who crowded the 124th Field Artillery armory to capacity, the aged gray mare trotted out of the ring with the last blue ribbon which she was ever to win under the saddle. Her owner, Mrs. William Roth of San Francisco, has decided to use her as a harness horse from now on.

In winning last night's stake, which was generally considered one of the outstanding events of the show, Sweetheart on Parade was called upon to perform in flawless fashion to withstand the spirited challenge of her greatest rivals, King Genius, the champion stallion, and Belle Lee Rose, runner-up in the mare division. Under the expert guidance of Lonnie Hayden, the graceful gray mare trotted, racked, cantered, walked and single-footed with a display of class which kept the galleries in a constant flutter of applause.

Climaxes Series of Triumphs.

By last night's victory Sweetheart on Parade climaxed a brilliant series of triumphs which has extended over more than two years, her only defeat during that period having occurred recently in Louisville when Belle Lee Rose beat her for the championship at the Kentucky State fair.

King Genius and Belle Lee Rose took second and third place respectively in last night's five gaited stake, with American Dream fourth and Lady of Lexington fifth.

Roxie Highland, owned by Mary Gwyn Fiers of Oklahoma City, won the $1,000 three gaited stake, thereby keeping clear her record of three years without a defeat. Roxie Highland is a nine year old chestnut mare, a little more than 15 hands in height. Flashing American, entered by Mrs. Locke Brown of Louisville, took second place, and Winning Ways, owned by Louis Kaiser of New York City, was third.

The Carnation stables' Hollyrood Pat was victorious in the $1,000 roadster stake after standing off the challenge of George J. Peak's Suan Glo and R. C. Flanery's Ax Moko, which finished second and third, respectively.

The Heyl Pony farm of Washington, Ill., scored in the $1,000 heavy harness stake when Field Adjutant was awarded the blue ribbon. E. A. Stuart's Carnation Solitaire was second and the Happy War farm's Rio Saxon third.

Show Concludes Today.

Today will be Czechoslovakian day, and the show will be concluded with afternoon and evening performances. The international military events will climax the show. Other outstanding events scheduled are the $1,000 hunter stake and the $1,000 harness pony stake. There will be a pageant in honor of the visiting teams from Czechoslovakia, Ireland and Sweden, and ceremonies to mark the retirement of Sweetheart on Parade from competition in saddle horse class.

M'CUAN HORSES TAKE 3 RACES AT SPORTSMAN'S

Sobieha Beats Blue Day in Chicago Handicap.

Mrs. Edward McCuan's horses stole the show at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon before a crowd of 8,000. She saw her racing silks carried to victory in three events, including the Chicago handicap, the feature. Mrs. McCuan of St. Louis, Mo., leaves the half mile track the leading winner owner of the fall meeting.

When Sobieha flashed by the judges stand victorious in the Chicago handicap at six and one-half furlongs, it was the third victory for that stable. Sun Worship scored in the third, and Flag Bearer won in the fourth.

The latter two were ridden by Jockey C. Ralls, who made it three for the day when he won on Jack Biener in the sixth race.

Sobieha Wins Over Blue Day.

Sobieha, ridden by Jockey D. Smith in the Chicago handicap at six and one-half furlongs, conquered Blue Day the early pace maker, by two and one-half lengths. Hoops finished third. Sobieha paid $11.80.

Those lucky enough to pick the 3 year old son of Dress Parade-Quince Bush to conquer the nine other starters, received $46.58 for each $2 straight ticket.

Cowley Rides Winner.

Jockey J. Cowley rode the winner which led from flag fall to finish. Broomshot, public choice, was second a neck back of the victor. Over Shady finished third in the six and one-half furlongs dash.

In a spectacular stretch finish, Ma, ridden by Jockey L. Wilson, won the second race by three-quarters of a length over Black Peter. Broadway Belle saved the short end of the purse in the five furlongs sprint. Ma paid $17.52.

The daily double combination of Ma, winner of the second race, and Sun Worship, winner of the third, was worth $44.58 for each $2 invested.

NORRIS NAMED IN $250,000 SUIT BY SHAUGHNESSY

Thomas J. Shaughnessy, attorney and former manager of the disbanded Shamrocks hockey team, yesterday filed the praecipe of a $250,000 suit against James Norris, grain broker and owner of the Detroit Red Wings hockey team, in the Circuit court. Attorney Richard S. Tuthill, representing Shaughnessy, said a declaration will be filed during the week alleging Norris broke an agreement under which Shaughnessy was to have received compensation for services in organizing and promoting the Red Wings.

Bag 15,000,000 Ducks in Season, U. S. Survey Finds

BY BOB BECKER.

About 15,000,000 ducks are counted into the bags of American hunters every season. This is the estimate announced a few days ago by W. C. Henderson, associate chief of the United States biological survey.

Mr. Henderson's statement that probably 15,000,000 mallards, pintails, teal, canvasback, and other ducks are brought down by the shotgun during the autumn open season may cause some surprise among sportsmen. However, this figure is no wild guess.

Many states require the hunters to make a "return" on their licenses in the manner of an income tax return. The hunter is obliged to reveal his "hunting assets" by telling the conservation department just how much game he shot and what kind it was, feathered and furred. Thus it is possible to make a pretty good estimate of the number of ducks killed during the open season.

Although 15,000,000 ducks is a lot of game, making many a meal in the homes of sportsmen and also representing an expenditure of many millions of dollars, the biological survey is not stressing the point of how many birds are shot and brought home nearly as much as it is driving home the fact that just about 7,500,000 more ducks are dropped and never recovered.

All waterfowl hunters are being urged to use every possible effort to recover wing tipped birds.

It was pointed out in THE TRIBUNE some weeks ago that for every two ducks killed and brought to bag at least one bird is crippled and probably lost. A recent Iowa survey proved this contention. Now the government has taken up the problem and every shooter is being asked to help avoid the wasting of birds. As Mr. Henderson points out, the 7,500,000 birds which are crippled and not recovered do not go into the hunter's bag, thus representing a loss to him and also a loss in breeding stock which does not return north in the spring.

"This picture," says Mr. Henderson, is not a pleasant one. However, most of this waste can be prevented if gunners will refrain from shooting at birds at long range, and from using shotguns too small to be effective."

If we interpret this statement in practical hints to waterfowlers we find these injunctions important in reducing losses of wounded birds:

1. If you cripple a bird, don't hesitate about leaving your blind at once to go after it.

2. Forget the 70 and 80 yard bombardments. If the marsh vegetation is heavy and birds hard to find, wait 'em out and try to drop them within reasonable range. There isn't one duck hunter in 500 who can recover a large percentage of ducks if he continually shoots at extra long ranges.

3. Take some of your shell money and get some kind of a retriever. A dog will pay big dividends on recovered birds.

4. Make it the first rule of sportsmanship to recover every possible bird no matter what the effort or inconvenience.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

by Westbrook Pegler

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 28.—Unfortunately for my faith in human generosity, I never have known any of the famous Honest Johns or Big Hearted Eddies of politics, the underworld, and the sport industry, which are contiguous spheres, who gave away money or performed valuable favors in a spirit of pure unselfishness. I might except cases in which the beneficiary is a helpless, harmless wretch who cannot be expected to do anything in return. But even in such cases your Honest John or your Big Hearted Eddie is pretty sure to feel that he has bought a piece of his man. If the party of the second part ever should come up from under and make something of himself the man who helped him would feel that he had him under an obligation. He would be sure to remember when ——.

Moreover, the assistance which is given to the lowly is usually very petty in proportion to the means of the benefactor, though it may be great in proportion to the need of the supplicant. That is why, in many cases, a poor and generally shiftless hanger-on will be heard singing the praise of some prosperous, prominent figure in appreciation of a ten dollar bill or a box of groceries. He is paying off in the only coin he owns. Possibly he throws in a certain amount of his independence and self-respect as part of the price of the kindness received, for he may know in his heart that he is praising up a man who, by any fair, intelligent appraisal could not add up to anything better than a fourflusher and a crook, and no discount.

Worst Criminals Fine, Generous Men.

Among some of my friends who frequent the twilight zone between the sport business and the underworld I have often heard inspiring stories of the fine, instinctive generosity of some of the most evil criminals of the prohibition era. Al Capone was one of the great philanthropists of this class, a man whose chest was crowded with a heart the size of a basketball and any child could rend apart. His left hand knew not what his right hand did, which was a very happy thing, considering that he was not left handed in his business.

The most conspicuous frauds against the name of charity are perpetrated, however, by the political Honest John of the big cities who runs the annual excursion for the poor mothers and children of his district or gives away thousands of baskets of turkey and goodies, as we call them in the papers, at Thanksgiving and Christmas time. This kindness is likely to be noted, with art, in the papers as tending to show that good old Honest John has a heart of gold after all. But this assay of Honest John's heart ignores his motive, which is to buy the votes of all those who receive his charity so that he may retain the power to rob the city for another term of years.

For Instance, Consider the Golf Clubs.

Two of the most degraded aldermen of this kind thrived for many years in a large city of my acquaintance and ultimately, in their mellow years, became more or less beloved and humorous characters in the history of the place in defiance of the fact that for many years their graft was derived largely from the brothels which were segregated in their district.

In the sport business, I know, a favor calls for a compensating favor. A man in the golf tool business gave me a set of tools and I know he would deem me very ungrateful if I should ever happen to write that I think he makes a terrible line of tools. Of course I will not write this. One set of tools is as bad as another to me, and they all are terrible in my hands, so my opinion would be no good. But I wish I were a better golfer, for then I might discover that the tools weren't worth a dam, anyway, and that consequently my friend, far from favoring me, had done me a dirty trick. But I might find that they were very superior mallets and then mightn't I feel obliged to insinuate as much in print? So you see?

We often write, in our business, of some fat and lavish figure who has just passed on that he was noted for his secret charities which amounted to something enormous in the course of the years but that, being truly generous and kind, he always kept his acts of kindness locked in his heart. But if such charities are secret, then I would like to know how come we to know that the late departed ever gave away as much as the price of a cup of coffee.

Galena, Ill., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—The Mid-Western Hunting association's second annual mid-western coon and fox hound field trials will be held here tomorrow.

KENYON BEATS ROCHESTER.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 28.—[U. P.]—Kenyon college defeated the University of Rochester here today, 20 to 6.

East Wins, 6-3, in Blackhawk Practice Game

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—In the second of a series of exhibition hockey matches between members of the Chicago Blackhawk team, the East again defeated the West at the University of Illinois rink tonight. The score was 6 to 3.

The West was strengthened by the addition of Art Merrill, purchased recently from Kansas City. Doc Romnes, who was injured in last week's practice, was a spectator. He will be able to play next week.

Trudel put the East ahead in the first period and Tommy Cook tallied for the West. McFadyen, of the West, and Kendall of the East, scored in the second period and in the third, Trudel, Leswick, Gottselig, Kendall, and Thompson connected. Trudel was the star of the game.

TEAM HIGH HATS OPPONENTS AND GETS TOUCHDOWN

Illiopolis, Ill., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Coach Bill Whistler of Illiopolis High school has a play which for want of a better name, he calls the "spurner," that has proved to be quite a touchdown getter. Against Blue Mound, his team used this play and scored the touchdown that brought a 7-0 victory.

Illiopolis, lining up with six of its seven linemen with their backs to Blue Mound, thereby "spurning" the opposition, and with an end in normal position, shot Quarter Back Havener around his own right end for 30 yards and the touchdown.

BROKEN NOSE IS JUST HABIT WITH GUARD AT TULANE

New Orleans, La., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—George Tessier, Tulane guard, promises to set a unique record before he completes his football career in 1934.

Tessier suffered a broken nose in the Georgia game, which makes the fifth time that member has been fractured in the last two seasons.

Three of the previous breaks occurred in football and one in boxing.

De Oro, Woods Lead in Eastern Cue Trials

New York, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Alfredo De Oro and Arthur Woods, both of New York, went into a tie for the lead in the Eastern Sectional Three Cushion billard tournament today as Woods dropped his second game of the tourney to William Greenwood of Pittsburgh and De Oro beat Arthur Wood of Buffalo. Each has won five games and lost two. They will meet in the last game of the double round robin play tomorrow night. Greenwood, playing well, defeated Woods, 50-30, in 58 innings of the afternoon match today. Tonight De Oro beat Woods, 50-34, in 72 innings.

State Normal Harriers Whip Kalamazoo, 22-33

Bloomington, Ill., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—State Normal won from the Kalamazoo [Mich.] State Teachers cross-country team here today, 22-33. Lyle Hutton of Normal crossed the finish line first. His time for the three mile course was 15:01.2. Steele of Kalamazoo was second, and Bremer of Normal, third.

Hillsdale Runs Over Albion College, 32-0

Albion, Mich., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Hillsdale college, defending M. I. A. A. football champions, rode over Albion college here this afternoon, 32 to 0. Pempin and Linton each scored two touchdowns and Rock one.

MATA HARI WINS IN LATONIA STAKE FOR 2 YEAR OLDS

Dixiana Filly Brings In $16,230 Prize.

With it Mata Hari, first filly ever to win in the 14 years this race has been run, captured a purse of $16,230, to be added to the $15,064 she took in winning the Breeders' Futurity here just a week ago.

As on last Saturday the race was a duel between Mata Hari and Discovery, owned by Adolphe Pons. Then Discovery finished third. Today he was a poor second despite closing strength. Collateral, coupled with Sainted as the C. V. Whitney entry, was a distant third.

A go-getter early in the season, Mata Hari slumped badly as the summer wore on and was only lightly regarded a week ago. Today, however, her backing was such that she paid only $4.60 to $2 to win.

DARK SECRET WINS.

Coming from behind 50 yards from the wire, the 4 year old finished with a burst of speed, triumphing by half a length over Albert C. Bostwick's Mate.

Cornelius V. Whitney's Mad Frump, which ran a surprising race, was third, ahead of George D. Widener's Jamestown, Sylvester W. Labrot's Tred Avon and the Brookmeade stable's Inlander. The race brought $8,575 to the winner.

The Spalding Lowe Jenkins handicap was won by E. R. Bradley's Bazaar. The Brookmeade stable's Cavalcade was second, and the Belair Stud's Vicar third.

DERBY TO BOBSLED.

Arlington Downs, Tex., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Mrs. A. M. Creech's Bobsled, a black gelding, won the first annual Texas Derby, a mile and a quarter run for 3 year olds, today.

A crowd of 27,000 saw Bobsled outmaneuver Gay World, J. A. Nix's Chicago entry and a 7 to 1 favorite, in the three horse race.

The winner ran the distance—the first time it has been contested over the one mile oval—in 2:06. Jockey Wright was up.

Bobsled won by two lengths. The Radio stable's Justice B. finished third by two more lengths.

Justice B. led to the first turn, with Gay World easily in second place and Bobsled close up. Jockey Wright went to the outside and came back again to forge ahead on the final stretch.

With only three entries, there was no place or show price. Bobsled paid $6.20 to win.

DRAKE DEFEATS WASHINGTON, 6-0, TO RETAIN LEAD

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Drake maintained its perfect record in the Missouri Valley football conference today by defeating Washington university, 6 to 0, before 3,500. It was Drake's fourth consecutive conference victory.

Potts, quarter back, scored the touchdown in the third period after a 25 yard gain by Wieland and several short gains had placed the ball on the two yard line.

Washington was threatening as the game ended, a 25 yard dash by Frederickson and a pass, Frederickson to Brown, taking the ball deep into Drake territory.

MILWAUKEE WINS OVER LOYOLA IN CROSS-COUNTRY

Milwaukee State Teachers defeated Loyola in a three mile cross-country race yesterday morning on the Loyola campus, 23 to 32.

Kelly of Milwaukee won the race in 16:17. Bissinger and Brennan of Loyola were second and third, but the Teachers took the next four places.

After losing a shoe on the first lap Capt. McGinnis of Loyola ran more than half a mile before he was forced out with a badly bruised foot.

LINDBLOM BEATS ENGLEWOOD, 14-0, TO TAKE LEAD

Morgan Park and Calumet Tie, 13 to 13.

Lindblom's gaining of the central section lead and Morgan Park's tie with Calumet marked yesterday's play in the Chicago Public High School league. Lindblom scored its second league triumph by defeating its traditional rival, Englewood, 14 to 0, at Normal Park, while Morgan Park, defending league champion, was held to a 13 to 13 deadlock by Calumet at Shrewbridge field.

The tie, however, failed to remove Morgan Park from first place in the south section. A victory against Fenger next week in its last sectional contest will give Morgan Park its second successive sectional championship and the right to compete in the semifinals next month.

Rulis Scores Twice.

Englewood, holder of first place in the central division until yesterday, never seriously threatened to score against Lindblom. It was Englewood's first defeat in its third league game. Rulis, star quarter back, led Lindblom, scoring both touchdowns, the first on a 53 yard run in the opening period and the second in the third quarter on a 7 yard sprint around end.

Senn took undisputed possession of first place in the north section by routing Roosevelt, 19 to 0, at Loyola field, while Lake View was upsetting Lane Tech, the favorite in the division, 7 to 0, at Logan Square park. A touchdown by Brock, who returned the opening kickoff of the third period from his own 25 yard line gave Lake View victory.

Marshall Beats Austin, 13-0.

Marshall and Crane Tech were victors in a west section double-header at Mills stadium. Marshall, scoring in the third and last periods, defeated Austin, 13 to 0, while a touchdown by Huffman in the final quarter gave Crane Tech a 7 to 0 victory over McKinley. Harrison Tech, leader in the section with two victories, drew a bye in the schedule, but defeated a nonleague opponent, Mooseheart, 12 to 7. The lineups:

Loyola Meets De La Salle in Football Today

Loyola academy, now on top in the eastern division of the Chicago Catholic High School league, and confident that it at last has found the same old trail which led it to the championship a few seasons ago, marches against De La Salle institute this afternoon at Loyola field in quest of its second league victory.

Undefeated, Loyola was moved to the top rung in the eastern ladder when it was announced Thursday that Mount Carmel, defending champion, had forfeited a victory over St. Rita, thus handing Mount Carmel its first defeat in two seasons. Loyola has scored one league victory and played a 6 to 6 tie with Mount Carmel last Sunday.

The return of the regular back field for the first time since the league competition began, also has added to Loyola's confidence that it is headed toward the title. Bill Kiely, leading quarter back in the league last season, will be at his old position, Comeford and McCarthy will be in the half back, and McSheehy will be at full back.

Mount Carmel, now in third place because of the forfeiture, will meet De Paul at De Paul field. De Paul suffered its first defeat last week when it was upset by De La Salle, and it will be seeking to square matters by winning over Mount Carmel.

Four other games are scheduled this afternoon. St. Ignatius will meet St. Patrick at St. Philip field; St. Michael will play Weber at Logan Square park; St. Philip will oppose Fenwick at Mills stadium, and St. George and St. Rita will clash at St. Rita field.

LITTLE NINETEEN HARRIERS STAGE MEET ON NOV. 11

Normal, Ill., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—The Little Nineteen conference cross country meet will be held on the State Normal track, Nov. 11. Bradley, North Central, Knox, Wheaton, Elmhurst, State Normal, Illinois college and Charleston Teachers have already entered. The race will be over a course of 3.7 miles.

Among the stars who will compete are Haag and Culver of North Central, Hutton and Bremer of State Normal, Pullen and Sperry of Knox, Hanna of Wheaton and Moore and Kelly of Illinois college.

Seven entrants will be permitted from each Little Nineteen school with the first five to finish counting points. Trophies will be awarded to the winners of the first six places.

ST. VIATOR IS ROUTED, 21 TO 0, BY VALPARAISO

Valparaiso, Ind., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Before a homecoming crowd of 5,000 Valparaiso university defeated St. Viator here today, 21 to 0. Lateral passes accounted for two touchdowns, while line smashes chalked up the third. A blocked punt gave the winners two more points. St. Viator was unable to threaten the Valpo goal.

Evanston Is Victor Over Proviso, 14-0

Proviso's hopes to win its first Suburban league football championship since 1927 were shattered yesterday when it lost to the Evanston High school eleven, the defending champion, 14 to 0, at Evanston. It was Proviso's first defeat of the season.

The victory sent Evanston into a tie with Oak Park for the lead. Oak Park kept in the lead by eliminating New Trier from the race, 20 to 7, at Winnetka. Evanston and Proviso each have scored two victories and have played a 6 to 6 tie. Each has one game remaining on its schedule.

Evanston began its scoring against Proviso early in the second quarter when it marched from midfield to Proviso's 10 yard line. Then Masak, Evanston's half back, went around left end to score. Corny Champion, veteran Evanston full back, scored the second touchdown in the final quarter, carrying the ball over from Proviso's 8 yard line.

Phil Armour led Oak Park to its victory. Armour, senior full back, scored on a 1 yard plunge in the first period and a 6 yard plunge in the second quarter. Dahl and Grandinetti scored Oak Park's other touchdowns, the former on a 3 yard plunge and Grandinetti on a 35 yard run after intercepting a New Trier pass.

C. Y. O. Boxers Meet Tuesday in Joliet Ring

The scene of the preliminary bouts of the Catholic Youth organization's third annual amateur boxing tournament shifts to Joliet this week. About 300 boys are expected to begin their battles for qualifying places at the De La Salle institute gymnasium in Joliet Tuesday night.

Twenty-eight bouts ended the north section trials at Loyola gymnasium Friday night. Thirty-two boxers, sixteen in class A and the same number in class B, qualified for the quarterfinals which will be held at the C. Y. O. center, 31 East Congress street, Nov. 20.

One Night at Kankakee.

The Joliet sectional tournament will continue in the De La Salle ring until Friday. The last sound of preliminaries will be held at the Knights of Columbus hall in Kankakee Nov. 6. The Joliet section quarter-finals will be contested at the De La Salle gym Nov. 20, with thirty-two competing.

There will be a three day competition in the south section at the St. Columbanus gymnasium, 71st street and Calumet avenue, Nov. 8, 9, and 10. The west section trials will be held at the West Side Knights of Columbus clubhouse, 4721 Madison street, Nov. 15, 16, and 17.

Finals on Dec. 1.

The semi-finals are scheduled for the C. Y. O. center on Nov. 23 and 24. The champions will be crowned in the finals of the tournament at the Chicago Stadium Dec. 1.

DE PAUW DEFEATS HANOVER IN LAST HALF MARCH, 12-0

Greencastle, Ind., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Two determined drives in the last half gave the De Pauw Tigers a 12 to 0 victory over Hanover here today.

In the third quarter Bradley took the Hanover kickoff on his ten yard line and ran 50 yards down the right side of the field. Bishop completed a 25 yard pass to Volkman, who went over for the score.

Hanover threatened in the last period when Hay, half back, completed three short passes to Anderson for a total gain of 24 yards. Hay made two first downs on running plays to put the ball on the De Pauw 10 yard line. Lortz, De Pauw center, broke up the scoring threat when he intercepted another pass by Hay. Bradley sent a long punt to the middle of the field to put De Pauw out of danger.

After an exchange of punts Pierce of De Pauw went off tackle to put the ball on the Hanover 20 yard line. Bishop pulled a quarter back sneak and went to the Hanover two yard line. Pierce went over for the score on the third line buck.

La Salle-Peru Eleven Defeats Moline, 13 to 0

La Salle, Ill., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—The La Salle-Peru High school eleven defeated Moline, 38 to 7, today. Moline's touchdown came after a fumble. In the preliminary game the Moline sophomores defeated the La Salle-Peru seconds, 13 to 0.

MICHIGAN STATE RALLY DEFEATS SYRACUSE, 27-3

Warmbein, Substitute Back, Leads Attack.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Michigan State rallied in the second half to defeat Syracuse university today, 27 to 3.

The Spartans were trailing, 3 to 0, at the half, following a place kick by Vavra from the 20 yard line. After Syracuse had punted to State on the 31 yard line in the third quarter the Spartans put over a touchdown in seven plays, the scoring play being a pass on fourth down from Kircher to Klewicki.

A pass from Warburton, a substitute, to Klewicki, put the ball on the Syracuse 7 yard line as the fourth quarter opened. McNutt bucked through for seven yards after a yard loss and Warmbein eluded three Syracuse backs to score at the corner of the field. Shortly afterward Warmbein ran 70 yards for another touchdown. Following the kickoff Warmbein went around right end for a 20 yard gain, McNutt broke through for nine yards, and McCrary ran off his right tackle for the final touchdown. Lineup:

MICHIGAN STATE [27].		SYRACUSE [3].
Klewicki	L. E.	Waltsinger
Buss	L. T.	Steen
Lay	L. G.	Perrault
Butler	C.	Milt Singer

Wheaton Ties North Central Eleven, 0 to 0

North Central college's chances for a Little Nineteen conference title faded yesterday at Wheaton when it was held to a scoreless tie by Wheaton.

North Central, playing without Johnny Delber and Juhnke, was unable to penetrate Wheaton's stubborn line after Gordy Smith was taken out early in the game. Smith's return of a punt in the second half put North Central on Wheaton's 15 yard line after a sensational 55 yard run. The Wheaton line in which Brundage, Thomas, and Olson were outstanding prevented a North Central first down by inches.

BELOIT WHIPS KNOX, 26-0.

Beloit, Wis., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Beloit college defeated Knox in Beloit's homecoming game today, 26 to 0. The Beloit eleven with Marshall Samuel and Bob Bloom starring scored in every period except the third.

STATE NORMAL WINS, 12-0.

Bloomington, Ill., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—State Normal clung to first place in the Little 19 conference football race by defeating Southern Teachers of Carbondale today, 12 to 0. Held at bay the first three quarters by a stubborn Southern defense, Normal unleashed a running attack that brought a touchdown and then blocked a punt for the second touchdown in the final quarter.

O'ROURKE MEETS SORENSON TODAY IN MATCH RACE

Cletus [Cowboy] O'Rourke, Chicago automobile race driver, and Shorty Sorenson, veteran from Detroit, Mich., will meet today in a special match race, the headliner of a three event card at Evanston speedway, Lincoln and Devon avenues.

O'Rourke last week broke the track record for one lap by circling the half miler in 29 2-5 seconds. His race with Sorenson today will be at 10 laps. The other two events will be at 15 and 30 laps, and will feature a fast riding field headed by Emil Andres of Evanston, Fred Tetterton, North Chicago; Gordon Chard, and Verne Franke of Ohio, and Jimmy Snyder, Orl Anderson and Wes Breeding of Chicago.

Find No Evidence That Rapscallion Was Doped

Laurel, Md., Oct. 28.—(AP)—After an autopsy today, Dr. Henry J. McCarthy, veterinarian to the Maryland state racing commission, said there was no superficial indication that Rapscallion had been subjected to doping. The horse dropped dead during the seventh race here yesterday. Dr. McCarthy said he would be surprised if the chemical examination disclosed the use of narcotics.

Notre Dame Harriers Beat Pittsburgh, 26-29

Notre Dame, Ind., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Notre Dame's cross country team defeated Pittsburgh today, 26 to 29. Clyde Roberts of Notre Dame won in 20 minutes 44 seconds. Wagonhauser of Pitt was second and Leo McFarlane of Notre Dame was third. McFarlane finished just four seconds behind King.

Michigan City Takes Prep Lead; Wins, 6 to 0

Michigan City, Ind., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Michigan City took the undisputed lead in the eastern division of the Northern Indiana High School conference today by defeating La Porte, 6 to 0. Michigan City had been tied for the lead with Central of South Bend, which was idle today.

McKendree Wins, 6 to 0, Over Shurtleff Eleven

Alton, Ill., Oct. 28.—(AP)—McKendree college defeated Shurtleff, 6 to 0, in its homecoming football game today. A pass by Fulkerson from the 22 yard line to Rauth behind Shurtleff's goal line scored the only touchdown.

Thirteen teams of bike riders will get started tonight on the six day race at Chicago Stadium. Among the stars entered are Gerard Debaets (left) and Jimmy Walthour.

Budweisers' Plot Upset in Classic Bowling Tonight

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

The Classic Bowling league, which produces strikes almost as consistently as spares are marked up by others, tonight will open a new assault on the pins that promises another batch of high scores and perhaps an upheaval in the standings such as that which drove the Moulding-Brownells from a tie with the Baby Ruths for the league leadership.

Having dusted off the Moulding-Brownells in two games out of three at the last session of the league, the third place Budweisers will attempt to bring down the Baby Ruths in one of the five matches scheduled for this evening. This match at the Cinderella alleys will pit C. Wass, E. Landman, J. Heinrich, Watson, and R. Johnson against the Baby Ruth array of L. Strouse, W. Freitag, E. Zajac, J. Bishop, and Pehrson.

Outstanding in last week's rolling was the 750 series by Eddie Krems of the Lorenz quintet. It was the second high total of the season, being topped only by Wass' 773. Another big bombardment was the Baby Ruth's 3,279 series, which included a game of 1,193, high for the year. Tonight's schedule:

Eighteen in a Row!

While the Mineralites were winning three more to increase their winning streak to 18 games, Bobby Rusch turned in the best individual series of the season in the Randolph league. He shot 726 with games of 246, 238, and 242. Reading of the Burlington Routes, one of the four teams tied for second place with 11 won and 7 lost, was not far behind with 703 on games of 223, 224, and 256. Among other high series were those of Hile, 673; Olsen, 644; Kartheiser, 644; Lorenz, 666; Carlson, 640; Davis, 642; Geiger, 655, and Krisch, 660. Thursday's schedule:

9 o'clock—Birk Brothers vs. Von Thenen Café, Sunkist Pies vs. Burlington Route, Anheuser-Busch vs. Litsinger Motors, Chuckles Bowl vs. Live Stock Press.

Close Race in North End.

As a result of the P. J. Westers knocking off the Birk Brothers for three games, there is a three way tie for first place in the North End Traveling league. On top with records of 16 won and 8 lost are the Birks, Westers, and Edelweiss. The latter took two out of three from National Teas while the Westers were taming the erstwhile pace setters. Jimmy Waterson of Luxor Cigars was individual high for the week with 683. Gratz, 207; Earle, 206; Traubenick, 203; Faetz, 202, and Achenbach, 200, are leading the individual averages. Tomorrow's schedule:

Tavern Pales vs. Edelweiss at the Milford, 7 p. m.; Birk's Superbs vs. Luxor Cigars at the Gold Coast, 9 p. m.; P. J. Westers vs. National Teas at the Lake View, 9 p. m.; H. B. Kaads vs. Birk Brothers at Samuelsons, 7 p. m.; Fox's De Luxe vs. Michelobs at the North Town, 7 p. m.

Pair Going on Tour.

Hank Marino, long one of the country's outstanding bowlers, and Gil Zunker, who last year set an all time A. B. C. record of 2,060 for the all-events and also shared in the A. B. C. doubles title, are going on the road. They are booked for a match Nov. 18 at the C. Y. O. Congress alleys. The Milwaukee pair will compete against each other or take on all challengers during their travels, the itinerary still being in the making. . . Ray Stack of the Cinderella Recreation is receiving entries for his third annual five man sweepstake to be held next Saturday at 5610 Madison street. Several leading teams already have sent in their fees, he announces.

Blasts Out a 756 Total.

Rolling games of 288, 256, and 212, Ed Riskowsky gave his rivals in the Louis P. Petersen league something to shoot at. His 756 total, supplemented by Hess' 670, helped the Macht Taverns to amass a 3,223 series and three victories over the Dutch Masters. Hill of Kay Taverns hung up a 289 game, the league's best to date. High average men are: Riskowsky, 209; Dahm, 201; T. Pellock, 200; Vaughan, 199; Hupke, 198; W. Mauge, 196; Schalk, 195; Hess, 194; Cremieux, 194; Hill, 192; Horen, 192, and Shaw, 191. The Machts lead the league with 15 victories in 18 games. . . V. H. Spiering with 568 led the week's firing in the men's Kleenex league, whose individual pace setter is A. E. Kinkel with a 184 average. . . Sandquist continues to rule over the Butler Brothers league with a 191 average. Rezny Flashes and Kleis Cubs with 12 victories in 18 starts share first place. . . The Buds and Snails are making a runaway of the Tribune Afternoon league with eight victories in nine starts. Theroux of the Pirates is nursing a 201 average while Herbeck of the Snails has high game of 254.

Cut Into Pies' Lead.

The Corina Cigars, led by B. Bernicchi, who owns top average of 210, are closing in on the leading Illinois Pies of the Windy City league. Two more reverses left the Pies with a won and lost record of 17 and 4, as compared to 16 and 5 for the Bernicchi quintet. Tomorrow's schedule:

Rock Garden Tavern vs. Mineralites, Atlas Wet Wash vs. Vogel Brothers, Illinois Pie Company vs. Soper Brothers, A. J. Cermaks vs. Curtiss Buy Jiminy, Corina Cigars vs. Rosedale Dairy, Blazek Tailors vs. J. M. Kralovecs, Svehla Primas vs. Cicero Boosters, Pilsen Olympia vs. Pinkert & Sons.

The American Brakbloks lost three games to the Bill Powers Boosters and dropped from first to third place in the Woodlawn Major league. The Young Boosters, totaling 3,044, won three games from the Club El Rado to take second place, one game behind the Powers, who have a record of 14 won and 4 lost. Klingen of the Woodlawns rolled games of 266, 214, 233 for a 713 series.

About the Women.

Mae Ebert of Windy City flattened the pins for high game of 246 and high series of 618 in the Women's Classic league, but her performance just fell short of overtaking Marie Warmbier, the individual leader, whose 177.9 average leads her by two maples. Windy City and Garden Recreation are in front in the team standings with nine won and six lost. . . Clara Helfers led the week's shooting in the Women's Kleenex league with a 511 series and also topped the averages with her 150. . . Helen Jaeger's 540 is the best series of the season for the Railway Business Women's league, which rolls on the Wabash alleys. Marge Early is second with 532. High game honors belong to Bernita Barnes with 201, followed by Mae Teske, 199. The Vikings lead the team standing with 12 won and 3 lost and also have second high game of 792, being topped in the latter respect by the Monon's 842.

13 BIKE TEAMS ARE OFF TONIGHT ON SIX DAY SPIN

Letourner to Ride with Peden at Stadium.

Chicago's 30th international bicycle race starts at the Stadium at 9 o'clock tonight with 13 teams competing. The riders are from all over the world and combine the outstanding American cyclists with the leading riders of Europe, Canada and Australia. Italy, France, Belgium, and Germany are represented in the field.

Keeping with the times, John M. Chapman, the manager of the race, has entered a Century of Progress team made up of two Chicago boys. One will be Mickey Rodak, popular south side youngster and brother of Leo Rodak, Golden Gloves champion, while the other is Steve Wagner, a rugged youth from the north side.

Letourner and Peden.

Alfred Letourner, the little French rider, who is extremely popular, will be paired with William [Torchy] Peden, the giant red head from Vancouver, B. C. Letourner and Peden have won many races, but never rode as a team before. Gerard Debaets, rugged Belgian star, will be paired with Norman Hill, San José, Cal., the professional all around bicycle champion.

George Dempsey, professional champion of America, will be paired with Bobby Thomas, youngster from Kenosha, Wis., while Eddie Miller, amateur bicycle champion, will ride with Paul Croley, Brooklyn youth, as his partner. Tony Schaller of Chicago is expected to make a good showing with Dave Lands of Irvington, N. J., while Franz Deulberg and Bill Grimm, the German-American team, can be counted upon to be among the leaders.

No. 95 for McNamara.

Reggie McNamara, the "Iron Man," looked upon as the world's greatest six day rider, will start in on his 95th six day grind tonight. McNamara is 47 years old and has won 16 races. His partner, Charley Winter, New York rider, is another veteran. Another team worth watching will be that of Tino Reboli and Giovanni Manera, Italian-American pair. Reboli may be the star of the race.

The race will be marked by three series of sprints each night, at 9, 11 and 1 o'clock, while there will also be a series of ten sprints every afternoon at 3 o'clock. The points in these sprints will score 6 for first, 4 for second, 2 for third and 1 for fourth.

The teams follow:

McNamara and Winter, Spencer and Walthour, Hill and Debaets, Reboli and Manera, Dempsey and Thomas, Letourner and Peden, Deulberg and Grimm, Ritter and Walker, Miller and Croley, Lands and Schaller, Sheehan and Crossley, Black and Seufert, Wagner and Rodak.

ILLINI REST; SEE YEARLINGS BEAT RESERVES

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—While the Illinois regulars rested today, the reserves played the freshmen, losing, 13 to 12. Jansen passed to Portman, who ran 20 yards, to score the first touchdown for the reserves, but Hoeft's place kick for goal was blocked.

Sayre, of the freshmen, caught the ball when Craven juggled a kickoff and ran for a touchdown. Smesser kicked the extra point. The freshmen were given possession of a punt on the reserve one yard line after a reserve player had touched it. Ken Meenan, former Northwestern regular, then plunged over. Meenan failed on the try for point. Leonette ran 70 yards for a reserve touchdown, but Palmer's attempt to kick for the extra point was blocked.

MORGAN PARK'S CADETS LOSE, 8-0, TO LAKE FOREST

Scoring in the first and last periods, Lake Forest academy yesterday defeated Morgan Park Military academy's football team, 8 to 0, at Lake Forest. Murphy ran nine yards for Lake Forest's touchdown shortly after the game started and in the last quarter Pilkis was downed behind his own goal line for a safety. Lineup:

New York, Oct 28.—Trading in bonds on the New York Stock exchange today was quiet and produced no important price changes. United States government securities were moderately soft, except for the treasury 3⅜s of 1941-43, which advanced 2-32. Other governments were off 1-32 to 5-32. Domestic corporation issues were irregular with small declines outnumbering advances. Foreign issues were steady.

The principal influences affecting the bond market at the moment are the monetary question and the treasury's liberty loan refunding operations.

Developments Lacking.

The action of the dollar in foreign exchange threw no additional light on the probable outcome of the new monetary policy and there were no further indications of the progress of the refunding.

The day's transactions totaled $4,223,000 face amount of bonds, compared with $4,996,000 on last Saturday. The market was narrow, even for a Saturday.

Among the foreign issues, bonds of gold standard countries were firm, while United Kingdom 5½s reacted 2 points. German issues showed little change and others were irregular.

Domestic Rails Ease.

Domestic rails were inclined to ease. Utilities were steady and industrials weaker.

Among the more active issues were: Santa Fé General 4s of 1995 which rose ⅜ point, Milwaukee adjustment 5s of 2000 which fell ⅜ point, Detroit Edison 4½s of 1961 which dropped ⅞ point, Lehigh Valley general 4s of 2003 which declined ⅜ point, and North American 5s of 1961 which eased ½ point.

Jackson, Boesel to Retain Chicago Office for Month

Jackson Brothers, Boesel & Co., who announced Thursday they had sold their five western offices, said yesterday they will retain their Chicago offices for a month or more. This firm was started 56 years ago by William S. Jackson and William C. Jackson, who has been a member of the Chicago Board of Trade since 1907.

Preferred Stock for Banks.

Now that banks are beginning to fall in line with demands that they increase their capital structures by selling preferred stocks to the Reconstruction Finance corporation a new situation is created for the holder of bank common stock.

The bank stockholder has been through a lot of punishment since 1929. If he held stock in a bank that closed he not only lost his investment but subjected himself to an assessment. If he held stock in a bank still open he fared little better for the value of his stock now is likely to be a tenth of its peak price.

If the sale of preferred is accompanied by a writedown of the common he is due to take another licking. Even where issuance of preferred entails no scaling down of the common a senior issue is placed between earnings and the common. The RFC charges 5 per cent per annum on the money it pays for bank preferred stock. In addition, after the second year 5 per cent of the preferred must be retired each year.

Few banks these days earn as much as 4 or 5 per cent on their capital. After provision for payments to the RFC, therefore, the margin of profit to be applied to the common is likely to be exceedingly thin for some time.

Low bank earnings are due principally to the lack of suitable borrowers. Most individuals and corporations to whom the banks would be glad to make loans are not borrowing.

The federal government is doing a lot of borrowing, but the interest rate on short term government paper is only a fraction of 1 per cent. As for the long term government bonds, banks hesitate to load up with them too heavily because of the possibility of inflation. And even these yield little more than 3 per cent.

Municipal bonds yield a little more, but here again the possibility of inflation is a deterrent. Besides, the credit of many municipalities has been impaired by extravagance and poor tax collections.

The bond merchandising business was once a profitable adjunct, but the banking act of 1933 took the commercial banks out of the bond business.

Profits will return to banking when business picks up sufficiently to stimulate commercial borrowing. In the meantime there will be a period during which the banks will do little better than break even. Eventually rising prices for securities and commodities are expected to help bank earnings. It would enable the banks to make recoveries on assets which have already been written down to zero.

New laws, new methods and new conditions, however, will preclude a return to the big profits of the boom years.

U. S. GOLD 'RIDDLE' IS PERPLEXING TO BRITISH MARKET

Investors Seek Pre-War High Yield Issues.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The Roosevelt riddle occupied every operator on the stock exchange during the week. After a whole week's study of the President's radio speech and the operation of the RFC dealings in gold, London still is in the dark over what he was talking about or planning to do.

It is a case, as far as they are concerned, of now you see it, now you don't, and they cannot say whether they see or not. With all political considerations swept aside, it is realized that Mr. Roosevelt must do something to appease both the hard money and inflationist supporters. The general conclusions point to the belief that he is headed for stark inflation, but all fingers are crossed.

Presents Some Paradoxes.

This situation, which was accompanied by dark hints of international monetary pandemonium, struck London the same week in which the Daladier cabinet fell on the frank refusal of French politicians to accept the economies necessary to balance the budget.

The jumble produced a succession of paradoxes with which it was almost impossible to deal. The big question in the foreign market so far has been whether Mr. Roosevelt means to buy foreign gold. It is realized that as long as he confines governmental purchases to newly mined American gold, then the RFC operations are of purely domestic concern in the United States. At the same time if this is carried out to the fullest extent, two results should have appeared. First, with the higher gold quotation the dollar should be cheapened in terms of foreign currencies. Second, the price of gold should be appreciated. One arises out of the other.

Movement Is Normal.

Instead, for the last few days, the dollar has been climbing after a wobbly start. This is normally expected during the fall when dollars are needed to pay for British purchases of American raw materials, but conditions are not at the London normal.

Kaffirs and other gold shares experienced healthy influences during the week, but it was not altogether due to Mr. Roosevelt. Instead they were inspired paradoxically by the fall of the Daladier government and by renewed assertions that the franc will be kept on the gold. The London market sees the end of French cabinet shuffles. Predictions of national elections appear and it is believed national credit will be made the issue with victory for the conservative guardians of the treasury.

There is still another twist to Mr. Roosevelt's plans as understood in Europe. If and when he starts buying European gold, then with the heavy American premium, South African and other outputs should go to New York where they would fetch a higher price.

Frisco Railway Trustees Appointed Permanently

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 28.—(AP)—The permanent appointment of John G. Lonsdale and James M. Kurn as trustees of the St. Louis-San Francisco railway, was approved today by Federal Judge Charles B. Faris. Consent of all litigants incidental to bankruptcy of the road, except Baltimore bondholders represented by Louis Mayer, was obtained to the order.

Youngstown Steel Output Will Drop to 32 Per Cent

Youngstown, O., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Steel production in the Youngstown district will drop next week to about 32 per cent of capacity, compared with 42 per cent this week, mill schedules revealed today. The number of active open hearth furnaces will decline to 30 of the 83 in the district, against 39 this week.

Western Wine Men Plan Big Advertising Campaign

The Bank of America (California) says in a survey of far western business conditions that wine producers will spend more than $5,000,000 a year in advertising on repeal of prohibition laws. The bank says the bulk of the advertising will be done in newspapers.

U. S. MINT GETS FLOOD OF GOLD AS PRICE RISES

Mines Send Metal to San Francisco.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Newly mined gold, made more precious by price advances, piled up in the United States mint here today as employés struggled to keep pace with the influx.

The "gold rush" swelled to a high wave, said Mint Superintendent Peter J. Haggerty, after he received instructions yesterday to accept government market consignments.

Haggerty said the largest consignment, 66,250 ounces, arrived Friday from the Benquet Consolidated Mining company in the Philippine islands. It brought $2,014,000, or $734,000 more than it would have brought at the old domestic price of $20.67.

The receipts at the mint for several weeks have averaged between 6,000 and 10,000 ounces daily, most of it from small miners scattered over California and other western states.

R. F. C. Issues Note Circular.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—The Reconstruction Finance corporation today issued a circular describing the notes which will be used in buying gold from the producers.

The notes will be exempt both as to principal and interest from all taxation, except surtaxes, estate, inheritance, and gift taxes. They will be issued on a discount basis of one-fourth of 1 per cent per annum on the purchase price of the metal from the date of issue to Feb. 1, 1934, when they will mature.

Speculation continued as to whether the administration would supplement RFC purchases of the newly-mined gold by buying gold in the world markets, another possible feature of the plan as enunciated by President Roosevelt in his address last Sunday. Administration officials said they did not know whether gold purchases would be made abroad or not.

BRITAIN TO FOLLOW U. S.?

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Astonishment and disbelief were expressed here tonight at a report circulated in New York that Britain was "seriously considering" some such gold policy as President Roosevelt is trying.

The incredulity was all the greater because so few in the treasury or the Bank of England profess to know what the President is driving at, his policy remains a mystery to London.

ROCK ISLAND TO DEFAULT BOND INTEREST NOV. 1

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 28.—The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway has notified the New York Stock exchange that the Nov. 1 interest on its convertible 4½ per cent bonds of 1960 will not be paid.

Missouri Pacific gave notice that the usual interest will be paid on its extended third mortgage 4 per cent bonds of 1928.

The Wabash railway will pay interest on its first mortgage 5s of 1939.

The Nov. 1 payment on the 1945 series 7 per cent bonds of the City of Dresden will be defaulted.

Decision Expected Soon in Kentucky Bank Suit

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 28.—(AP)—A decision in the $14,000,000 receiver's suit against directors of the National Bank of Kentucky is expected to be given soon by Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle of Detroit, who heard final arguments in the case yesterday. The arguments started before Judge Tuttle on Oct. 17.

PENNSYLVANIA ASKS PERMISSION TO START DOOR DELIVERY PLAN

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—(AP)—The Pennsylvania Railroad company today asked interstate commerce commission approval for installation of store door pickup and delivery service for less than carload freight at all points on its system.

The application seeks permission to put the service into effect on less than the statutory thirty days' notice. No effective date is named, however.

The service is in line with correspondence between Joseph B. Eastman, coördinator of transportation, and President W. W. Atterbury of the Pennsylvania, which Eastman made public.

Atterbury had asked if the coordinator would object and Eastman told him he would not. The service would go into effect over protests of the New York Central.

At a meeting yesterday executives representing a majority of roads east of the Mississippi river and north of the Potomac voted opposition to the Pennsylvania innovation.

U. S. OPPOSITION TO SPECULATION DRAWS PROTEST

Sharp protests were voiced in the grain trade yesterday over the latest reports from Washington that the administration is seeking to eliminate speculation on the stock and commodity exchanges. The government will defeat its own purposes in attempts to do away with speculation, according to brokers here.

"Washington should thank God that grain speculators are willing to accept the ownership of wheat at a time like this when otherwise the bulk of the 130 million bushels represented by speculative futures would still be on the farms," B. W. Snow, Bartlett, Frazier & Co., declared. "The wheat represented by the futures would be just another frozen asset, with the farms' buying power tied up in raw material.

"Bar the grain speculator and the producer to date would have been able to market only such wheat as there was an immediate demand for. The farmer sells around 60 per cent of his crop within 90 days after harvest, and if it had not been for the speculator who assumes the risk of ownership in carrying the wheat until the consumer wants it, there would have been no market for these sales, no matter how desperately the producer needed funds."

Comes Out in Opposition to Merger Plan.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 28.—Recent statements by Baltimore and Ohio railroad officials in opposition to the rail consolidation plan sponsored by F. H. Prince, Boston banker, served to throw into relief a document bearing on financial operations furthered by Mr. Prince which until then had remained in comparative obscurity.

The document is a report by the interstate commerce commission detailing the steps by which a group headed by Mr. Prince merged the Pere Marquette with the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton, a transfer which was followed by receiverships for both roads.

The report which the B. & O. interests have made an issue was published recently as a house document by the sixty-fifth congress. It was cited by John J. Cornwell, general counsel for the B. & O., Mr. Cornwell's speech being followed by a condemnation of the Prince plan by Daniel Willard, president of the B. & O.

Relates Prince's Maneuvers.

The report relates stirring events in the early history of the Pere Marquette, now one of the Van Sweringen lines, and the C., H. & D., now controlled by the B. & O. The report shows how, by a series of adroit maneuvers, a syndicate headed by Mr. Prince acquired stock of the Pere Marquette, sold it at a much higher price to the C., H. & D., and later merged the two lines.

Eventually the two roads were separated, but not before, according to the commission, the Prince interests, in their control of the Pere Marquette, "undermaintained road and equipment, paid unearned dividends on common stock, and in the eighteen months of their management added $2,500,000 net to current liabilities, also added over $14,500,000 to outstanding long term debt.

Says Transactions Are "Tainted."

"Of the Prince interests it must be said that, while their earlier Pere Marquette transactions are properly within the competence of an administrative tribunal, only a court of criminal jurisdiction could adequately deal with their subsequent transactions as to both of these roads. This taint of criminality attaches to many of their associates in the C., H. & D. syndication of May 19, 1904, and even more to their successors in C., H. & D. control."

The report of the commission was made in 1917, but, because of the outbreaks of war, quickly lapsed into the obscurity of the commission's archives.

Get $125 for "Watered" Stock.

The report relates how the Prince management obtained control of the Pere Marquette through the purchase of common stock at $85 a share, remarking that the management's policy of expansion included the "acquisition of new equipment costing over $6,000,000, and of about 383 miles of main and branch lines, most of which had a history of failure."

After obtaining working control of the Pere Marquette the Prince interests formed a syndicate to purchase the C., H. & D.

"These interests," the report says, "sold to the C. H. & D. syndicate in 1904, receiving $125 for their common stock, which was water, and $110 per share for 10,000 shares of preferred stock. The surplus of that date was replaced in the following year by a deficit of at least $1,086,127, allowance being made for some $843,000 concealed by falsification of accounts."

NEW MONETARY PROGRAM FACES TEST THIS WEEK

Prices Fail to Keep Step with Gold.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—Having produced an uneven rise in commodity prices amounting to only 27 per cent of the manipulated rise in gold prices, President Roosevelt's new monetary program faces a crucial test in the coming week, experts admitted today.

Although the theory expounded by the President in his radio address of a week ago inferred that commodity prices would follow step by step with the progressive government pegging of gold prices, the commodity price index, as compiled by a leading investment service, has advanced only 1.8 per cent while gold prices were being raised 6.7 per cent.

Again today, for the second time in the four days during which the administration has been raising gold prices, commodities refused to follow the lead of gold and fell back on the exchanges.

Raise Gold to $31.82.

The decline occurred in the face of an increase in the gold price to $31.82 an ounce announced this morning at the treasury. Today's gold price was 6 cents over that of yesterday and brought the purchasing power of the dollar as measured by gold down to 64.9 cents, under 65 cents for the first time since manipulations began.

A new threat to the success of the administration's gold program loomed today when the London price of gold, which has been following the lead of the American price, dropped back instead of advancing. London bullion brokers fixed a rate of 129 shillings 8 pence an ounce. Converted into dollars, the London price was equal to $30.57, or $1.25 below the RFC price.

Since Wednesday the administration has now set four figures, each higher than the one preceding. Meanwhile, the excess over the world price has jumped sharply upward. The following table summarizes the developments:

	Wed.	Thurs.	Fri.	Sat.
Domestic price..	$31.36	$31.54	$31.76	$31.82
World price.....	31.09	31.06	31.10	30.57
Excess of domestic price........	.27	.48	.66	1.25
Daily increase in domestic price......		.18	.22	.06

May Enter World Gold Market.

Should the diverging tendencies continue and the falling London price push up the value of the dollar, the United States might be forced into the world gold market in order to maintain its policy of dollar depreciation in terms of gold.

Treasury officials refused to reveal their reactions to the results of the monetary program at the end of the first week in which it has operated. Skeptical at the outset, the treasury has taken the official attitude that sufficient time has not elapsed to determine how much effect the gold prices will have on commodity prices.

The White House has maintained a studied silence since the gold buying started. Advisers who helped the President shape the plan, however, have declared that the two days of heavy prices on the exchanges have not disturbed their belief in the scheme.

Prices Fail to Keep Pace.

When the monetary program was launched Wednesday morning the purchasing power of the dollar as measured by domestic gold prices was 69.4 cents, having drifted down 30.6 cents since the abandonment of the gold standard.

In four successive days the President's three man monetary board has boosted the price of gold from $29.80 an ounce to $31.82, reducing the number of grains of gold the dollar will buy from 16.10 to 15.08, or, in other words, cutting 4.5 cents of the purchasing power of the dollar in terms of domestic gold.

Meanwhile, Moody's index of cash commodity prices has advanced from 122.9 to 125.2, a gain of only 1.8 per cent. The theory of the monetary program has been that as the dollar's purchasing power in terms of gold decreased its purchasing power in terms of other commodities would fall, the prices would rise.

RUSSIA OBTAINS LARGE RAILWAY GASOLINE ORDER

DAIREN, Manchuria, Oct. 28.—(AP)—One of the largest oil contracts ever signed in the far east has been concluded by soviet Russia with the Japanese owned South Manchuria railway.

The soviet naphtha oil syndicate agrees to supply the railway with 500,000 gallons of gasoline during the first year of the agreement, 1,000,000 gallons in the second year, and as high as 5,000,000 gallons annually five years hence.

The price is said to be 30 sen a gallon [or about 8 cents gold]. This is about half the current retail price, and is described as the lowest price ever quoted in recent years.

American and British-Dutch oil companies will be hard hit by the new contract, it is said, as these companies formerly supplied large quantities of their products to the South Manchuria railway.

Bankers Seek Way to Revive Capital Uses

BY HOWARD WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROBERT E. CHRISTIE JR.

Hot Springs, Va., Oct. 28.—Delegates to the annual convention of the Investment Bankers' Association of America gathered here today to devise means to revive their lost industry and to bring back the vanished capital market.

The principal subject under discussion in this convention, which will last for five days, is the new federal securities act, which the investment bankers blame for the drying up of long term credit.

This subject, however, is being approached with the utmost tact, because what the bankers want would require amendments to the act and that avenue opens up all sorts of political ramifications.

Avoid Political Effects.

So anxious are the bankers not to make speeches that might have adverse political repercussions that they have arranged to hold some of their forum discussions behind closed doors. The principal session on the securities act, however, will be held tomorrow afternon and will be an open affair at which comments from the floor will be encouraged.

Echoes of the senate banking committee's Pecora investigations are being heard in the convention halls.

Many delegates from the west have been expressing wonderment at the nominating committee's selection of Robert E. Christie of New York, a partner of Dillon, Read & Co., for president of the association during the coming year. It is regarded as unlikely, however, that this will create an open schism in the ranks, because the nominating committee's selection of Mr. Christie several weeks ago was unanimous and election of the candidate nominated by the committee is a tradition in the I. B. A.

Christie a Senate Witness.

Mr. Christie is well regarded by his colleagues in the association and the only question in the minds of some of the western delegates who are lukewarm toward his candidacy, is whether his election would strengthen the cause of the investment banking fraternity at a time when it will want to approach congress with a petition for revision of the security act.

During the senate banking committee's investigation of Dillon, Read & Co., Mr. Christie testified concerning various underwritings undertaken by his firm.

Facilitating the industrial recovery program by bringing back the market for long term securities is the central theme of the I. B. A. convention. The delegates are convinced that an amendment to that portion of the securities act which renders officers and directors of issuing companies, as well as underwriting firms, jointly and severally liable for losses if there is some minor error in the voluminous prospect accompanying security offering would overcome the reluctance of corporations to issue bonds and the hesitancy of investment bankers to offer them to the public.

Urge Making Law More Specific.

The delegates express the opinion that by making the law more specific the same measure of protection can be provided for the investor and the barrier to bond financing removed.

The first session of the convention today centered around a discussion of the British companies act, parts of which were used as a pattern in the drawing up of the new federal securities act.

British methods were discussed by Leonard D. Adkins of the New York law firm of Cravath, De Gersdorf, Swaine & Wood, F. Kenneth Stephenson of Stone & Webster and Blodgett and Col. E. Gerald Hanson of Hanson Brothers, Inc., Montreal.

The delegates voted that the British law is unsuited to American needs because of the different manner in which new issues are floated in Great Britain.

DOLLAR SLIDES A LITTLE LOWER IN OTHER MONEYS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 28.—The dollar declined in foreign exchange today but lost only a part of its gains of the previous day. Trading was quiet and, despite its losses, the dollar gave a good account of itself. In terms of the French franc it dropped to 67 cents, a fall of .64 on the day. At this level, however, it was still far above the value indicated for it by the RFC's gold price which, at yesterday's quotation of $31.82, was 64.96 cents.

The recovery of the foreign exchanges against the dollar was general. Sterling advanced 2 cents to $4.72¾, the franc was up 6 points to 5.83½ cents, guilders gained 50 points to 60.18 cents, belgas 25 points to 20.80 cents, and Swiss francs 25 points to 28.88 cents. Marks improved 20 points to 35.60 cents, lire gained 3¼ points to 7.83 cents and the Scandinavian currencies were 10 to 17 points dearer. The Canadian dollar was again unchanged at 98.06¼ cents.

Wolves Find Prey Despite Securities Act

It takes a good law to thwart the shyster stock promoters. The securities act of 1933 was curtailing the sale of "blue sky" gold stocks so some promoters conceived the splendid idea of giving stock away. There is no law against that. The catch, though, is that the stock is assessable and thus opens an easy avenue of raising money. One individual has been giving away nonassessable stock. The catch here is that the stockholders will shortly be given rights to purchase additional stock, which, of course, is exempt from the securities law.

If you didn't happen to know that the late [we hope] unlamented depression has accomplished some good you may be interested in what John R. Thompson Jr. thinks. Mr. Thompson, who is head of the restaurant chain bearing his name, says that Americans developed saner diets during the depression. In the Thompson restaurants, he reports, consumption of meat has increased 9 per cent per customer, while the demand for fancy pastries and desserts has remained the same. He also believes that the "return" of liquor will make Americans "appreciate the flavor and esthetic qualities of food as well as its nutritional value."

"The professors who devised the administration's gold price raising scheme speak about vast unexplored subjects with that degree of assurance which betokens ignorance."—A loop banker.

"We are satisfied that the gold plan has few very definite meanings. First and foremost, the administration is not in favor of the methods of the conservatives. . . . Second, our debt ridden country is not to come out of the depression by the deflation, receivership and "wringer" process. Third, if present measures—gold control, credit inflation and redistribution of income—should fail, there is little question that the cry for greenbacks would follow."—Eastman, Dillon & Co.

To add to all the known ills of the oil industry such as overproduction, price cutting, bootlegging, etc., it now develops that there is another question itching the minds of oil men. They don't know what oil is. When they do find out they hope to be able to turn out many petroleum products not now obtained.

Edward W. Washburn, Washington, D. C., chemist, told the members of the American Petroleum institute that crude oil contains 3 materials never before reported. They are "dimenthylcylopentane," "methyheptane," and "hemminellitene." Just ask any filling station man to explain them to you. Washburn confessed that there are still lots of things about oil that he and his staff of five investigators don't know. His staff has been working for six years on "fundamental research project No. 6"—or what oil is made of—in the United States bureau of standards with the assistance of the institute.

CHAIN STORES' PROFITS LOWER, SURVEY SHOWS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—(AP)—The trade commission said tonight in a report on chain stores that the tendency for most of them appeared to be in the direction of declining average sales per store.

The report, one of a long series made to the senate, added that the tendency also was toward decreasing business income per store, decreasing turnover of business investment and declining rates of return on investment.

This, it said, was "notwithstanding the general growth of chain store business as a whole and the increase in size and great success of many individual chains."

The report covered 1,337 chain store systems for the years 1913, 1919, 1922, 1925, and 1927 to 1930, inclusive.

GRAINS LEAD WEEK'S RISE IN COMMODITIES; SILVER SOARS 2 CENTS

Commodity prices soared during the last week with grains in the lead. Grains scored substantial gains, as did all other commodities, with the exception of butter and eggs, which dragged throughout the week. Silver furnished a sensation with an upturn of over 2 cents an ounce at the extreme. Closing prices for the last two weeks compared with the lowest levels of the season follow:

DEEPER PROBING OF WIGGIN DEALS SET FOR TUESDAY

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Additional millions in stock market profits piled up by personal companies of Albert H. Wiggin, former chairman of the Chase National bank, will be investigated next week by the senate banking committee.

Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, who was in New York today, will resume his questioning of Wiggin Tuesday, after having brought before the committee yesterday evidence of profits of more than $10,000,000 in Chase bank stock operations by the banker's companies.

Senate committee investigators said this total represented only a comparatively small share of the total gains to the banker from trading in other securities than those of the Chase bank, of which he was head for approximately twenty-one years.

Investigators said evidence to show that Wiggin's income tax was reduced through handling the trading by personal or family corporations also will be presented.

On concluding the examination of Wiggin, considered likely by Wednesday, the committee will question Winthrop W. Aldrich, successor to Wiggin as head of the bank, about its operations.

Recall Boom? It Ended Just 4 Years Ago

New York, Oct. 28.—[U. P.]—Wall street was quiet, darkened and locked up tonight in vivid contrast to a scene written into history exactly four years ago.

Four years ago there was an excitement and electric intensity. Buildings were lighted. Brokerage houses were occupied by great staffs of workers, hired during a boom market. Limousines were pulled up at curbs, their chauffeurs yawning while waiting for harried financiers. Banks were lighted.

For that night marked completion of a 9,212,000 share day on the Stock exchange. It was the day that started the stock market depression.

A Worse Day Was Ahead.

Unknown to most of those in Wall street that night, it was the eve of a 16,410,000 share day at the start of perhaps the greatest depressions in history.

These four years have brought many changes. Almost forgotten are the days of tremendous "prosperity" preceding that break. Men whose words were law have dropped into oblivion. Business is at a level—despite a recovery since March—that blushes in comparison with the levels touched then.

Forty and fifty point drops were registered in stock market values on Oct. 28 and 29, 1929. Prices were still miles out of sight of present day levels, but fear was mounting.

Prophets of Optimism.

There were these comments after the Oct. 28 and 29 crashes which demoralized the market but left it far above the present levels:

"The pendulum has swung too far. The list is filled with bargains and my friends and I are all buying stocks."—John J. Raskob.

"Industry and basic financial organizations are sound . . . there is no panic and no likelihood of there being one."—Mayor James J. Walker.

"Believing that fundamental conditions of the country are sound and that there is nothing in the business situation to warrant the destruction of values that has taken place on the exchanges during the last week, my son and I have for some days been purchasing sound common stocks."—John D. Rockefeller Sr.

Stock—	Div.	Oct. 27, 1929.	Oct. 29, 1929.	Today.	Div.
Amer Tel.....	$9	266	204	115⅛	$9
Amer Can....	5	153⅛	120	91	4
Am For Pow	..	98⅞	55	8⅞	..
U S Steel.....	8	203⅝	174	39¼	..
Cons Gas.....	3	117⅝	91¼	41⅞	3
N Y Central.	8	208⅝	189⅛	31⅛	..
Penna	4	96⅛	82	26	.50

The commodity markets gave the same reflection. As instance:

Wheat—December	127⅛	124⅝	.88½
May	135⅜	135⅝	.91⅞

One broker was asked today to comment on the difference between Oct. 28, 1929, and Oct. 28, 1933. His remark:

"That reminds me. They still owe me for supper for Oct. 29, 1929."

Only 3 Adverse Dividend Changes; 18 Are Favorable

New York, Oct. 28.—Only three unfavorable dividend changes were made this week, the smallest number for any one week since 1929, the Standard Statistics company reports. There were eighteen favorable revisions, one less than in the previous week. Five payments were increased, four resumed, three extras, and six initial payments.

DETROIT BANK GROUPS FRAUDS, RECEIVERS SAY

Insolvent, Illegal, They Charge.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—Receivers for the two closed National Banks of Detroit today charged fraud in their answers and a cross bill to the suit started by stockholders of the banks seeking to enjoin 100 per cent assessments levied by the controller of the currency.

They charged that the Detroit bankers company, and the Guardian Detroit Union group were formed in the furtherance of an illegal and fraudulent scheme and that both holding concerns "unlawfully used the assets in speculative financial transactions prohibited by law."

Substantially the same charges were made by both receivers—B. C. Schram for the Guardian National Bank of Commerce, and C. O. Thomas, receiver for the First National Bank, Detroit.

Ask Full Judgments.

Judgments were asked for the full amounts of the assessment against all plaintiffs, and all of the intervening petitioners on both cases. The receivers allege that by the organization of both holding companies, a fraud was perpetrated by all the stockholders of the group on the depositors of both National banks, and that for these reasons, the shareholders of both holding companies are liable for their pro rata share of the assessment against both banks. This is $6.43 a share for the Guardian National and $14.05 for the First National.

Names of the stockholders suing in the two cases read like a blue book of Detroit business and financial life.

The assessments involved in the case of the First National bank is $25,000,000, and $10,000,000 in the case of the Guardian National.

Deception Alleged.

Schram, in his answer, alleges that Guardian Detroit Union group was used for the purpose of effecting improper and unlawful mergers and consolidations of banks and trust companies, "which were effected at such a furious speed that it was impossible to ever determine the true condition of any unit bank, and for the purpose of fraudulently deceiving the general public into believing that the combined banks were growing, prosperous institutions, whereas, they were in reality tottering, insolvent and declining in size, financial strength and responsibility."

Thomas alleges that it was only because the Guardian Detroit Union group "started in this mad scramble for mergers and consolidations two years previous to the organization of the Detroit Bankers company, that the Detroit Bankers company absorbed unit banks and trust companies a little slower than the Guardian Detroit Union group."

Statements Declared Misleading.

The receivers assert that both holding companies issued misleading financial statements of their condition and of their various banks and trust companies to "deceive the depositing public" and that both holding companies shifted and commingled the assets of their various unit banks and trust companies "through a chain of interwoven subsidiary corporations to mislead both the depositing public, as well as federal and state bank examiners."

Both receivers admit that the respective holding companies were organized "for ostensible lawful purpose," but each asserts that the true purpose was to further an illegal and fraudulent scheme to operate a group of national and state banks and trust companies, "contrary to law."

Advertised Protection.

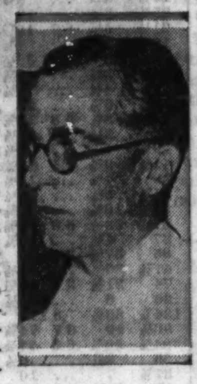
The receivers also say that not only did both holding companies constantly advertise to the general depositing public that the liability imposed on shareholders of national bank stock was enforceable against the holding company shareholders, but that both holding companies went so far as to print in clear, bold, and unmistakable type on both sides of the shares of stock of both holding companies the language notifying the shareholders, as well as the entire world, that the holding companies' stockholders were liable for a double assessment.

The receivers also deny that the companies are now, at the time of the suspension of the banks on Feb. 11 or at any time prior thereto, "possessed of valuable assets in excess of their liabilities." Both assert that the holding companies "were and are hopelessly and irretrievably insolvent from their very inception."

Charges that the federal government closed, or had anything to do with the closing the two banks were strenuously denied in the receivers' answer.

Textile Chief Denies Charge of "Chiseling"

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]



GEORGE A. SLOAN.

New York, Oct. 28.—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace was taken to task today for his statement that the 30 per cent spurt in the textile industry in July was the result of an attempt by manufacturers to beat the cotton processing tax and wage requirements of the industry's code. George A Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile institute, challenged the assertion of the cabinet member.

If Wallace was correctly quoted, he was "misinformed as to the facts," Sloan asserted. Wallace made the statement Friday in explaining why the federal reserve board figures showed that the industries which are operating under NRA codes and the processing taxes have shown a slump in recent weeks.

Says Buyers Boosted Demand.

Wallace said that the manufacturers anticipated the higher wages and taxes by stepping up production before they went into effect.

"There was an enormous demand from buyers on the cotton mills for shipment of goods in May, June, and July," Sloan declared. "It involved an important increase in the consumption of raw cotton. That the mills were not manufacturing during this period to fill this demand is shown by two things.

"First, that cotton mill stocks in the aggregate, instead of heaping up, were reduced to the lowest point in years. Second, to say cotton mills were seeking to take advantage of pre-code wages is squarely contradicted by the fact that this industry proposed its code providing for higher wages on the very day that the President signed the national recovery act."

Wages Raised Before Code.

Moreover, Sloan declared, the industry did not wait for the code to go into effect to raise wages. Increases, he said, were made throughout the industry.

"If there had been any such spirit to chisel labor or to defeat the purposes of the President's program," Sloan added, "this industry obviously would not have been the first to out its code into operation. The successful operation of the cotton textile code is a matter of record with the administration."

USE OF CHECKS SHOWS BUSINESS ABOVE YEAR AGO

Business, as measured by checks cashed at reserve member banks, swung sharply above the year ago level in the Chicago reserve district last week. In 37 leading clearing cities the debits to individual accounts ran 17.1 per cent ahead of last year in the week ended Wednesday.

A recession from the preceding week, however, was shown by the figures released yesterday by the Chicago Reserve bank. The decline from the previous week was 5.3 per cent. Debits aggregated $744,212,000 in 38 principal cities, against $785,844,000 in the preceding week. In 37 cities where year ago figures are available debits aggregated $743,868,000, against $635,183,000 last year.

The gain reverses the trend of the preceding week, when several large cities, including Chicago, reported the first loss from 1932 in many weeks. Chicago bank debits last week were $490,989,000, against $382,956,000 in the preceding week. Other cities reporting gains were Milwaukee, Wis., Indianapolis, Ind., Peoria, Ill., and Kalamazoo, Mich. Detroit is still behind 1932.

FORECLOSURES ON 2,589 HOMES HALTED IN WEEK

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—(AP)—The Home Owners Loan corporation said today its activities prevented 2,589 foreclosures on urban properties to a value of $9,903,920 during the week ended Oct. 20.

The new total of foreclosures avoided was given at 22,832 with a dollar volume of $65,271,957. Individual loan applications tentatively approved at the home office reached 86,220, totaling $244,082,233.

The corporation said that up to Oct. 20, loans completely paid out numbered 2,328 and amounted to $6,724,911.

EDISON BUSINESS GAINS BUT TAXES SLASH PROFITS

Chicago Utility Cites 3d Quarter Result.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

An increase of 9,100 over a year ago in the number of customers, a marked gain in the total output of electricity, and a revival in the demand of residential and other retail consumers were the highlights reported in the quarterly statement issued yesterday by the Commonwealth Edison company.

Production of electricity by the company in the three months ended Sept. 30 ran 14.4 per cent ahead of the third quarter of last year. Gross revenues showed a corresponding increase over the year ago figures but net income lagged, due to new taxes and other additional charges. Profits actually fell below the year ago figures, as was the case with the Public Service of Northern Illinois, which issued its report Friday.

Tax Burden Reduces Profits.

This anomaly was explained by James Simpson, chairman, as the result of the tax burden and other unavoidable expense the company has had to shoulder.

Third quarter gross revenue was $17,458,490, compared with $16,804,591 in the corresponding 1932 quarter. At the same time net income declined to $946,846 from the $1,212,086 earned on the smaller gross last year. Third quarter net was equivalent to 58 cents a share on the capital stock, against 75 cents a share in the September quarter of 1932. The current quarterly dividend rate is $1 a share.

Gross revenues for the first nine months ran 3.9 per cent below 1932 but made a more favorable comparison than the first six months, when gross business was down 7.2 per cent. Gross for the nine months was $53,424,582, against $55,583,079 last year.

Net Income Declines Sharply.

Net income for the nine months this year was $4,343,069, equivalent to $2.67 a share. The same 1932 period yielded net income of $7,269,108, or $4.54 a share.

The most favorable aspect of the report was the substantial gain in customers. Mr. Simpson pointed out that the 9,100 gain in the quarter reversed the trend in the preceding three months, when the company lost 11,400 customers.

"On Sept. 30," he added, "the total number of customers was 4,600 more than on the same date in 1932."

The 14.4 per cent gain in output was due principally to the increased industrial demand, consumption by A Century of Progress grounds, and from activities stimulated by the Fair.

More significant is the recent improvement in residential and other retail classes of service, which Mr. Simpson said is showing "an encouraging increase over a year ago."

Third Quarter Normally Low.

The third quarter is normally the company's lowest production period while the first and last quarters of the year are the highest.

	1933.	1932.
Gross revenues	$17,458,490.33	$16,804,591.26
*Net income..	946,845.81	1,212,085.60
Shares out ..	1,623,459	1,600,692
Per share earnings	$0.58	$0.75

The company also furnished figures on results for the twelve months ended Sept. 30. Gross for the period was $72,242,598, against $75,904,500 in the preceding year. Net was $7,133,448, or $4.39 a share, compared with $10,706,020, or $6.68 a sharefi in the preceding twelve months.

Most Chicago Bank Stocks Sell Lower During Week

Lower prices prevailed last week in the Chicago bank stock market. Shares of the First National bank sold down to 50, then moved up to close at 52 to 53½, a net loss of 15 points for the week. Continental Illinois National eased fractionally to finish 24½ bid to 25½ asked. Northern Trust closed at 258 to 265 for a loss of 12 points for the week, after selling as low as 250. Harris Trust was unchanged at 185 to 195.

STOCKS DECLINE; SESSION PROVES UNUSUALLY DULL

Traders Take Attitude of 'Watchful Waiting.'

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 28.—Traders of both bull and bear camps neglected today's stock market and the net result was one of the dreariest week-end sessions since inauguration of the "new deal." Volume fell to some 376,590 shares and prices sagged from fractions to a point or so in nearly all departments.

Floor traders provided the bulk of what activity the day brought forth and one of them seemed particularly bent on making anything more than a perfunctory showing. The ticker was quiet for minutes at a time.

Brokerage house comment indicated that the little revival of enthusiasm engineered by the President's radio speech last Sunday night had about spent its force for the time being, at least, and that the rank and file had settled once more into their old attitude of sitting back and awaiting something to turn up.

Basis for Uncertainty.

The new feeling of uncertainty and doubt is finding a new basis of some importance in the government's evident plans to establish some sort of a curb over speculative activity. The street is especially concerned over dispatches indicating an intention in high official quarters to limit the fluctuations of prices in the day to day trading on the exchange along with those of other speculative markets of the country.

Mining and repeal stocks went begging throughout the session and the chief losses of the day were recorded in these two groups. Profit taking by traders who had bought into the issues before the forward movement was responsible for much of the weakness of these issues. National Distilleries was the chief selling target in the alcohol division, losing more than two points. Among the metals, Homestake Mining gave up another 7 points of its recent gains and losses of 1 to 2 points or so were suffered by McIntyre U. S. Smelting and others.

Pivotal Issues Heavy.

Most of the so-called pivotal issues found the going heavy. United States Steel common gave up a point or more and observers guessed that some of its troubles were traceable to Coördinator Eastman's rejection of the steel companies' offer to sell rails at $37.75 a ton and his insistence on a lower price. Bethlehem eased down with the leader, but neither stock was under any particular pressure.

Oil issues again showed a firmness that made them stand out from the rest of the list.

The almost complete dearth of speculative interests was perhaps due to the fact that a number of ordinarily active stocks did not open until well along in the second hour of trading, while others did not appear on the tape at all.

BROKERS FEARING DRASTIC CONTROL ASK SAFEGUARDS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 28.—Faced with the prospect of federal regulation of security and commodity markets within six months, a group of influential members of the New York Stock exchange believes the exchange should coöperate with the administration to ensure the drafting of legislation which it regards as sound.

These brokers, who once feared that federal regulation would hamstring the exchange, have become reconciled to national control. They now are seeking to avoid the drastic federal rules which they believe would become law if the problem were thrown into the lap of congress.

Whatever form regulation takes, most brokers believe the rules will work for a temporary reduction in the volume of trading. Many of the members of the exchange are no longer alarmed at this possibility. They believe the exchange is a great national asset and that the administration will recognize it as such in drafting scientific legislation which will permit the continued growth of a sound brokerage business.

COTTON PRICES DECLINE AFTER HIGHER OPENING

Trade in cotton was mixed. Foreign inquiry early made an opening of 4 to 5 points higher, but the demand was soon satisfied and prices receded sharply, closing around the lowest of the day.

Net losses on futures in Chicago were 3 to 10 points, the active months being off 3 to 6 points; other markets were off 9 to 11 points on futures and 10 points off on spots. The latter in New York was 9.75 cents; New Orleans, 9.45 cents, while Galveston and Houston were 9.40 cents. Liverpool closed 1 point lower.

Spinners' takings for the week were 413,000 bales and the into sight movement 726,000 bales for the week. Prices follow:

SILVER FUTURES

Weakness in stocks and grain and the Washington reports that the government may seek to curtail speculation in commodities started a selling movement in silver futures that carried prices off .23 to .42 of a cent per ounce from Friday's finish. Total sales were 2,450,000 ounces. October closed at 39.07 cents, December 39.16 cents, March 39.75 to 39.80 cents, May 40.18 cents, July 40.58 cents, and September 40.98 cents.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—(AP)—SUGAR—Raw was quiet today and with the futures market closed there was little disposition to make fresh commitments. The undertone, however, was steady and prices were unchanged at 3.30c for spots, with no sales reported. Refined sugar was quiet with only moderate withdrawals against old contracts and new business still satisfied through second hand offerings. Prices were unchanged, with refiners quoting 4.60c and second hands available at 4.52½c to 4.57½c.

BUTTER AND EGGS DROP; LIQUIDATION CONTINUES

Butter and egg futures dropped again on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday. Butter lost ¼@⅜c; and eggs, ⅛@⅜c for the day. Liquidation continued and switching was heavy, gaining actively in butter.

The egg market did not respond to favorable news. Storage withdrawals totaled 11,000 cases more than last year but in some quarters may be found expectations of an increase in production in the near future.

The Dairy Marketing corporation again was the only buyer of fresh butter. This accumulation of fresh supplies has had no influence on the futures which represent the storage stocks. The huge excess over last year in storage continued to gain.

Sales: butter, 230 cars; eggs, 200 cars. Deliveries: eggs, 1 car. Prices follow:

GRAIN TRADERS

The northern hemisphere wheat crop is now in the bin, the outturn is definitely known. We are coming into the season of the year when forecasting grain prices is the easiest to determine and should therefore show the greatest profits.

In the past twelve months Ralph M Ainsworth has made big profits for himself and for those who subscribe to his service. His first loss of the year will be shown in bulletin of October 30th, which is free for the asking. Mr. Ainsworth makes every trade he advises his clients to make. He makes no other trades.

U. S. FARM LOANS PASS 2 BILLIONS SINCE JULY, 1929

Do Not Include Wheat Stabilization Loss.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—More than $2,000,000,000 of federal funds have been advanced to farmers by various agricultural credit agencies since July, 1929, and a total of $2,370,000,000 is still outstanding in loans by such agencies, some of which began operating earlier.

This is reported by officials in a survey of what the government has done to help the farmer in recent years. The study was prompted by the new demands for government action in relief of farmers, ranging from immediate restoration of the pre-war purchasing power of the farmer's dollar to a guaranteed return of production costs plus 5 per cent for labor.

These totals take no account of the $360,000,000 expended by the defunct federal farm board in its attempt to peg wheat and cotton prices and increase the return to farmers for their products.

Written Off as Loss.

Through its stabilization operations the board kept the domestic wheat and cotton prices substantially above world levels, but when the board was succeeded by the farm credit administration last March the whole amount was written off as a loss, since that part of the $500,000,000 revolving fund placed at the board's disposal was no longer available.

Much of the present outstanding government indebtedness of farmers, officials say, will have to be refinanced, but the farm credit administration faces the task of refinancing a staggering amount of farm mortgage indebtedness. For this purpose it is making loans through the federal land banks at a rate of more than $1,005,000 a day.

While loans for other purposes are constantly going forward the agricultural adjustment administration is embarking upon a program of commodity loans to be advanced through the Commodity Credit corporation.

$250,000,000 for Cotton Loans.

A total of $250,000,000 already has been made available from the RFC for loans of 10 cents a pound on cotton. Extension of the plan to other commodities is being made daily.

Thus it is estimated by officials that nearly $1,000,000,000 in federal agricultural credit will be advanced during the next year. Direct benefit payments to farmers of another $1,000,000,000 have been started by the agricultural adjustment administration in its program of production control for 1934 and 1935.

The latter amount is to be raised from processing taxes on basic agricultural commodities to be paid by city dwellers in the form of higher prices for foods.

Intermediate Credit Bank Loans.

Federal intermediate credit banks have made the heaviest disbursements since July, 1929, with a total of $968,869,006 devoted to discounting agricultural paper on a six to twelve month basis. Established in 1923 for this exclusive purpose, the twelve intermediate credit banks had outstanding loans on Sept. 30 amounting to $127,235,365.

The next largest disbursements since July, 1929, were by the federal farm board in loans to coöperating marketing associations which totaled $485,370,600. Authorized by the agricultural marketing act, which established the farm board in 1929, these coöperative loans were for the purpose of financing the orderly marketing of farm products so as not to disturb prices. They were made available at interest rates ranging from ⅛ of 1 per cent to 3⅝ per cent, with the average rate estimated at about 1 per cent.

CINCINNATI HOG SELLERS REVOLT OVER LOW PRICES

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Prospective sellers of hogs marched out of the Cincinnati Union stockyards in a body today as buying interests refused to dicker further in efforts to compromise prices they held were too high.

Those offering hogs were represented as feeling that the Cincinnati market in the last few days has been below quotations in other cities. They attempted to bring prices here into line with markets elsewhere.

Good to choice, 170-250 pound hogs, were offered at $4.60, or 10 cents higher than Thursday, and about steady with yesterday, when practically none were sold and were carried over to today. Buying interests, however, offered from $4.35 to $4.40 on that class. The salesmen walked out in a body in protest when their compromise offers of $4.50 were refused.

COMMODITY PRICES ARE STILL FAR BELOW OLD 'PARITY' FIGURES

Grain and commodity prices have still a long way to go before they reach "parity" with either the 1909-1914 or the 1926 price levels, although prevailing prices for cash grain and futures in Chicago suggest that a good start has been made in advancing prices to around the former level.

The price of corn appears to be relatively the lowest of any commodity at the present time. It would have to advance probably 30 cents from the prevailing level to equal the 1909-'14 average and around 40 cents to get back to the figures which prevailed during the 1926 crop season.

A comparison of the prices which prevailed in Chicago on Friday with those received by farmers during the 1909-'14 and 1926 periods follows. To the Chicago prices must be added freight and other charges to arrive at a correct comparison between the various periods:

WOOL MARKETS

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 28.—The increasing dullness of trade in the wool market during October has broken only by a slightly more cheerful tone than has recently become apparent. Sales figuring the last week have been mostly very small and were confined to largely territory wools. Prices realized on the few transactions closed were fully firm compared with the previous week's quotations. Buyers, however, have again begun to take more interest in domestic wools being offered. This has improved the undertone of the market and was stimulated by strengthening price tendency reported in primary foreign markets.

WHEAT BREAKS, RALLIES LATER ON U. S. BUYING

Early Drop of 3⅜ Cents Cut to Fraction.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Government buying was rushed to the rescue of the wheat market yesterday. An estimated 3,000,000 bushels of December and May wheat were taken in the last 15 minutes of the session in an apparent effort to bolster up prices after they had broken 2¾ to 3⅜ cents early.

The government buying was decidedly effective, as wheat rallied violently and closed only ⅛ to ⅝ cent lower for the day. The December delivery closed at 88¼ to 88½ cents after selling at 85⅝ cents on the early break, while the May option was 91⅝ to 91¾ cents. A leading local professional was also an aggressive buyer on the way up.

Other grains followed wheat. Corn and rye broke over 2 cents from Friday's finish at the extreme, but there was a strong rally from the inside figures.

Corn and Rye Weaken.

Corn closed 1¼ to 1⅜ cents lower, with December at 46⅞ to 47 cents after selling at 46 cents at the low. Oats were off ⅜ to ½ cent, with December closing at 36⅝ cents. Rye dropped to 59½ cents and closed there, with net losses of 2⅜ to 2¾ cents. Barley was ⅞ to 1⅛ cents lower, December being 49¼ cents.

Criticism against the grain and commodity exchanges on the part of Washington officials and intimations that legislation might be sought to curtail speculative operations both in commodities and stocks, started a selling movement. Liquidation was fairly general throughout the day.

Only one car of country run wheat was bought in the local market and offers of 40,000 bushels of grain from an elevator were rejected. On Friday the buying of carlots of wheat was one of the main factors in advancing futures around 3 cents from Thursday's finish.

Grain Traders Puzzled.

Action of the administration in attacking the grain and commodity exchanges because prices had failed to advance sensationally as the result of the establishment of a high price for United States gold and other factors designed to advance the markets, came as a bombshell to the trade and destroyed what little confidence remained. Even the heavy government buying of wheat toward the last was less effective than expected and brokers after the close said long wheat from speculators came out heavily on the rally.

Winnipeg wheat broke sharply and closed 1¼ to 1½ cents lower, with only 600,000 bushels of Canadian wheat reported sold for export. Liverpool was ¼ cent higher to ⅛ cent lower at the time the English market closed, despite some buying of distant futures by speculators. The upturn in Chicago last Friday was ignored abroad.

As a result of decline in corn the December future closed 3 cents per bushel under the figure at which the government offered to lend money to farmers in the 5 states which have warehouse laws, and No. 2 mixed corn in the spot market was quoted at 45½ cents at the close.

BEST HOGS FALL TO LOWEST MARK IN TWO MONTHS

New Processing Tax Weakens Market.

Top grades of hogs on the week-end session sank to the lowest price levels in two months and closed only 20 cents above the lowest spot in the market since May 6. Losses of 10 cents were general. The top sale at $4.45 was 15 cents under the high point of Friday and $1.10 under the high point of the year twenty days ago. The average came down 10 cents to the $4.30 line.

While the influence of the processing tax is generally regarded as bearish and is blamed for much of the loss of the last three weeks, a temporary situation developed during the week as a result of the tax that contributed to the activity in hogs in midweek, when a mild recovery occurred. Retailers were stocking up on fresh pork at the highest prices in several weeks to escape the first of the tax, which is to be levied on all pork in cold storage and in cure on Nov. 5.

Retailers Get 30 Day Advantage.

While packing houses must meet this obligation on their inventories as of that date retailers are allowed 30 days in which to clear out what they have on hand without a tax. Packing houses have indicated by their actions that they are anxious to avoid heavy cold storage holdings that will be subjected to the tax, and this has resulted in restricted buying of hogs.

The bulk of the decline from the high point of the year has been recorded since it became known that the processing tax on pork was to be as steep as the most pessimistic in the trade had feared it might be. Packing houses contend that it is not possible to move the pork under present conditions at higher average costs of live hogs than around $4.50, hence their bearish attitude.

Cattle Showing Is Poor.

Cattle made a poor showing again last week, on a price level 22 per cent under a year ago and 35 per cent lower than two years ago. Receipts were unusually heavy and quality about as good as it has ever been, the result, some farmers report, of the financing of cattle feeders by the government last fall.

Government grading indicated that 10,000 steers, or about a third of the week's beef steer run, consisted of "choice" kinds, and 40 per cent, or 13,000 head, were classed as "good." It was in these better kinds that the sharpest losses were found. Good to choice steers over 1,200 pounds were down 25 to 40 cents, while losses of 15 to 25 cents were noted in the 1,000 to 1,200 pound cattle and slight gains in a few choice 600 to 900 pound steers.

Lamb prices recovered some of the recent losses during the week. The general average for the week at $6.90 compares with $6.55 the preceding week, with $5.15 a year ago, and with $5.40 two years ago. Quotations still are $1.75 to $2 under the 1933 highs in August.

U. S. COTTON CROP IS 13,740,000 BALES, MURRAY REPORTS

Cotton production in the United States this year is 13,740,000 bales as estimated by N. C. Murray, the Clement, Curtis & Co. statistician, against 13,002,000 bales in 1932.

On Sept. 25 their forecast was 12,672,000 bales and on Oct. 1 the government returns were 12,885,000 bales. Average yield per acre 8 per cent higher than the estimate made a month ago.

Production in the leading states with the last three ciphers omitted:

Texas	4,500 bales
Oklahoma	1,355 bales
Mississippi	1,300 bales
Carolinas	1,495 bales
Georgia	1,200 bales
Arkansas	1,200 bales
Total United States	13,400 bales

PRICES OF LARD RECEDE, BUT TRADE IS ACTIVE

Business was fair in lard yesterday, but prices declined, due to the break in grains and hog prices. News from Washington on trading in futures brought moderate selling of lard futures which closed unchanged to 10 cents lower. Cash lard, however, was steady at 5.30 cents for regular and loose and 12½ cents higher on leaf at 5.37½ cents. Bellies were unchanged to 17½ cents higher on futures and firm on cash lots at 5.12½ cents. Prices:

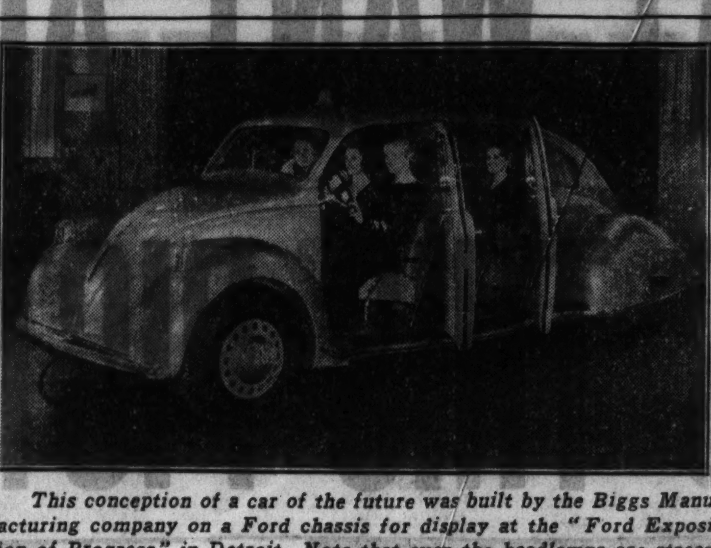
THE CAR OF THE FUTURE



This conception of a car of the future was built by the Biggs Manufacturing company on a Ford chassis for display at the "Ford Exposition of Progress" in Detroit. Note that even the headlamps are stream lined.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

TAXI LIGHTS.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—I fail to understand why taxis in Chicago are permitted to constantly violate the traffic rules, while other drivers are held more accountable for traffic infractions.

I have noted the Yellow and other cab line drivers operate their cars after night with but two small, dim lights located at either side of the windshield and without headlights turned on. This jeopardizes the lives of pedestrians at street intersections.

While the bright headlight is a menace to approaching vehicle traffic if not lowered to comply with the restricted beam, it otherwise serves a good purpose from a distance on fast moving vehicles. The dimmer when used gives ample protection to other vehicles, close-up moving in opposite direction.

BOB CARSON.

WHICH IS WORSE?

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 22.—I see by the papers that Judge Harry H. Porter is laying it on thick and heavy to all traffic law violators, but he sure pulled a "boner" the other day in his Evanston Municipal court. A man drove up from Chicago and ran through a red light at Howard and Ridge avenue [at midnight] and Judge Porter fined him $100. In the same court a woman was charged with passing a street car on the left side and Judge Porter fined her $1 and $6 costs. Now, which of the two was the greatest violator?

CHARLES STRACHAN.

PARKED TAXICABS.

Chicago, Oct. 23.—I wish to inquire by what right the Yellow Cab company monopolizes all of the parking space on the east side of Clinton street from the cab entrance of the Union depot, south as far as Harrison street, and even farther.

I have occasion to transfer street cars at Van Buren street and Clinton along with a great many other people and wish to state positively that these cabs are a menace to the safety to the people desiring to board the street car at that intersection. Also if some other motorist than a cab driver is fortunate enough to secure parking space somewhere in that stretch of street the cabs park alongside far to the middle, greatly interfering with the general traffic.

EDWARD J. MALEK.

TRAFFIC LIGHTS.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—I would like to offer a suggestion to the authorities responsible for the regulation of traffic by means of stoplights.

It appears that when the lights change for traffic to stop in one direction and to go in another they do so simultaneously; therefore, there is not sufficient time allowed for the traffic with the right of way to clear before the cross-section traffic starts.

While in some instances there are orange colored lights which are supposed to serve such a purpose, as a rule, they are ignored by the traffic which is waiting to proceed.

It seems to me that the aforesaid condition could be remedied by changing the lights for traffic with right of way from green to red a few seconds before the cross-section lights are changed from red to green, thus allowing traffic partially across street to clear before cross-section traffic proceeds.

JOSEPH T. CLARK.

WOULD WIDEN LINCOLN AVENUE.

Highwood, Ill., Oct. 24.—While the efforts made to relieve northbound traffic through Sheridan road via Michigan avenue are accomplishing some results, the fact remains that the above route is the only present route practical for the motorist living in the northern suburbs.

Urging the use of La Salle street accomplishes but little relief under present conditions. However, the one other improved outlet from the business district, La Salle street, continued into widened Lincoln avenue to Niles Center, would intersect all main improved thoroughfares running north and northwest [except Sheridan road], such as Ashland avenue, Western avenue, McCormick boulevard, Crawford avenue, and Skokie highway.

And, turning west on Dempster street, at Skokie highway, would intersect Waukegan road, Milwaukee avenue, Rand road, and Northwest highway.

It would, also, cross all roads running west from Diversey boulevard on. It would shorten the run from the city to the north and northwest by fifteen to twenty minutes. The cost should be less than widening costs farther to the east, as Lincoln avenue values should be much lower, and it would tend to open up a very considerable territory, quite inaccessible at the present time.

NEWS AND VIEWS

More than 12,000 automobile tradesmen from all parts of the country will attend the Automotive Service Industries show to be held in the Merchandise Mart this week. This estimate of attendance is based on the fact that more than 9,000 attended last year's show in Detroit.

There will be 243 exhibits of various devices, parts, accessories, equipment, and supplies for maintaining the country's 25 million motor vehicles.

This is not a public exhibition, but is intended for the automobile trade. No admission is charged, but admittance is to certified concerns in the automotive business.

In connection with this event today has been designated as Automotive Trade day at the Century of Progress exposition.

The country-wide advance demand for new Nash 1934 models, which has flooded factory headquarters with the heaviest pre-announcement orders in years, reached a climax last week when a group of Nash dealers from Utah, Idaho, Nevada, and Wyoming arrived in Kenosha, Wis., in a giant overland sleeper coach to drive home their first new cars.

Twenty-eight people, headed by M. R. Ballard, Nash distributor in the Salt Lake territory, made up this dealer party. They spent two days on the 1,600 mile drive from the Rockies to make sure they would have some of the new Nash models in time for the coming public announcement and new car presentation.

Harry J. Klinger, new general manager for Pontiac, has announced the appointment of A. W. L. Gilpin, former Chevrolet regional manager at St. Louis, as general sales manager for Pontiac. Other appointments, which complete the executive personnel, were announced by Mr. Gilpin. They include two assistant general sales managers, R. K. White, already associated with Pontiac, and C. P. Simpson, former Chevrolet zone manager at Houston, Tex.; R. H. White, retained as advertising manager, and W. R. Huber sales promotion manager.

Appointment of Marvin E. Coyle as general manager of all Chevrolet Motor company operations brings into the limelight a man who for the last decade has played an increasingly important part in shaping the destiny of the largest manufacturing division of General Motors.

Mr. Coyle assumed full control of Chevrolet on Oct. 16, following the advancement of W. S. Knudsen, former general manager of Chevrolet, to a post as executive vice president of General Motors with headquarters in Detroit.

The advancement of Mr. Coyle came just one week after his 46th birthday. He has worked quietly behind the scenes with Mr. Knudsen in shaping policies and determining administrative procedure of Chevrolet practically since the two men were first associated together in the company in 1922.

Mr. Coyle has spent nearly half his lifetime in the continuous employment of General Motors. He entered the organization in the fall of 1911 in a clerical capacity, and has served with the central office or with its divisions without interruption since that date.

With more than 10,000 hard miles in five weeks showing on the speedometers, the two Terraplanes that made a clean sweep of all western hill climbs in the A. A. A. record book rolled into Detroit recently and the drivers, Al Miller and Paul Bost, turned them over to the Hudson Motor Car company's engineers for disassembly and complete inspection. Looking upon these cars in the light of experimental jobs, the engineers will use them to gauge the improvements and advancements that they have made in Terraplanes.

THESE ARE DAYS TO LOOK TO CAR AND TO DRIVING

BY HAL FOUST.

At this time of the year, drivers as well as automobiles need a check up on operating conditions.

Autumn and early winter present hazards peculiar to the season. The evening rush hour occurs after nightfall. With frequent fogs and drizzling rains, visibility is often obscure even at high noon.

The paucity of light is a major hazard of the season. The National Safety council last week issued a bulletin pointing out that Chicago is experiencing a seasonal increase in traffic accidents from this cause. The council advised motorists to burn their parking lamps while driving in uncertain daylight.

Make Auto Visible.

These parking lamps on an automobile are of no assistance to their owner in seeing the pavement. But they aid in the car being seen by others, just as ships carry lights at night to aid in their being seen rather than to illuminate the course ahead.

A moving light, such as a parking lamp, will attract attention, the attention of other drivers. Some of these lamps serve better in this respect than headlights which cannot be seen on a car approaching an intersection ahead from an acute angle.

The protection to pedestrians from these parking lamps is also of no small consequence. The approaching automobile is also made more conspicuous to them. This is true in heavy rains as well as in fogs or at dusk.

Pedestrians likewise should take heed of the hazards of uncertain daylight. An automobile is much more visible than a man or woman, especially one dressed in dark clothes. Some pedestrians in crossing a street rely too much upon their being seen by drivers.

Fallen Leaves a Hazard.

The National Safety council emphasized that the parking lights should not be used as a substitute for the head lamps when head lamps are required. The ordinance requires that head lamps should be turned on one hour after sundown. No motorist carries an astronomical report on the minute of sunset. A common practice, however, is to burn head lamps after their illumination can be seen on the pavement ahead.

The fallen leaves are another seasonal hazard. They frequently cover a wet pavement and are as slippery as loose snow. They are sometimes found on curves of rural roads and are frequently encountered on tree bordered residential streets.

So much for the drivers—now for the automobiles. This is the time of year when any night might bring a freeze. Every year there is a heavy property damage from frozen radiators.

Two Types of Anti-Freeze.

There are two general types of anti-freeze on the market. One type consists of a denatured alcohol; the other, generally with a glycerine base, consists of a number of patented and nationally advertised fluids. The alcohol is cheaper but its volatility requires frequent tests and additions.

It is well to have the water system flushed and tightened, probably with some rubber hose replacements, before using the more expensive types of anti-freeze. Some of them will leak through holes that will not admit water, or through holes temporarily clogged with rust or dirt.

While taking care of the radiator for winter driving, automobile engineers recommend a general inspection and adjustment before cold weather. These adjustments include a richer mixture for the carburetor, a more rapid charging rate for the generator, a cleaning or replacement of spark plugs and distributor points, and possibly a check on the timing.

Illinois 1934 Auto Licenses Yellow, Black

Illinois 1934 license plates are to be yellow on black, the color combination, incidentally, that has been adopted for its legibility as the standard for highway directional signs.

Thirty-four states this year will change the color combinations for the new year's license plates. Twenty-six motifs will be used, according to a survey by the American Automobile association.

Fourteen states and the District of Columbia are retaining their present colors but reversing their use. In the District of Columbia, for example, the 1934 plates will be black on yellow; the 1933 combination was yellow on black.

The 1934 automobile license colors for the states other than Illinois are as follows:

State—	Color Scheme—
Alabama	Black on orange
Arizona	Black on copper
Arkansas	Red on white
California	Black on orange
Colorado	Yellow on black
Connecticut	White on blue
Delaware	Old gold on colonial blue
Florida	White on black
Georgia	Orange on blue
Idaho	Black on yellow
Indiana	White on midnight blue
Iowa	Yellow on dark blue
Kansas	Black on white
Kentucky	Black on white
Louisiana	White on blue
Maine	Black on orange
Maryland	Orange on black
Massachusetts	White on dark red
Michigan	Black on canary yellow
Minnesota	White on black
Mississippi	White on black
Missouri	White on black
Montana	Orange on black
Nebraska	White on green
Nevada	Green on white
New Hampshire	White on green
New Jersey	Green on black
New Mexico	Gold on red
New York	Yellow on black
North Carolina	Gold on black
North Dakota	Dark blue on deep orange
Ohio	White on maroon
Oklahoma	Black on yellow
Oregon	Black on gray
Pennsylvania	Blue on gold
Rhode Island	White on black
South Carolina	Yellow on black
South Dakota	Orange on black
Tennessee	White on royal blue
Texas	Black on orange
Utah	Black on aluminum
Vermont	Blue on white
Virginia	White on black
Washington	Green on white
West Virginia	Black on yellow
Wisconsin	Black on pale blue
Wyoming	White on wine

The purpose of the annual change in colors is to make the preceding year's plates conspicuous in traffic.

WHAT WANT AD CLASSIFICATION DOES THIS PICTURE REPRESENT?

THE HUNT STARTS HERE!

Look at this picture. It represents one of the main classifications or headings in today's Chicago Tribune Want Ad Section. To find the first hidden treasure hunt want ad, look through the want ads under the heading you think the artist had in mind when he drew this picture. The first ad will have a clue to help you find the second one, and so on. Start now!

"I DEFY YOU TO TRAIL ME THROUGH TODAY'S WANT ADS!"

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE WILL PAY $100.00 IN CASH PRIZES FOR THE BEST SOLUTIONS TO TODAY'S

"HIDDEN WANT ADS"

THE FASCINATING TREASURE HUNT GAME!

● Can you follow a trail? Do you like treasure hunts and other games that make you use your wits? Then get busy right now! Here's your chance—today Want Ad Wanda presents another of her fascinating hidden want ad treasure hunts! Today there are all new clues and a lot of tricky ones—so beware!

You'll find it loads of fun. All you have to do is find between ten and fifteen hidden treasure hunt want ads in today's Tribune Want Ad Section. No hard work to do—no letters to write. You buy nothing—just send in an entry.

Join in this fascinating chase! Read the simple rules and start now!

THE RULES:

WHAT TO DO: Between ten and fifteen "treasure hunt" want ads are printed in today's Chicago Tribune Want Ad Section. A "treasure hunt" want ad looks just like a regular want ad, only the wording is different. The picture above will help you find the first treasure hunt want ad. The first one will have a clue to help you find the second one, and so on. All together there are not less than ten and not more than fifteen hidden treasure hunt want ads. It is up to you to decide when you have found them all.

JUDGING: Entries will be judged by a committee appointed by the Chicago Tribune and their decisions will be final. Accuracy will be the chief consideration; neatness will be next. In case of ties duplicate prizes will be awarded tying contestants.

WHERE TO SEND ENTRIES: Entries should be mailed to "HIDDEN WANT ADS No. B," The Chicago Tribune, Post Office box 1718, Chicago, Illinois. All entries in today's game must be received in the Tribune office before 6:00 p. m. on Thursday, November 2, 1933. No entries will be returned.

WHO CAN ENTER: This offer is open to all—men and women, boys and girls, except employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families. It is not necessary to buy the Chicago Tribune to compete. You may copy the hidden want ads and submit them on a separate sheet of paper. The Tribune may be examined at the Tribune offices or at public libraries, free of charge.

PRIZES:

To the persons who submit, in accordance with these rules, the most nearly complete sets of hidden treasure hunt want ads arranged in the most nearly correct order, the Chicago Tribune will pay $100.00 in cash prizes:

First prize	$25.00
Second prize	15.00
Third prize	10.00
Next five prizes, ea.	5.00
Next twenty-five prizes, each	1.00

Elaborate entries will receive no more consideration than simple ones. Just make your entry simple and neat.

W-G-N LAUNCHES GREATEST SEASON

HUMBOLDT BANK PLANS FIVE PCT. YULE DIVIDEND

50 Cents on Dollar in Prospect.

BY WILLIAM IRVIN.

Additional dividends of 30 per cent, which will bring the total payments to 50 cents on the dollar, are in prospect for the depositors of the closed Humboldt State bank. This was revealed last week in an analysis of the assets of the institution which closed on May 14, 1931, with a deposit liability of $2,406,611.80. Two dividends of 10 per cent each have already been paid, and it is more than likely that a five per cent payment will be available for depositors by Christmas.

The payment of a dividend of this amount virtually was assured, contingent on authorization by the state auditor, as a result of the compromise recently effected between the bank receivership, and the receiver and trustee of the defunct Humboldt Bond and Mortgage company, an affiliate of the bank.

Sued for $356,000.

Following the bank's closing, the receiver and the trustee of the mortgage company filed suits against the bank totaling $356,000. The mortgage company receiver asked $246,000, and the trustee $110,000, for damages for the type of securities sold the mortgage company by the bank. The latter were defaulted first first mortgages used as security for $378,000 of collateral lien notes held by the public, with the bank as trustee. The bank itself held $40,000 of the notes.

A result of the compromise, which involves an outright cash settlement by the bank to the receiver and the trustee of the mortgage company, will be the release of $118,000 of the cream of the bank's securities, and $72,000 cash, held in trust by the state auditor as collateral for the lien notes, it was explained. Much of this will be available for dividends. The compromise has been approved by the state auditor, and if legal details can be cleared away without too much delay, the hoped for Christmas dividend should materialize.

$100,000 Needed for 5%.

A fund of approximately $100,000 is needed for a five per cent payment. There is cash on hand of $216,452, of which only $34,128.04 is applicable to a future dividend. Of the remaining $182,324.05, a total of $179,000 is reserved for a county tax claim. The claim, filed by the county treasurer for the recovery of county tax funds on deposit, has been upheld in a recent decision by the Illinois Supreme court.

Newly acquired liabilities total $45,288.91. Preferred claims amounting to $19,048.85 have been paid, and offsets of $312,773.40 allowed. Dividends of $375,303.86 have been paid, making a total of $1,744,774,60 due creditors. The bank has listed assets of $2,439,944.89. The loss on the conversion of the bank's assets to the amount of $863,911.04, has been relatively small, totaling only $43,972.89. Most of this shrinkage was in real estate. Expenses of liquidation have been $119,994.51, while income has been only $83,647.20, resulting in a deficit of $36,647.20.

There are no bills payable remaining, the $133,111.73 due the First National bank at the time of closing having been repaid.

Of the $305,665.18 under stock and bonds, $200,000 is represented by the cash and securities held in trust by the state auditor at Springfield as security for the collateral lien note issue. The stocks and bonds which represented $118,000 of that total are considered gilt edged, on which a 100 per cent return is expected. All of them are selling at par. The remaining $105,665 under the stocks and bonds classification is in defaulted foreign bonds, which may yield up to 20 per cent, it was said.

Loans and Discounts Best.

The best showing to date in the liquidation of the bank's three principal classes of assets has been made in loans and discounts, which are on the books for $384,772.62, having been reduced from $879,529. Of the former figure, $292,198.91 is listed as industrial loans, and the remaining $92,573.69 as ordinary over-the-counter notes and discounts. The industrial loans were negotiated through the bank's industrial loan department, which dealt in second, third, and sometimes fourth mortgages, actually junior liens, on homes of working people in the district. The Humboldt State is said to be the only bank known to have carried on this type of business in connection with its regular loan and discount transactions.

Ultimate recovery on the $292,198 in the industrial loans outstanding, secured by junior liens, may reach 25 per cent, according to estimates. Whether it will be more or less, depends on improved business conditions and resulting employment for the small property owners upon whose homes the loans were made. At the time of the bank's closing the industrial loan figure stood at $400,000.

Expect to Realize 25%.

The success with which the receiver has met in reducing the ordinary notes and discounts from $479,529 to $92,573 gives rise to the hope that approximately 25 per cent may be realized on those remaining, bringing the total liquidation on the counter loans to about 90 per cent.

The Humboldt State bank was heavily involved in real estate, as is evi-

Evangelical Woman's Guild Meets to Plan for Big Variety Show

Civic Leaders of Des Plaines to Act in Elks' Minstrel

Many of Des Plaines' best known citizens will go "blackface" Wednesday and Thursday evenings, when Des Plaines Elks lodge, No. 1526, presents its minstrel show, "Minstrel Chuckles," at the Masonic temple. On Friday evening the show will be presented at the Arlington Heights Community High school. The lodge embraces nearly all of the northwest suburbs, including Park Ridge, Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove, Wheeling, Franklin Park, Schiller Park, Niles, Morton Grove, and Niles Center.

FRED A. FULLE.

E. H. Rittmueller is chairman of the entertainment committee, in charge of plans for the production, assisted by Fred A. Fulle, Clarence Wille, Robert Sindelar, Edwin Murphy, Vincent Sladek, Art Imig, John Mikas, and Gus Kolze.

Hodgens Interlocutor.

Cliff Hodgens is the interlocutor, while "Gimp" McDonald, Arthur Imig, Frank Gable, Walter Morava, Ralph Hauser, and George Burman are end men. In the circle will be J. K. Barlow, Chick Hodimair, Bud Flentge, Jimmy Johnston Jr., Dr. E. Sargent, Johnny Alonge, Frank Carroll, O. R. Mead, S. George Nickel, M. E. Bjorkman, Bill Geddis, Wilbur Mead, Edwin J. 50 Norwegian Groups Name Roald Amundsen Park Today

Fifty Norwegian groups will join in the dedication this afternoon of park site No. 9 at 6100 Bloomingdale avenue, in the northwest park district, as "Roald Amudsen park," in honor of the noted Norwegian explorer.

FRANK KALTEUX.

The dedication program in the west end of the park, will be preceded by a parade which will form at 2:30 o'clock at the United Lutheran church in Oak Park. The procession will move north on Ridgeland avenue to North avenue, east on North to Moody avenue, and north on Moody to the park. Among the units participating will be the northwest park district drum and bugle corps, the Salvation Army band, and the drum and bugle corps of the Gen. George Bell, and Melin Romer posts of the American Legion.

Kalteux to Speak.

The dedicatory address will be given by Frank M. Kalteux, northwest park district commissioner, to which Christian Olsen, president of the Norwegian National league, will respond. Other speakers will be Col. T. A. Siqueland of the Chicago Geographical society, Olaf Berents, Norwegian consul, and Adj. Fritz Nelsen of the Salvation Army, who was a personal friend of Amundsen.

The program will include selections by the United Norwegian Singers' Male chorus, under the direction of Knute Hansen, the Norwegian Women singers, and the Salvation Army band. The program will close with the singing of the Norwegian national anthem.

Bought in 1929.

The park site, which contains 17 acres, was acquired by the park district in 1929. It has four large baseball diamonds, football and soccer fields, a playground, four tennis courts, a horseshoe court and a wading pool. A fieldhouse probably will be added later.

The schedule of gymnasium classes which will open in six parks of the district on Wednesday, was announced last week by Miss Helen Andersen, executive secretary.

PLAN CARNIVAL 2 NIGHTS AT HOME FOR YOUNGSTERS

Plenty of fun is planned for the annual community Halloween and fall carnival Monday and Tuesday nights at the Uhlich Children's home, 3730 North California avenue.

Climax to the festival will be a costume parade for children and adults Tuesday night. The parade will be headed by the Uhlich Boys' band and there will be prizes for the best costumes.

The home originally was organized as the German Orphan home to care for dependent and orphan children of soldiers of German descent who fought in the civil war, but has cared for more than 2,000 children, irrespective of nationality.

The committee on arrangements for the carnival includes Le Roy Busch, chairman; Mrs. Le Roy Busch, refreshments; Henry Hagerstadt and Paul Gaus, games and entertainment, and Carl Mader, music.

Henry W. King, superintendent of the home, has plans for a greater community center through organization in the near future of a community forum.

STATION OPENS AS INDEPENDENT ON WEDNESDAY

Host of New Talent to Be Presented.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The biggest season in the history of W-G-N starts next Wednesday when it goes independent. An impressive array of exclusive talent has been assembled for presentation over THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station beginning this midweek when it becomes the outstanding station of the country relying solely on its own facilities.

QUIN A. RYAN.

Free from the restrictions of extensive chain programming for the first time in two years, W-G-N is eager to embark on this course which seems destined greatly to enhance its prestige everywhere.

With network programs available to listeners at practically every point on the radio dial there is an insistent demand by a host of listeners for radio fare that is new, individual, different. Listeners demand variety, but they insist on discrimination in the variety. They seek programs with originality and with distinction.

W-G-N has ambitious plans to fill this bill. And a glimpse behind W-G-N microphones, a preview of the entertainment that is in store for this greater fall and winter season, gives conclusive evidence that W-G-N will do it.

Free for Expansion.

When W-G-N severs its network affiliation on Wednesday it will be free for the first time in two years to expand and develop its resources to the fullest. During W-G-N's final year of association with the National Broadcasting company it carried only about seven evening hours a week in network programs. Following acquisition of WENR and WMAQ by NBC, W-G-N two years ago began an association with the Columbia Broadcasting system, which brought its network program representation to more than sixteen evening hours a week.

This extensive network affiliation had its drawbacks. W-G-N had little opportunity for the presentation of many of the features that had built up the prestige of the station.

Previously contracted time in the best hours of the evening forbade W-G-N's picking up of many important features and events.

Feeds Programs Two Chains.

As a pioneer link in the National Broadcasting chain nearly a decade ago W-G-N evolved many ideas and programs that were snapped up by NBC and later CBS. W-G-N, while seeking to adapt the comic strip for the air, developed the radio serial sketch of "Sam 'n' Henry," which became "Amos 'n' Andy." Later the comic strip was shaped for radio. And THE TRIBUNE'S "Little Orphan Annie" has become a big NBC favorite. W-G-N developed Clara, Lu, 'n' Em and gave them to NBC. Then came East & Dumke, the "Sisters of the Skillet," and "The Singing Lady." During the Columbia affiliation W-G-N sent "Easy Aces." "The Devil Bird," "Painted Dreams," and "Just Plain Bill" to that network.

Moreover W-G-N will continue to originate programs for the major networks. Another sketch, "Helen Trent," developed to great popularity on W-G-N, goes on Columbia tomorrow.

Gala Opening Wednesday.

Wednesday night W-G-N will present a gala program featuring some of the notables who have played a considerable part in making radio history for the station. Along with such figures and organizations as the veteran Quin Ryan, now station manager; the great W-G-N Concert orchestra, probably the finest studio orchestra on the air; Wayne King, the "Waltz King"; Troubadour Lawrence Salerno; Ralph Ginsbergh and his fine Palmer house ensemble; Tom, Dick, and Harry will appear a host of new features, all exclusively W-G-N's.

Among these will be the Doring sisters, a trio of legato singers who are certain to prove a sensation; Platt and Nierman, a double piano team that is bound to carve a deep niche in radio annals; Willard and Penn, harmony singers; Berenice Taylor, who sings show tunes and ballads.

The great Paulist choir, one of the finest musical organizations in the country, under the direction of Father Eugene O'Malley, will give exclusive concerts from W-G-N every Sunday evening.

Cream of Talent Hunt.

The W-G-N Concert orchestra will be further augmented for presentation of full length midevening concerts on Sundays.

The new features being added represent the cream of nation-wide quest of talent that has been in progress throughout the past summer and fall. Other distinguished programs will be added from week to week.

New religious and educational features are to be introduced. Chief among these will be a series of lectures by outstanding figures from the University of Chicago, Northwestern university, and Loyola university. Services and music of the University of Chicago chapel will also be carried by THE TRIBUNE station.

It is significant that practically all

PLAN TO CARRY CEMETERY FIGHT TO CITY COUNCIL

Brynford Parkers Meet to Map Battle.

Plans for carrying to the city council the fight of the Brynford Park Improvement association against the proposed extension of the Montrose cemetery, were discussed at a meeting of the association Thursday evening.

This was announced by Henry Bengston, one of the leaders in the association's fight against the action contemplated by the cemetery which, it is said, would bring it to within a foot of the nearest homes, thus hemming in the community by burial grounds on three sides, and destroying its desirability as a residential section.

Censure Alderman.

Mr. Bengston presided at a recent protest meeting of property owners called by the association, at which Ald. James J. Hurley [39th] was severely censured for introducing the resolution passed by the council before its adjournment for the summer authorizing the extension. Ald. Hurley, it is charged, acted without consulting any of his Brynford Park constituents, whose views on the matter were considered no secret.

Failure of the alderman to attend the protest meeting, to which he had been invited to explain his action, served further to incense the property owners, who are said to have construed the absence as an affront to residents of the community.

The failure of repeated efforts since then by the committee handling the matter to reach Ald. Hurley for a hearing has not aided in assuaging the feelings of the home owners, it was said.

May Switch Advocates.

Mr. Bengston declared it is possible that an effort will be made to have a resolution introduced in the council at its next meeting by another alderman rescinding the previous action.

The property which would be included in the extension is L shaped and most of it is located north of Bryn Mawr and west of Kedvale avenue. A narrow section north of Hollywood avenue, however, runs east to Crawford avenue. The homes which would be surrendered on three side by burial ground, should the cemetery's land be used for that purpose, are located in a small section lying north of Bryn Mawr and west of Crawford.

All of the property in question, with the exception of a 34 foot strip north of Hollywood avenue, and running west from Crawford avenue, was authorized for use as burial ground several years ago. The addition of this strip for that purpose was provided for in Ald. Hurley's resolution, bringing the property thus available for use by the cemetery to within a foot of the homes situated where Kedvale, Karlov, and Keystone avenues end at the cemetery property.

Error Brings It Up.

Through an error in surveying, the scrip had not been regarded by the cemetery company as part of its property until it received a tax bill for it. The Hurley resolution making it tax exempt resulted.

The immediate objective of the property owners is to have rescinded the city council order authorizing use of this 34 foot strip as burial ground. If they are successful in this an effort is to be made to have all of the cemetery's property north of Bryn Mawr and west of Crawford rezoned for residential purposes.

Failing in both these objectives, however, home owners of this section face the ultimate prospect of being hemmed in on three sides by cemeteries, and on the fourth by the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium, it was pointed out. This, it was declared, woudl destroy the community's desirability as a residential section, and greatly impair property values.

Offered Aid in Fight.

"We realize we are fighting with our backs to the wall, but we are not going to see our homes ruined without resisting to the last ditch," Mr. Bengston declared. "It may be asked why we bought property so close to cemeteries. The answer is that we bought at a time when people were glad to get a home almost any place to escape the high rents. Moreover, we were given to understand by the subdivider that the vacant land west and north of us, although owned by the cemetery company, was to be subdivided for residential purposes."

Mr. Bengston revealed that the association had been offered the aid of the North Town Improvement association in its fight against the extension. The North Town association has waged a similar fight against extension of Rosehill cemetery on the north.

"School Ground Beautiful" Program Begun

The Franklin Park school was among the first to carry out its part in a county-wide plan when pupils planted 300 shrubs on the school grounds last Wednesday. FRANKLIN PARK SCHOOL PLANTS 300 NEW SHRUBS

Follows Aken's "Beautify Grounds" Plan.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Acting on the "Beautify Your School Grounds" slogan of Otto F. Aken, superintendent of the Cook county schools, Franklin Park planted more than 300 shrubs last Wednesday. Planting of the ornamental shrubs at the front and on either side of the modern brick structure constituted the initial activity in a county-wide school ground improvement program.

Present at the ceremonies were Supt. Aken, who foresees in the project values that will be far reaching in community benefit as well as redemption of many unsightly school yards; J. H. Prost, school landscape architect, who supervised the planting; R. E. Damron, principal of the Franklin Park school, who was first to take advantage of the program; C. M. Callahan, assistant county superintendent of division four; and members of the Franklin Park P.-T. A., which organization supplied the funds for purchase of the shrubs.

Members at Ceremony.

Members of the P.-T. A. included Mrs. W. A. Radabaugh, vice president, and the ways and means committee—Mrs. J. F. Stites, chairman; Mrs. Herby Worthey, Mrs. Robert Hedlund, Mrs. John Debus, and Mrs. John Shennen.

Boys from the Achievement club of the school handled the spades and placed the shrubs under the direction of Mr. Prost and Principal Damron. Supt. Aken complimented the group on their ability in doing much in a short space of time and expressed his satisfaction in witnessing the realization of what has long been his dream. Other schools of the county are already engaged in similar programs and it is hoped that eventually every school ground will present as parklike an appearance as that of a country estate.

Cook county has taken the lead in the movement which has the backing of the garden committee of the State Federation of Woman's Clubs and of President Emmett Whealan of the Cook county commissioners.

Create 10 Nurseries.

Recently the county commissioners passed a resolution for the creation of ten nurseries, each of five or six acres, scattered at convenient points in the forest preserves for the purpose of providing, free of charge, trees and shrubs to the school districts.

Supt. Aken has offered a prize for the school in each township which will make the best improvement of its grounds between last Sept. 1 and June 30 of next year.

Instances were cited by Supt. Aken and Mr. Prost wherein a double hedge about school grounds had not only been more economical for fencing purposes, but had enhanced the beauty of the surroundings and of remedied eyesores that had resulted in improved morale.

HUMBOLDT BANK PLANS TO PAY 5% YULE DIVIDEND

denced by the fact that almost 50 per cent of its listed assets, $1,129,807.65, is in real estate loans. Of this amount, $500,000 is in real estate bonds, which actually were split mortgages, a part of them being held by the public, and part by the bank. The 50 properties represented by these issues are in foreclosure. The ultimate yield on the real estate bonds, therefore, is anybody's guess, it being entirely dependent upon how soon and how completely real estate recovers.

Another $500,000 is in individual mortgages, while an additional $96,300 represents the listed value of the 18 porperties to which the bank has acquired title. The return on the total of real estate loans has been estimated at a possible 50 per cent, but any such estimate is bound to be a highly variable one.

The "banking house" is down for $245,000, but that includes not only the bank building itself and its site, but an adjacent 50 feet, and the two three-story buildings located on it. A possible $100,000 may be realized on the real estate itself, but the return from the bank building and the adjacent property is decidedly uncertain. Furniture and fixtures at $15,606.59 may be charged off as of little value.

Other real estate, listed at $125,000, represents the former banking quarters of the Keystone Trust and Savings bank, which was merged with the Humboldt State bank in December, 1927.

[The analysis of the Second Humboldt State bank, affiliated with the bank outlined above, will be published in next week's Metropolitan section.]

CELEBRATE GOLDEN DAY

MR. AND MRS. JOHN H. OVERBECK SR.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Overbeck Sr. of 2845 Logan boulevard observed their golden wedding anniversary recently at a reception given in their honor at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Mr. Overbeck was born in Kentucky, and Mrs. Overbeck in Chicago. They have lived on the northwest side for the last 50 years.

Mr. Overbeck, until his retirement a few years ago, was engaged in the decorating business. Mrs. Overbeck's father operated a grocery, feed, and tavern business in Wells street near Ohio. At the time of the great fire in 1871, she was 10 years old. Her family was left destitute, the only personal property saved being a piano, which was covered by feather beds to prevent its being scorched. The family was among the last to make its escape over the old Chicago avenue bridge.

The couple have four sons, John, George, Charles and Edward, all of whom live in Chicago, and a daughter, Mrs. Gladys Fischer of Elmhurst. There are seven grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Overbeck are planning to spend the winter in Florida.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES GUY.

Mr. and Mrs. James Guy, 1008 North Le Claire avenue, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Wednesday with a party held at the Lake Shore Athletic club, which featured a second wedding ceremony.

The wedding march was played by the couple's granddaughter, Elaine Fifield, nine years old of St. Louis, Mo.

A large number of relatives and friends attended the party.

Mr. Guy was born in Benwick, England and came to Chicago in 1883. He has been an employé of the Chicago Surface lines for 48 years and Friday observed his 73d birthday. Mrs. Guy was born in Walsoken, England and came here with Mr. Guy. They have five children and four grandchildren.

MR. AND MRS. WALFRED BJURSTROM.

A reception for relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Walfred Bjurstrom, 1531 North Lockwood, marked the 50th wedding anniversary of the couple recently in the home of their daughter and son-in-law, the Rev. and Mrs. F. E. Bernard. A second reception Tuesday evening in the couple's home marked the 70th birthday of Mr. Bjurstrom.

Mr. and Mrs. Bjurstrom have been residents of the west and northwest sides for the last 45 years, having come to this country from Sweden. Mr. Bjurstrom had been employed by the International Harvester company 39 years. He retired two years ago. Mrs. Bjurstrom is 74 years old.

41st Ward Democratic Women to Give Party

Plans for the annual harvest party to be held by the women's organization of the 41st Ward Regular Democratic organization on Nov. 17 were made at a recent meeting at the organization headquarters, 5306 Lawrence avenue, where the affair will be held. Mrs. Theresa Murphy, ward committeewoman, is in charge of arrangements, assisted by the members of the women's organization. Proceeds will be used for Christmas baskets.

BIG OUTLYING STORES ORGANIZE TRADE COUNCIL

Pool Resources to Better Business.

Leading outlying firms in all sections of the city are banding together to form the Chicago Department Stores council for the promotion of their interests and the interests of those related to their business by commonties.

Those pioneering in the new group hope and expect that every department store outside the loop doing business of more than $100,000 a year in the Chicago metropolitan area will be included in the membership soon. Owners and representatives of 22 stores attended the recent organization meeting at which officers were chosen and by-laws adopted.

Joseph K. Eichenbaum was elected president of the council. The vice president is Harry M. Englewstein, who presided at the organization session. F. W. Meier is treasurer and S. R. Garber is secretary.

Program Is Launched.

The program of activities launched through committees includes a study of all legislation affecting department stores and of methods to improve business. Improved relations between employers and employés is a third important division of the council's initial program.

A special committee also will study all advertising and assist in improving advertising matter used by members.

Bert Ludwig, with offices at 1416 Merchandise Mart, was chosen executive secretary. Fred Bernstein of Bernstein, Zolla & Bernstein was named counsel.

The stated objectives of the council: "To foster the interests of its members and those in any way related to the business by common business interests.

"To establish and maintain uniformity and equity in the customs and usages of the business.

"To acquire, preserve, and disseminate valuable business information.

"To secure the adoption of the best possible business methods.

"To promote and maintain friendly coöperation among its members.

"To do anything necessary, suitable, and proper for the accomplishment of any purposes which may be recognized as proper and lawful objectives of such associations, all of which shall be consistent with the public interest as well as the interest of the business and its members."

The Stores Represented.

DR. BRIDGES TO GIVE THIRD IN LECTURE SERIES

Literary Foundation Talk to Be Nov. 7.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

Literature's highway from Plato to Priestley will be traveled by Dr. Horace J. Bridges the evening of Nov. 7 when he delivers the third of the winter series of popular evening lectures sponsored by the Chicago Foundation for Literature. Dr. Bridges will speak at 8 o'clock in the lecture hall on the twelfth floor of the Real Estate Board building at 32 West Randolph street.

In introducing the well known lecturer Mrs. Carl I. Henrikson, founder president of the foundation, will announce his subject as "Literature's Place in Culture." Dr. Bridges will draw upon various periods of history to illustrate his topic. He will quote the Aristotelian categories and the tragedies of Shakespeare, then the writings of Charles Lamb and Julius Krutch.

Proceeds for Awards.

In giving this message to the public next week, through the sponsorship of the foundation, Dr. Bridges will be promoting the place of literature in modern day culture. All of the proceeds from the talk as well as the others in the fall and winter series are to go toward the foundation's trust fund which enables it to give its awards for meritorious work of American writers in the various fields of literature.

Eleven more lectures will be heard the first and third Tuesday evenings of each month between now and April. Dr. Louis L. Mann is to speak and so are the fascinating Mary Hastings Bradley, African explorer, and Carl Sandburg, the poet.

Then on April 23, the birthday of William Shakespeare, the awards will be made.

It was in 1929 that the foundation was organized and incorporated under the sponsorship of the Friends of American Writers with sixteen other women's clubs as founder members. In 1931 it gave its first poetry award to George Dillon for his "Boy in the Wind." The same year the fiction award went to Henry Justin Smith for his "Josslyn." Miss Harriet Monroe was the recipient of this recognition in 1932.

Unfortunately, no award was made last spring because of insufficient funds. It is these depleted coffers the foundation is striving to replenish this year through its lecture series.

The list of founder members of the foundation includes many of the important clubs of the city. There are the Austin North End Woman's club, the Austin Woman's club, the Chicago Culture club, the Chicago Literary Score, the Chicago South Side club, the Conference of Club Presidents and Program Chairmen, the Congress Park Woman's club, the Englewood Woman's club, Hamilton Park Woman's club, Italian Woman's club, La Grange Woman's club, Mayfair Woman's club, Rogers Park Woman's club, Tuesday club, West End Woman's club, and the Woman's club of the People's church.

Assisting Mrs. Henrikson with the arrangements for the lecture series are Mrs. Frederick A. Dow, Mrs. Lynn J Eldredge, Mrs. Clarence Goodwin, Mrs. Thomas Starr Harper, Mrs. Robert M. Hennessy, Mrs. Otto Heper, Mrs. John A. Milice, Mrs. F. C. Russell, and Mrs. M. J. Seifert.

Central Eleanor Club.

A silver birthday celebration is the reason for an interesting array of programs and meetings on the part of the Central Eleanor club during November. The anniversary parties have been arranged by a special committee with Miss Frances E. Lanyen as the general chairman.

Beginning with a silver birthday bridge party next Friday evening at the clubrooms at 16 North Wabash avenue, the celebration will continue the evening of Nov. 10 with a membership dinner business meeting, and a pageant of club history entitled, "The Living Record." The evening of Nov. 17 the Eleanor Choral club will present a musical program at the twenty-fifth birthday party and on the evening of Nov. 24, Mrs. Ozora F. Davis, president of the Chicago Woman's club, will speak on "A Look Ahead."

LEYDEN SCHOOL'S 21 PORTABLES CALLED HORRIBLE

Terming conditions at the Leyden elementary school, Cornelia avenue and Oketo street, which consists of 21 portables, as "horrible," the Leyden Parent-Teacher association has launched a campaign for a new school building. Mrs. Elsie Olson is president of the association.

The board of education will be reminded of its promise, given more than five years ago, to replace the portables with a new elementary school building, according to Mrs. Olson. The board promised that a school would be built as soon as sewage facilities had been installed, she added. The sewage system was completed three years ago, but the board has taken no steps to fulfill its promise, it was said.

Enrollment of 968 Pupils.

The financial plight of the school board has been taken into account, it was pointed out. But with the gradual improvement in the fiscal affairs of the school system under the $5,000,000 economy program, and the prospect that the board may be able to resume a part of its building program sometime in the not very distant future, some steps should be taken toward drafting plans for the school, and funds allocated for that purpose, so that when building operations are again resumed the Leyden community will be assured of a school without further delay, the Parent-Teacher organization contends.

The school now has an enrollment of 968 pupils. Elmer L. Kletzing is principal. The P.-T. A. complains that the portables are jammed against one another, creating a serious fire hazard, that they are badly ventilated and heated, being cold in winter, and hot in summer.

Boys Assist Janitors.

Each building is heated with a smoky, coal burning stove. The children seated nearest the stove become too warm, and those farther away are not warm enough, it was pointed out. The stoves are tended by three janitors, but usually the boys in the room or the teacher must assist in keeping the fire up. This, it was explained, distracts the attention of the class.

Sanitary conditions in connection with the portables are also extremely bad, it was said. The space allotted for lavatories is inadequate. There is also a lack of recreational facilities, such as an assembly hall and gymnasium.

"The school ground is covered with cinders, mixed with glass, and if a child falls he usually is badly scratched," one officer of the association said, "there are no parks nor playgrounds anywhere in the district."

20 CREEDS TO HOLD STADIUM MASSMEETING

Mark Luther's Birthday Next Sunday.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

DR. E. S. JONES.

Martin Luther's 450th birthday will be observed next Sunday afternoon by two great massmeetings. The larger of these is scheduled for the Chicago Stadium and will feature the spread of the reformation faith throughout the world under the auspices of the 20 major denominations participating in the event. One of the world's most noted missionaries, Dr. E. Stanley Jones, will be the Stadium speaker.

The other massmeeting in observance of Luther's birthday will be held simultaneously with the Stadium meeting at the Stevens hotel under the auspices of the Evangelical Lutheran Missouri synod. Speakers at the Stevens hotel meeting include the Rev. G. Schuessler, president of the English district of the synod, the Rev. Alexander Ullrich, president of the northern district, and the Rev. H. W. Prange of Oak Park. The musical program will be provided by the Chicago Lutheran symphony and a chorus of 400 voices under the direction of Prof. J. G. Schmid.

Two Groups Sponsors.

The Stadium meeting is to be held under the joint sponsorship of the Chicago Church federation and the United Foreign Missions' conference. That meeting will be the opening session of a three-day city-wide missions conference during which five notable missionaries and mission leaders will conduct study courses and round table discussions at various centers throughout the city and suburbs. The Stadium meeting will be presided over by Bishop Ernest Lynn Waldorf of the Methodist Episcopal area of Chicago. Others taking part include Bishop George Craig Stewart of the Episcopal diocese, Dr. Robert Clements, president of the Chicago Church federation Dr. Johsua Oden of the Irving Park Lutheran church, Dr. Herbert L. Willett, and Dr. A. M. McDonald.

Local Meetings.

Following the Stadium massmeeting, local massmeetings in centrally located churches of the northwest and west sides will be held next Sunday night as follows:

Irving Park Methodist, Grace and North Keller avenues. The speaker will be Dr. Yi-fang Wu, president of Ginling college, Nanking. Miss Wu was recently in Chicago as a delegate to the International Congress of Women.

Dr. J. Waskom Pickett, mission secretary in the Methodist Episcopal church, will speak in St. Paul's church of that denomination at Ashland and Harrison avenues at 7:30 p. m.

Dr. J. Mills Taylor, mission secretary of the United Presbyterian church will speak in the Fifth church of that denomination.

There will be a meeting in the Grace Reformed church, 2654 West Jackson boulevard, to hear an address by the Rev. A. V. Casselman, mission secretary of the Reformed church in the United States.

Dr. Herman Chen-en Liu, president of the University of Shanghai, China, and a special representative of the Chinese government, will address a community service in the North Shore Baptist church. This meeting will be attended by members of all Protestant churches between Fullerton, Western, and Howard avenues and the lake.

Cover 100 Years.

Bishop Waldorf, chairman of the missions conference, stated that modern missions conducted by the various reformation churches known as Protestants began about 100 years ago or nearly three centuries after Luther began the reformation movement which began in Germany and spread quickly throughout northern European countries.

"Economic and other factors have brought the Protestant missionary enterprise to a crisis," said Bishop Waldorf. "Our purpose in the meetings to be held at the Stadium and throughout the city next week is to proclaim with new zeal the faith of Luther and other reformers and their successors."

ALL SAINTS MASSES

The masses in the Holy Name cathedral on the Feast of All Saints, Wednesday, Nov. 1, will be celebrated at 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 11:45 a. m. and at 12:15 p. m. All will be low masses. High mass will be celebrated at 7:30. All Souls day, Thursday, at 5:30, 6, 6:30, 7, 7:30, 8, and 8:30 a. m., with solemn mass at 9 a. m.

COMPETE AS "MISS LIBERTY"

Miss Genevieve Betlinski of 3723 Wrightwood avenue (left) and Miss Charlotte Clutterbuck of 4030 North Kildare avenue are two of the charming contestants for the title of "Miss Liberty," who will reign over the annual Liberty Mardi Gras of the Retail Clerks' and Millinery Workers' association to be held Thanksgiving evening in the Hotel Sherman. A trip to Hollywood awaits the winner.

CHOIR TO PRESENT GYPSY OPERETTA

UNIVERSITY FOR SCOUTS TO OPEN IN DES PLAINES

3 Training Courses to Be Given.

The northwest suburban council of Boy Scouts will launch its fall training program with a university of scouting which will open on Wednesday, Nov. 8, in the Boy Scout room of the Des Plaines Congregational church.

The three training courses to be offered will continue each Wednesday evening, with the exception of Thanksgiving eve, Nov. 29, into December. The final meeting, a ladies' night program, will take the form of a Christmas party. All of the outdoor work in connection with the training courses will be done the week-end of Nov. 25.

Plan Training Courses.

Plans for the training courses, as well as other fall and winter activities of the council, were drafted at a recent conference attended by twenty-five officials and Scout leaders of the council. The meeting, which was held at the Maine Township High school, was presided over by Thomas M. Whitson, president of the council. A brief general discussion of the personnel of various council and district committees and ways and means of strengthening this personnel was followed by group discussions of plans for such council activities as camping, leadership training, court of honor, cubbing, and finance. Each group reported the results of its discussion.

The three training courses to be offered are elementary and approved courses and a handicraft course. The elementary training is for those leaders who have had no previous instruction in Scout work, and will be under the supervision of Scout Executive Charles O. Nimtz. The approved course is for graduates of the elementary course and will be conducted by Field Scout Commissioner E. J. Anderson. The course in handicraft will be under the direction of A. R. Crawford of Niles, a member of the council training committee.

Promotion Program Shaped.

The training program will be conducted under the auspices of the training committee, which is planning to sponsor a number of other courses on a district basis. These will include first aid, troop committee training, and a one night course for merit badge counselors, and will be made available for the various districts throughout the winter.

A camp promotion program in connection with the council's summer camp, Oh-Da-Ko-Ta, on Dyer lake, Wisconsin, was also formulated at the conference of council officials. A representation of at least six Scouts from every troop at camp is one of the objectives outlined in the program. An effort is to be made to encourage troops to send from 50 to 100 per cent of their membership to camp.

Polish University Club to Give Dance Saturday

The Polish university club will hold its fall dance Saturday evening at the Polonia club, 1575 Milwaukee avenue. The committee on arrangements consists of Walter Kmieciak, chairman; Henry Dankowski, Dr. R. M. Kaminski, C. S. Frasz, Felix Czajkowski, Henry Nowak, Dr. J. C. Ulis, and B. S. Patskoski. The proceeds will go to the club's scholarship fund.

FETE TO MARK SARON CHURCH'S 45TH BIRTHDAY

Lutherans to Open Festivity Wednesday.

Saron Evangelical Lutheran church, Richmond street and Shakespeare avenue, will observe its 45th anniversary during November, the anniversary observance opening with a birthday party to be held at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening.

SYLVIA E. HOLTSBERG.

A feature of the party will be a musical program, by an anniversary chorus, consisting of present and former members, under the direction of Sylvia E. Holtsberg, who has served as choir director for 19 years and organist for 25 years.

Many former soloists of the choir, who have since won distinction, will appear. Among them are Ingeborg Olson Pearson, Marion Crown, Mrs. A. J. Swanson, Beatrice Olson, Le Nore Christell, Clara Nelson, Florence Gustafson, Russel Nelson, Elmer Hallberg, George Nelson, Arthur Wick, and J. Edward Martin.

Pageant to Be Given.

On the following three Wednesday evenings a pageant in three parts, depicting three phases of the church history and growth, will be presented. The part showing the founding and early days of the church will be presented on Wednesday evening, Nov. 8. The intermediate history will be shown in the pageant scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 15, while the church of the present will be depicted on Wednesday, Nov. 22.

At 11 o'clock next Sunday morning Dr. Carl Christenson, who has served as pastor of the church for 28 years, will preach on the subject, "Do We Need Another Luther Today?"

Plan Wedding Service.

A feature of the observance will be a wedding anniversary service at 4 o'clock Sunday, Nov. 26, at which all couples who have been married by the pastor or his predecessor, are invited to be present.

FIRST SUNDAY MUSICAL GIVEN AT "Y" TODAY

Programs Planned Every Other Week.

The first of a series of Sunday afternoon musicales will be given from 3 to 4 o'clock this afternoon in the main lobby of the Division Street Y. M. C. A., 1621 West Division street, according to Richard Maske, executive secretary of the Division street department.

The programs, which will be presented every alternate Sunday, will be given by the Republic Building Symphony orchestra under the direction of M. A. Panzella. Morris Bendheim is chairman of the committee which has arranged for this Sunday afternoon musical feature.

Give Famous Works.

Today's program will include the works of a number of celebrated composers, such as Verdi, Chopin, and Von Suppé. In addition to the orchestral numbers Jeanette Bear, contralto, will sing. The numbers scheduled for the initial concert are the "Triumphal March" from Verdi's "Aida," "Ballet Egyptian," by Luigini; selections from "Cavalleria Rusticana," by Mascagni; "Polonaise Militaire," by Chopin; "La Feria," by Lacombe; "Sarabande," by Bohm; "Non e' ver," [It Isn't True], by Mattei, and "Poet and Peasant Overture," by Von Suppé.

The musicales have been arranged, Mr. Maske explained, purely for the entertainment and enjoyment of the friends, members, and residents of the "Y." "These programs are a departure from anything the 'Y' has tried in its social and entertainment activities, and we expect that they will prove popular," he declared.

End Drive Tuesday.

The membership campaign launched by the "Y" on Oct. 11 will end Tuesday. Seventy-seven new members have been added to the roster of the branch so far under the reduced membership rates in effect during the campaign. The goal is 200. Dr. C. F. Stotz is chairman of the drive.

Paul McKusker has been appointed chairman of the boys' work committee of the "Y," filling the place left vacant by Floyd Ferguson, who has been transferred out of town. A farewell party for the latter will be given at the "Y" on Wednesday.

The Industrial basketball league, composed of teams representing northwest side industrial firms, will start play for the league championship on Friday evening. The ten teams in the league will play in a round robin series games which will be held every Friday evening. There will be a party for members of the teams after each Friday evening game. E. L. Kuempel, physical director, is in charge of the league.

FUR MERCHANTS OF AREA JOIN NATIONAL WEEK

During National Fur week, Oct. 30 to Nov. 4, fur merchants of this area will join with stores all over the country to exhibit the newest fashions in furs. Every type of fur coat, for every occasion, will be featured during this country-wide event.

Gone are the days when a woman can say, "O, I simply can't wear a fur coat; it makes me look too fat!"

The furriers' art has reached such a pitch there is a wealth of detail impossible a few years back. Skins are worked in such a way that the fur coats of this season are more slenderizing than those of cloth. With the flat furs now in vogue, it is possible to achieve amazing effects.

Waistlines are carefully molded to give the desired full bosomed, long limbed appearance. Often they are belted with leather or silk braid to give a further nipped-in effect.

Lengths show great variety. The short, box jacket, the three-quarters or seven-eighths types, and the full length coat find favor for daytime, while for evening three-quarters, ankle length, or trained wraps are equally correct. Much attention has been paid to skirt treatments. Some are straight and tubular; others, following the Mae West trend, are slightly flared.

Plan "County Fair."

Notre Dame council, Ladies of Isabella, will sponsor a "county fair" today at the 41st Ward Democratic hall, [illegible] Lawrence avenue. There will be dancing, refreshments, and entertainment. Proceeds will go to the council's Christmas philanthropic work.

ON HONEYMOON

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Jane Wilkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Wilkins of Park Ridge, to Ben Walker Jr. of Tribbett, Miss. The ceremony was performed at Fairfax plantation, the home of the groom's parents, where the couple will reside following a trip through the south.

CITY CLUB PLANS TO OPEN DOORS TO NEIGHBORHOODS

County-Wide Delegate Plan Discussed.

A project to extend the facilities and prestige of the City club of Chicago to the outlying neighborhoods and suburbs in Cook county by allowing community organizations to select delegates to become members of the City club was discussed on Monday evening by the city-wide activities committee composed of representatives of the club and of a number of federations and neighborhood organizations. The committee voted in favor of offering the memberships if the board of directors of the club will give its formal consent to the program, which involves the formation of some kind of special organization within the club to give special attention to the neighborhood problems.

Each neighborhood or suburban business and improvement group, as well as several other kinds of group to be specifically designated, would be allowed to elect one delegate to become a member of the club, with the privilege of sending an alternate to any meeting that the delegate does not attend.

Would Provide Research.

Facilities to be extended to the neighborhood groups through the City club would include a speaker's bureau to furnish prominent civic and technical speakers for neighborhood massmeetings. The club would also provide research on special community problems and obtain united action of all its member groups in getting service on the problem of each—especially when the service required must come from elected public officials.

"We would like to make it clear that the City club is not a 'downtown' organization," explained Charles B. Simmons, a member of the club, when the question was raised as to whether the outlying organizations would agree to coöperate through a club located in the loop.

Draws from Whole City.

"Our membership is drawn from all over the city and from the suburbs and it is only for the convenience and fairness to all the members that the club is thus centrally located. Obviously any program that is to be city-wide should have its headquarters centrally located, rather than on the south side, the west side, or the north side. To have it located elsewhere than downtown would lead to suspicions of partiality to some one section."

W-G-N STARTS BIGGEST SEASON NEXT WEDNESDAY

Station Will Operate as Independent.

The day after day regularity in outlet periods, the exceptional range of the station, the association with other quality programs seem to produce listener results that the networks, with their complex schedules and divergent interests do not offer.

In the matter of sustaining orchestral music W-G-N offers the best there is. The combined resources of the stations of either network do not offer such an array of orchestral talent as W-G-N has in Wayne King, Hal Kemp, Charlie Agnew, Jan Garber, Clyde McCoy, Don Carlos, and Richard Cole.

SKETCHES OF TALENT

W-G-N's newly assembled parade of talent for the winter season represents variety and the unusual in the entertainment field. Artists and presentations have been selected with the thought of bringing to W-G-N's audiences the best musical and talking features to listeners throughout the eighteen or more hours a day that the station is on the air.

A typical day's program of broadcasting, which starts each weekday at 7 a. m. and continues until 1:30 a. m. or later, with Sunday's broadcast time from 9 a. m. to 1:30 a. m., brings a well balanced, interesting, entertaining and educational series of air presentations.

Here are abbreviated sketches of the station's latest additions to its schedules:

THE PAULIST CHOIR.

One of the outstanding musical organizations of the country for many years, the Paulist choir of seventy-five voices under the direction of the Rev. Father Eugene O'Malley, will present a series of Sunday evening concerts. This choir has been much sought after for radio and stage performances but never before arranged a regular series of concerts for the air.

The Paulist choir is selected from the pick of the choir boys of Chicago. Their musicianship is faultless; their technique brilliant, and the director, Father O'Malley, has attained a nation-wide reputation for his fine selection of songs and his musical arrangements.

All of the concerts will be broadcast throughout the winter season exclusively by W-G-N.

BERENICE TAYLOR.

Although not a newcomer to radio, Berenice Taylor, W-G-N'S new soprano prima donna, will present a new style of vocal music. Miss Taylor was selected by W-G-N officials after a long series of auditions. She will be presented on regular programs with the full W-G-N concert orchestra.

Coming to Chicago in 1924, Miss Taylor has occupied an enviable position in the musical circles of the city as well as New York. She has filled many concert and radio engagements, her previous air performances having included some of the largest national advertising programs on the NBC chain.

On the stage she was a member of the New York company of "The Student Prince." She appeared in other operettas and musical productions. She also has been a soloist in several of the larger churches in Chicago and New York.

THE DORING SISTERS.

Distinctive harmony combined with a brilliant style and rhythm will feature the broadcasts of the Doring Sisters. The three girls are all accomplished musicians, two of them being accomplished pianists as well as singers.

The trio has been together for more than two years, and many of their arrangements are prepared by one of their number. Music critics of Chicagoland have hailed the perfection of their vocal blending. They are all soloists also.

Two of the girls were honor students at Oak Park High school, while the third is a graduate of Maine Township High, Des Plaines.

WILLARD AND PENN.

Charley Willard and Kathryn Penn were selected to present solos and duets because of their faultless rendition and harmony. Mr. Willard has a tenor voice of exceptional quality, while Miss Penn's soprano matches her partner's voice admirably.

Love songs and ballads are their specialty, although each is an accomplished soloist and will be presented in single as well as double performances during the season on W-G-N Both are Chicagoans.

PLATT AND NIERMAN.

Many weeks of auditions rolled by before this double piano team which will furnish entertainment for W-G-N's listeners during the winter season, was discovered.

Dick Platt is the veteran of the team. He has played on concert and vaudeville stages and has also been featured on some of the best national chain broadcasts.

He is a graduate of Western State Normal college, where he started his musical career, and is a pupil of Sergei Tarnowsky and Dr. Samuel Lieberson, one of the country's outstanding teachers of musical theory and composition and a former conductor of the Berlin State opera.

Sidney Nierman started his musical career at the University of Illinois, where he led one of the favorite campus orchestras. He was graduated in 1932. Returning to Chicago, he teamed with Dick Platt to form the current W-G-N team.

ARCH BAILEY.

If your fancy runs to "he-man" tunes such as "Song of the Mounties" or "The Ranger's Song," you'll find a new favorite in Arch Bailey, new baritone. Mr. Bailey has been guest artist on W-G-N shows in the past, but under the "new deal" he'll be heard in a regular program schedule that should win instant favor.

Arch is a Chicagoan. He has attracted much favorable comment from music critics, and in his new setting with the great W-G-N concert orchestra, directed by Adolph Dumont, a fine series of concerts is promised.

HOT TRUMPETER

Clyde McCoy, the "Sugar Blues" maestro, whose orchestra broadcasts every evening over the Tribune station from the Drake hotel.

ORCHESTRA TO PRESENT THREE FINE PROGRAMS

Three programs of unusual musical merit mark tonight's presentations of the concert orchestra on W-G-N. At 5 o'clock, 7:15 and 8 o'clock the orchestra, under the direction of Adolphe Dumont, will be heard in separate recitals.

High spots from the 5 o'clock program include the triumphal march from "Aida," selections from "The Chocolate Soldier," and Waldteufel's symphonic waltz, "The Shower of Gold." Tonight's 7:15 program includes Glazenow's "Autumn and Winter," from the Ballet of the Season, a mazurka by Chopin, and Valverdi's "Carnations." The 8 o'clock program, bringing 45 minutes of the classics, is notable for flute and clarinet solos in Saint-Saëns' "Tarantelle," for Beethoven's "Egmont Overture," and for notable airs from Godowsky, Glinka, Bizet, and Tschaikowski.

Singin' Sam's Requests.

Singin' Sam will offer another group of request numbers during his program over W-G-N and Columbia at 7:15 p. m., Tuesday. His selections will include "Memphis by Morning," "Love Is the Sweetest Thing," "My Little Girl," and "Answer My Heart."

TRIBUNE STATION SERVICE RECORD IS UNEQUALED

W-G-N's record of continuous service is not excelled by any station in the country. No station has had fewer interruptions due to mechanical failure or breakdown. W-G-N owes this distinction to several causes—the skill of its engineering staff, the excellence of its equipment, and the fact that it is one of the few stations in America equipped with practically 100 per cent duplicate transmitting apparatus. The latter fact insures quick—in most cases almost immediate—resumption of service interrupted by one cause or another.

W-G-N's transmitting equipment is of the most modern type. New inventions, when of proved superiority, are immediately installed by W-G-N.

W-G-N has complete equipment to check the performance of its transmitter. Clarity, power, fidelity of tone are constantly checked, so that whenever improvements are needed they can be made immediately.

CATHOLIC BOXING TOURNEY NEWS ON SPORTS HOUR

John Harrington, the W-G-N sport reporter, will keep fans informed on the activities in the Catholic Youth Boxing tournament this week in addition to his interesting chats on collegiate football, hockey, basketball, and other sports. In addition he will interview four prominent figures in the world of sport. Tomorrow night, Arch Ward, sports editor of THE TRIBUNE, will talk on the football situation.

On Wednesday, Packey McFarland, a member of the Illinois boxing commission, will discuss boxing in the C. Y. O.

Friday night, Bernie Bierman, the coach of the Minnesota Gophers, and Dick Hanley, Northwestern's mentor, will speak.

The review formerly heard at 6:45 p. m. will be heard at 6:30 beginning tomorrow.

Jan Garber to Present Composition by His Wife

"I Never Said I Loved You," an original composition by Mrs. Jan Garber, will be played from manuscript by her conductor-husband and his orchestra during the program at 1:30 p. m. today over KYW and NBC.

W-G-N A RADIO TRAIL BLAZER FOR TEN YEARS

Tribune Station Makes Radio History.

Those who have followed station W-G-N on the air have witnessed radio broadcasting history in the making. W-G-N experimented, innovated, and stepped the fastest pace in bringing new and larger programs to listeners.

This single radio station, the most enterprising in America, has brought the great news events of the country to an extent comparable with the two networks. W-G-N reflecting the world-wide news gathering activities of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, has served its listening audiences with brilliant broadcasts of the outstanding news spectacles of the last decade, with its own announcers, over its own leased wires—independent of chain hookups.

In the first month of its existence, in May, 1924, the broadcast of the great 500 mile automobile race, a breathtaking program which lasted nearly seven hours. With a sound-proof broadcasting booth beside the track and with microphones at the foot of the home stretch and back stretch, all over the grandstands and in the pits, the station delivered a technical and thrillingly told story of the vast spectacle. This feature was repeated annually and exclusively by W-G-N.

In 1925 W-G-N showed the radio world how to broadcast the Kentucky Derby and every year since then the colorful and gripping story of the Louisville classic has been brought to the W-G-N audience by the corps of announcing engineers and turf experts.

Scopes Trial Broadcast.

Also in 1925, W-G-N, at a cost of $1,000 a day for long distance wires, broadcast the entire Scopes evolution trial from Dayton, Tenn.

The courtroom was rearranged to accommodate the microphone requirements and the testimony of the witnesses, the utterances of the judge, and the pleas of respective batteries of famous attorneys headed by Clarence Darrow and the late William Jennings Bryan were broadcast exclusively by W-G-N.

In 1924 the Tribune station, not content with broadcasting the football and baseball games in Chicago when there were more important contests elsewhere, inaugurated a series of football broadcasts which, over a period of nine years, no other single station can equal.

W-G-N is the only station which has broadcast from every campus in the Big Ten and included in its coverage of great games the campuses of the University of Nebraska, the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Southern California. In one year alone, 1932, W-G-N sent its announcing and engineering staff to Ann Arbor, Mich.; South Bend, Ind.; Champaign, Ill.; Cleveland, O.; Minneapolis, Minn., and Los Angeles, Cal., the latter being the longest remote control broadcast ever engineered by a single radio station.

1928 Conventions Broadcast.

W-G-N has become known as the station which broadcasts FROM greater distances than other stations broadcast TO. In January, 1926, the station rented lines to Washington, D. C., to bring to the homes of the middle west the voices of the senators engaged in the heated World Court debate.

In 1928 the same crew broadcast the entire Republican convention from Kansas City and the Democratic convention from Houston, Texas, the latter at a cost of approximately $19,000 a day. In both convention halls there were only three broadcasters, the networks and W-G-N.

In 1926 W-G-N broadcast exclusively an entire performance of Morris Gest's mammoth production, "The Miracle," from the Auditorium theater in Chicago, a moving story of the pantomime, accompanying the pickup of the orchestra music.

Scoops Radio World.

Again, in 1932, W-G-N scooped the radio world by being the only station, on or off a network, to broadcast every minute of the Republican and Democratic conventions in Chicago, canceling 41 commercial programs to provide the time for the engrossing political sessions. The station was the only major broadcaster to give to the radio audience the presentation of the Democratic platform.

In 1931 millions of listeners, through W-G-N's own microphones, attended the funeral services of Coach Knute C. Rockne of Notre Dame at South Bend, Ind.

In other fields of sport W-G-N has outdistanced every competitor. Since the first broadcast of the Chicago city series in 1924 the station has put more baseball games on the air than any other broadcaster in the world. It is the only station that has ever broadcast an evening of boxing matches over its own lines from as great a distance as New York to Chicago.

The enterprise of the station in bringing public figures before its microphone, regardless of distance or expense, has been cheered by the radio audiences. In 1926 an exclusive remote control broadcast of an address by Herbert Hoover was brought from Washington. In 1927 addresses by Senator James E. Watson of Indiana and Senator James A. Reed of Missouri were broadcast over W-G-N lines from Indianapolis and Kansas City respectively.

Darrow-Wheeler Debate.

In 1925 the station staged a debate on prohibition in its own studios, importing two leading exponents of the wet and dry issues, Clarence Darrow and the late Wayne B. Wheeler, at considerable expense. In 1926 the station arranged through its correspondent in Rome, Italy, for the first phonograph reproduction of the voice of Premier Benito Mussolini. Mussolini made his first phonograph record through a W-G-N microphone and his address of greeting to Americans and Italians in America was shipped overseas and put on the air in Chicago.

In every other field of radio entertainment the station has blazed new trails. W-G-N was the first station in Chicago to have a radio comic strip ("Sam 'n' Henry," now known as "Amos 'n' Andy"), its own composers, its own librettists, reproductions of great historical events, a thirty-five piece dance orchestra in the studio, and its own dramatic, operatic, and musical comedy companies. The fascinating feature, the reading of the Sunday "Funnies" to the children, was originated by the station in 1924.

Originates Many Features.

The station has long been famous for its origination of great radio features and acts. It gave to the radio world, in addition to the above mentioned comic strip, "Clara, Lu 'n' Em," "Little Orphan Annie," East and Dumke ("The Sisters of the Skillet"), "The Singing Lady," and Floyd Gibbons.

The local success of sponsors' features has prompted clients to increase their advertising appropriations to expand to network broadcasts. W-G-N at present is the only radio station feeding programs to the national networks: "Little Orphan Annie," "Clara, Lu 'n' Em," "The Singing Lady" over the National Broadcasting company and "Painted Dreams," "Just Plain Bill," and "The Story of Helen Trent" over the Columbia Broadcasting system.

The station has never accepted any income for religious or political talks, donating its time equally to rival candidates in all major political campaigns. Even the time under contract to one of the networks which was devoted to campaign addresses by Herbert Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt was donated. This refusal of revenue was made in the presidential campaign, when there were many appeals for station time, and in the worst year of the depression.

Following the advertising policies of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, W-G-N insists that its sponsored programs conform to the highest ethical standards. Like THE TRIBUNE, it is stricter than the law. Annually it rejects thousands of dollars in revenue from accounts and products that do not meet with its stringent requirements. Advertisements concerning lotteries are refused, as are programs involving fortune tellers, mind readers, and clairvoyants. Advertising copy is inspected in order to exclude all quack medical advertising and anything else of doubtful character or questionable taste.

MASTERS OF HARMONY

Tom, Dick and Harry, one of the pioneer harmony trios of radio, continue perennially popular over W-G-N. They're heard currently at 8:30 p. m. Monday, Thursday and Friday. Carl Hoefle, their able pianist and arranger, is shown with them.

RADIO ROUNDUP

One by one the few microphone holdouts yield to the kilocyclic pull. A week ago it was Mencken; last Monday night Charlie Chaplin made his network bow. His performance goes a long way toward explaining his decision to avoid talking pictures. His voice would sound as out of place with his film buffoonery as George Arliss' inflections would coming from Al Smith. Chaplin has no cockney accent. His English resembles the king's. Charley, however, sounds his r's more distinctly. His NRA speech was earnest, almost impassioned. Like President Roosevelt, he uses the word "chiselers."

Virginia Hamilton, the little singer from Memphis, long heard with Jan Garber's orchestra, is joining Clyde McCoy's orchestra at the Drake as soloist.

Just Try to Find Him.

Tuning in on five listings in two days for Clyde Lucas from WBBM we got something else every time. That's unfair to listeners, unfair to newspapers listing the programs, unfair to one of the finest orchestras playing. We finally caught up on the sixth listing. And it was worth all the bother.

Those broadcasts by Ace Brigode would be better if he resumed the choral singing and novelties that brought him considerable comment last season. Too much straight dance rhythm at present. . . . It's nice to hear Clyde McCoy again. Hot jazz or sweet rhythm he handles both equally well.

Ted Weems and his orchestra have designated Tuesdays Chicago nights. An imposing array of radio personages turned out at the Bismarck last Tuesday to do Ted honor.

Another Revue Planned.

Chicago's annual radio revue will be staged early in December, exact date to be announced shortly. Niles Trammel is chairman.

Ed Wynn, the foolish fireman, will be back on the air via WMAQ-NBC at 8:30 Tuesday night with his old shoes, but, we hope, some new jokes.

Neila Goodelle, prima donna with Buddy Rogers, will sing and be interviewed on "What a Well Dressed Entertainer Wears" at 6 p. m. on WBBM. Buddy Rogers takes a vacation next week. He'll fly to California to spend a week and then open for RKO at Cincinnati. . . . Phil Harris and his College Inn orchestra will play for the Cradle Ball at the Drake on Nov. 10.

Several gag writers pooled their ghosting experiences under the name of Joseph Hoyt and told all in first issue of "Esquire," the new he-man's magazine. Fred Allen, it appears from this article, is about the only comedian on the air who writes his own stuff.

"HELEN TRENT'S ROMANCE" TO GO ON CBS NETWORK

W-G-N Sketch Will Open Tomorrow.

Another W-G-N show is going network. Starting tomorrow "The Romance of Helen Trent," which has been a regular afternoon feature on THE TRIBUNE station for the past two months will be presented on a Columbia Broadcasting system network.

Battles for Success.

"The Romance of Helen Trent" is the story of a woman who has found romance after divorce has broken up her home at the age of 35. Despite handicaps, Helen has found new adventure in life and stages a brilliant battle for success. She returns to the world of business and finds employment again.

When the sketch opens tomorrow on the network, the audience will find Helen Trent winding up her first great adventure in her new field of romance. She has just given up her second love and once again shoves the past behind her.

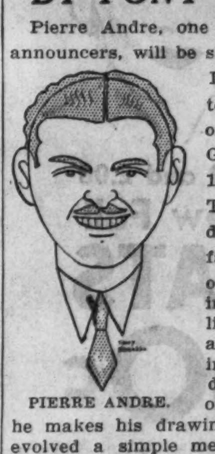
Finds New Job.

Helen has found new employment in a fashionable dress shop owned by Mary Steward, who shares with Helen the common ground of hatred for Stephen Clark, who has been a sinister factor in Helen's life.

Both W-G-N and the CBS network will present the sketch at 1:30 p. m. every day except Saturday and Sunday.

On the chain the broadcasts will be heard in all of the major markets, including New Lork, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Detroit, Dallas, Denver, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Seattle.

PIERRE ANDRE TO BE SKETCHED BY TONY D'ORAZI



PIERRE ANDRE.

Pierre Andre, one of W-G-N's ace announcers, will be sketched by Tony D'Orazi, the Cartoonist of the Air, on his regular W-G-N program at 12:45 p. m. today. Tony each Sunday sketches a famous personage of radioland and in instructing his listeners in the art of comic drawing will have Andre in the studios of W-G-N while he makes his drawing. D'Orazi has evolved a simple method of artistry that is entertaining both for the grown-ups and the children.

Gertrude Niesen Signed.

Gertrude Niesen, exotic singing star of "The Big Show," has signed to appear at New York's swank supper club, the Central Park Casino, after Eddie Duchin returns there with his orchestra.

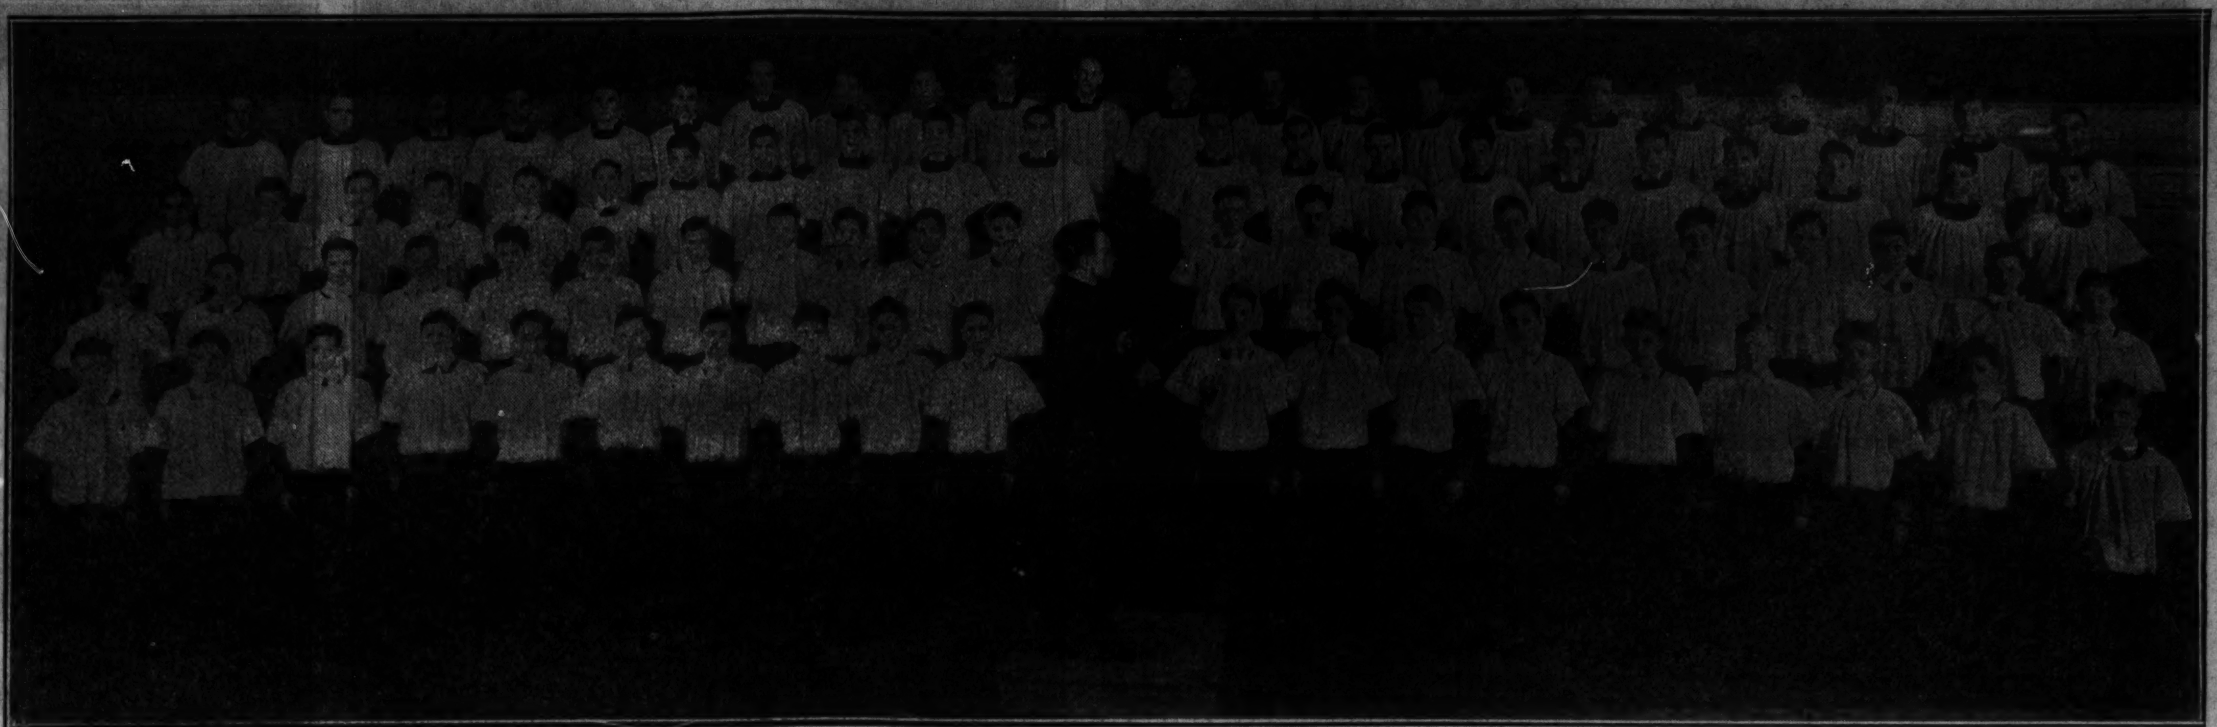
W-G-N Presents Impressive Array of Exclusive New Talent—Paulist Choristers to Be Heard on Sunday Nights



FAMED PAULIST CHORISTERS OF ST. MARY'S CATHOLIC CHURCH TO APPEAR IN SUNDAY NIGHT CONCERTS THROUGH THE TRIBUNE STATION. When W-G-N launches its new deal for radio listeners as the nation's outstanding independent station this week one of the premiere features will be the singing of these men and boys, who are under the direction of the Rev. Father Eugene O'Malley.

HERE'S SOMETHING DIFFERENT IN MELODY AND RHYTHM. A new style of singing is presented by these three winsome misses, the Doring Sisters. Already famous for their brilliant singing arrangements, they have been signed as exclusive W-G-N artists.

[Underwood & Underwood Photo.]

[Nelidoff-Gordoni Photo.]

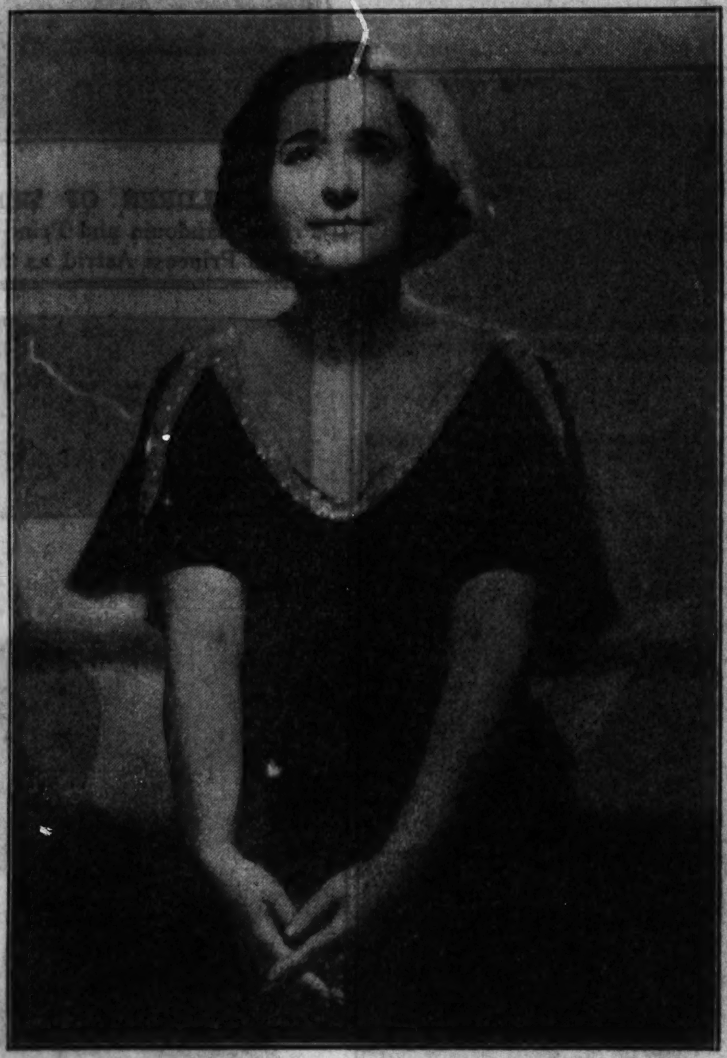
[Maurice Seymour Photo.]

SWEET DUETS OF POPULAR AND SEMI-CLASSICAL BALLADS. These are the specialties of this pair of young songsters. Kathryn Penn, soprano, and Charles Willard, tenor, will blend their voices for the audiences of the new W-G-N programs.



[Seymour Photo.]

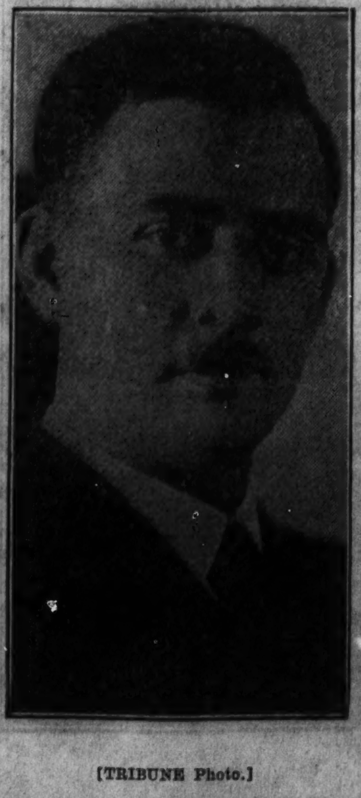
SONGS OF TODAY, YESTERDAY, AND TOMORROW. Berenice Taylor, soprano, takes her place as W-G-N's prima donna Wednesday when the new season is launched. Miss Taylor will be heard regularly on The Tribune station's programs throughout the winter.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

THREE ADVENTURERS WITH AMAZING HISTORY. Uncle Quin's Scalawags, Donnie Dreamer, Wishbone, and Jean, a 6 o'clock feature nightly over W-G-N for the children, with a great story of clean adventure.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

DICK PLATT AND SID NIERMAN, DOUBLE PIANO TEAM EXTRAORDINARY. Your favorites from among the popular songs of the day and the melodies of yesteryear roll off the flying fingers of these two artists in faultless fashion. Platt is well known to radio, but Nierman, a newcomer, has organized this new two piano combination exclusively for The Tribune station.



[TRIBUNE Photo.]

A DEEP BARITONE. Arch Bailey will sing stirring men's songs so widely requested by radio audiences.

SMILING BATONEER. Charlie Agnew, director of Hotel Stevens orchestra.

CLARA, LU, 'N' EM, THE CHAMPION GOSSIPERS OF THE AIRWAYS. These human magpies purvey all manner of chatter over W-G-N and NBC at 9:15 five mornings a week.

"If there's one person in the world who knows when a radio set is getting my voice EXACTLY, it's my wife"

—SAYS BING CROSBY

Famous radio star—now in the new Paramount picture, "Too Much Harmony"

-And So She Chose a Stewart-Warner

—THE RADIO OF THE STARS

BING CROSBY—who needs no introduction to radio fans—originator of a totally unique style of singing—broadcasting from the CBS Studios in New York.... See him in the new Paramount hit, "Too Much Harmony." He is a Brunswick star.

Before You Buy Any Radio—See And Hear This New And Thrilling Set That Actually DUPLICATES Studio-Performance, Down to The Faintest Whisper.

IF YOU were to visit the homes of the most famous radio stars, you'd be amazed to find how many of them own a Stewart-Warner. For 9 out of 10 noted network stars have chosen it for their homes.

Nor has this come about by accident—for radio reception is a thing of vital importance to the artists of the air. And it's doubly important to their families listening in at home.

No other audience is half so critical—nor half so quick to detect any shortcomings that may exist in the set they listen with. For—as Bing Crosby expresses it:—"If there's one person in the world who KNOWS when a radio set is getting my voice exactly, it's my wife!"

An Entirely New Principle

The Stewart-Warner Radio was engineered and designed—NOT with the idea that it was to be a musical instrument in itself. But simply that it was to be a perfect duplicating mechanism—that and nothing else.... With the result that it actually recreates studio broadcasts with an accuracy that's nothing short of uncanny.

By all means—see and hear "the radio of the stars." The one set that gives you exactly what you have a right to expect when you buy a radio:—100% duplication of studio-performance. See and hear it today!

TUDOR CONSOLE

A period design of dignity and grace that will harmonize with the most attractive home settings. Its beauty is accentuated with rich hand carvings. Equipped with new ten-tube Stewart-Warner superheterodyne radio, it is priced at only $72.50

FINE RADIOS CONCEALED IN FINE FURNITURE

STEWART-WARNER COMPANION SET

A six-tube full power Superheterodyne radio, yet it measures only 7¼ inches high and 10 inches wide. The case is highly polished Burl Walnut, with metal trimmings in dull silver, $34.50. Same set in handsome walnut cabinet $32.50

DUNCAN PHYFE TABLE RADIO

This charming table—a true reproduction of the original by America's great designer. Behind the drop door, made to resemble drawer fronts, is concealed the ten-tube superheterodyne radio with twin speakers. Price complete, $69.50. Same table with 6-tube radio, only $52.50

THE GUMPS
IN THE COURT-HOUSE JAIL- THE BIG DOOR SWINGS OPEN- THE GUARDS ARE WAITING- RED RIGGLES AND HIS MEN MUST FACE THEIR TRIAL-
COME ON, YOU SCOUNDRELS- THE COURT'S IN SESSION- AND YOUR CASE IS NEXT-YOU CAN'T PROVE ANYTHING ON US- YOU HAVEN'T GOT ANY EVIDENCE-
SIDNEY SMITH
THE BIG TRIAL IS ON! THE GREATEST TRIAL SILVER CREEK HAS EVER SEEN- THE LITTLE COURT-ROOM IS PACKED FULL- FOR MILES AROUND THE RANCHERS HAVE GATHERED HOPING TO SEE THE VILLAINOUS BANDIT GANG RECEIVE THEIR JUST DESERTS- AT LAST A HUSH FALLS OVER THE COURT ROOM- HEAVILY GUARDED- THE FOUR DESPERADOES ARE USHERED INTO THE PRISONERS BOX- RED RIGGLES AND HIS MEN, GUILTY OF A THOUSAND CRIMES ARE ON TRIAL FOR THEIR LIVES-
OLD JUDGE THATCHER SCANS THE PAPERS WITH HIS KEEN GRAY EYES- AS HONEST A JUDGE AS EVER SAT ON THE BENCH-
SUCH FLIMSY EVIDENCE- IF ONLY THERE WAS SOME WAY I COULD GIVE THEM THE SENTENCE THEY DESERVE-
TRAPPED BY THE BLACK BAND UNDER THE LEADERSHIP OF SHERIFF WATTS AND COUSIN CHARLIE, RED RIGGLES' BAND ARE FINALLY BROUGHT TO JUSTICE- BUT THEY ARE CONTEMPTUOUS NOW- THESE VILLAINS ARE CONFIDENT THAT THEY CAN ESCAPE THE CLUTCHES OF THE LAW AGAIN AS THEY HAVE MANY TIMES BEFORE- ALWAYS TOO CLEVER TO BE FOUND WITH ANY EVIDENCE AGAINST THEM
RED RIGGLES, TIME AND TIME AGAIN, YOU AND YOUR HENCHMEN HAVE BEEN BROUGHT TO THE BAR OF JUSTICE ONLY TO BE LET LOOSE FOR LACK OF PROOF ENOUGH TO CONVICT YOU- I AM CONVINCED BEYOND ANY REASONABLE DOUBT THAT YOU MEN ARE GUILTY OF THE CRIME WITH WHICH YOU ARE CHARGED- HOLDING UP A TRAIN AND ROBBING THE GOVERNMENT MAILS-NOTE THE LOOK OF DEFIANCE AND SCORN ON THE CRUEL FACES OF THESE MEN AS THEY TAKE THEIR SEATS-
AGAINST ITS WISHES THIS COURT IS COMPELLED TO TURN THESE MURDERERS- CUT-THROATS AND ROBBERS FREE- TO LET THESE HARDENED CRIMINALS LOOSE TO ROB- PILLAGE AND PREY UPON SOCIETY AGAIN FOR WANT OF ANY INCRIMINATING EVIDENCE- FOR LACK OF ANY WITNESSES WITH COURAGE ENOUGH TO STAND UP AGAINST THEM AND TESTIFY TO THEIR OUTRAGEOUS CRIMES- IT'S A TRAVESTY UPON JUSTICE THAT THE COURT IS FORCED TO LET THESE MEN GO FREE-
AT THAT MOMENT A DOOR IN THE REAR END OF THE COURT-ROOM SWINGS OPEN- AND COUSIN CHARLIE ENTERS- AT THE SOUND OF HIS VOICE ALL EYES TURN IN HIS DIRECTION-YOUR HONOR- JUST ONE MOMENT PLEASE!
YOUR HONOR- I HAVE A SURPRISE- I HAVE JUST BROUGHT TWO WITNESSES WHO ARE WILLING TO TAKE THE STAND IN BEHALF OF THE STATE- THEY AND THEY ALONE KNOW THE WHOLE STORY OF THIS DASTARDLY CRIME-
BRING THE WITNESSES IN-WHAT KIND OF A GAME IS THIS THEY'RE TRYING TO PULL?
WHAT WITNESSES CAN THEY BRING IN?
LOOK! IT'S THOSE TWO KIDS!
WHEN COUSIN CHARLIE WALKED DOWN THE AISLE LEADING LITTLE CHESTER AND JERRY YOU COULD HEAR A PIN DROP-SPIES!
THESE TWO BOYS ARE PREPARED AND WILLING TO TESTIFY IN THIS CASE AGAINST THESE MEN- AND WHEN THEY HAVE TOLD THEIR STORY ANY JURY WILL BE CONVINCED THAT THESE SCOUNDRELS, RED RIGGLES AND HIS GANG, ARE GUILTY-
YOU LITTLE SCAMP! YOU DARE SAY ONE WORD-
LOOK OUT! HE'S PULLED A KNIFE OUT OF HIS BOOT!

MY MY! WHAT A QUAINT PLACE, MOONSHINE - LET'S US EAT LUNCH IN THERE.
WELL, IT'S A TOUGH JOINT, EMMY, BUT I DON'T MIND. I ALWAYS LIKE TO ADD A SPICE OF DANGER TO TH' ORDINARY THINGS OF LIFE.
IS THAT WHY YOU EAT PEAS OFF YOUR KNIFE, MOON?
SEVENTY FIVE CENTS FOR A LUNCH LIKE THIS! OF ALL THE NERVE
AINT EVERTING OKAY?
WELL TH' MUSTARD WAS GOOD.
WAITER, WOT'S THIS, PUMPKIN' OR SWEET POTATO PIE?
CAN'TCHA TELL BY DA TASTE OF IT?
CASH ON THE LINE!
DEN WHADDA YOU CARE?
NO!
WELL, WHATEVER IT IS WE DON'T WANT IT. GIMME MY CHECK AND TAKE THIRTY CENTS OFFA IT FOR YOUR PIE.
OH NO - WHETHER YOU EAT IT OR NOT IT'S THERE FOR YOUSE.
OKAY! THERE'S YER MONEY.
HEY! YOU'RE FIFTY CENTS SHORT.
THAT WAS FOR SPILLIN' GRAVY ON MY HAT.
I DIDN'T SPILL NO GRAVY ON YER LID, KID.
WELL, THAT'S YOUR FAULT. IT WAS RIGHT WHERE YOU COULDA SPILLED SOME ON IT.
OH YEAH -
AND IT STILL IS YOU BANJOEYED BUM!
WAM!
POLICE!
BAM!
POW!
MY WORD! EIGHT O'CLOCK AND NO SIGN OF LADY PLUSHBOTTOM YET - MY WORD!!
OH YES - I FORGOT TO TELL YA, ME BRUDDER MOON AND HER IS IN JAIL.
THAT'S WOT I SAID - IN JAIL! A WAITER CALLED MOON A NAME AND DUMPED SOME DISHES ON HIS HEAD - THEN EMMY GRABBED TH' WAITER'S ARM AND MOON SMACKED TH' WAITER FOR A LOOP AND HE TOOK A TABLE LEG AWAY FROM EMMY AND WRAPPED IT AROUND MOON'S NECK, SO MOON THROWED HIM THROUGH A PARTITION.
YES, YES - GO ON - AND THEN WHAT HAPPENED?
WELL, THEN MOON AND LADY PLUSHBOTTOM AND TH' WAITER GOT MAD AND STARTED TO FIGHT!

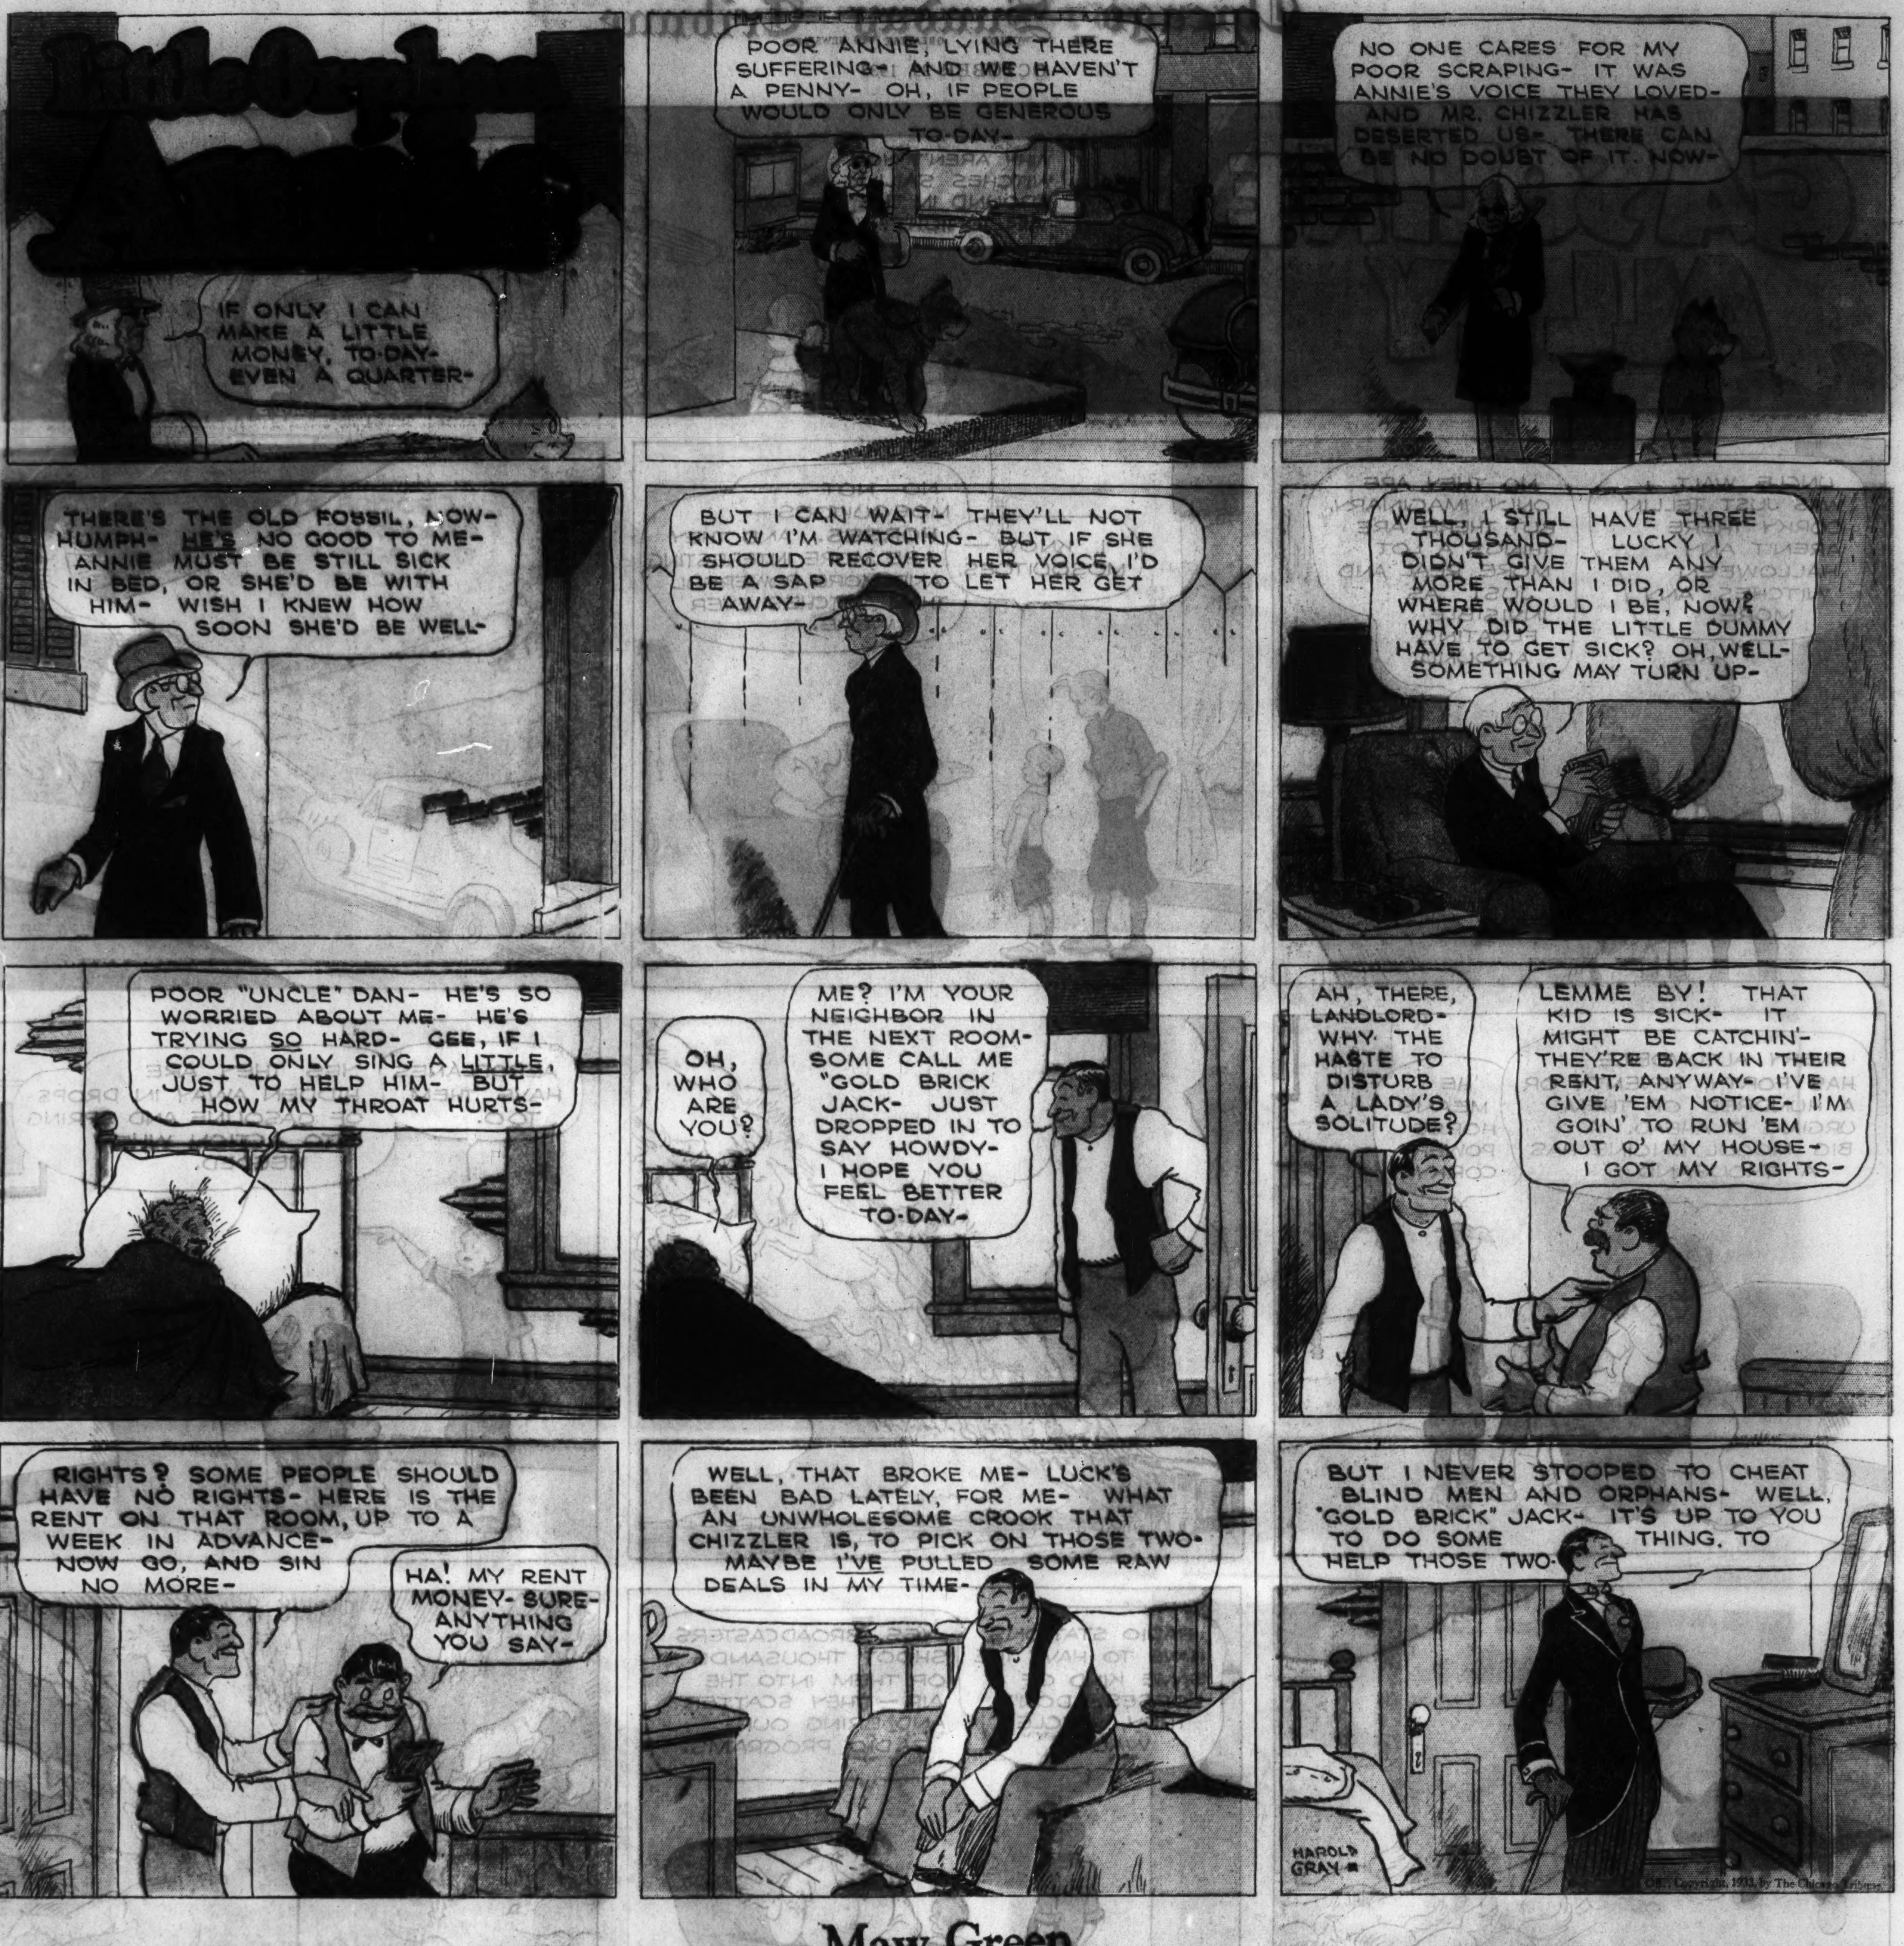
WHY AREN'T YOU WITCHES SAILING AROUND IN THE AIR TONIGHT?
TOO MUCH HORSE TRAFFIC.
UNCLE WALT, I WAS JUST TELLIN' CORKY THERE AREN'T ANY HALLOWE'EN WITCHES ANY MORE.
NO THEY ARE ONLY IMAGINARY. BUT THERE ARE THINGS A LOT MORE REAL AND JUST AS INVISIBLE FLOATING AROUND.
I KNOW — MOSQUITOES.
NO NOT MOSQUITOES — HORSES. AND THEY ARE MORE INTERESTING AND MORE POWERFUL THAN WITCHES EVER WERE.
EVERY AUTOMOBILE HAS FORTY, SEVENTY OR A HUNDRED OF THEM URGING IT AHEAD. A BIG MOGUL ENGINE HAS A THOUSAND
HE MEANS HORSE POWER, CORKY.
AEROPLANES HAVE THEM TOO.
YES THEY ARE HIDDEN AWAY IN DROPS OF GASOLINE AND SPRING INTO ACTION WHEN NEEDED.
RADIO STATIONS HAVE TO HAVE THE SAME KIND OF HORSES, DON'T THEY, UNCLE WALT?
YES, BROADCASTERS SHOOT THOUSANDS OF THEM INTO THE AIR — THEY SCATTER AND BRING OUR RADIO PROGRAMS.
I'LL BET THAT'S WHY THERE AREN'T WITCHES ANY MORE.
THAT'S EXACTLY WHY. ALONG THE POWER LINES MILLIONS OF ELECTRIC HORSES RUSH WITH THE SPEED OF LIGHT TO DO THE COUNTRY'S WORK.
CORKY, WHY DON'T YOU GO TO SLEEP?
I DON'T WANT TO. I'M AFRAID I'LL HAVE A LOT OF 'LECTRIC NIGHT MARES.



Little Orphan Annie
IF ONLY I CAN MAKE A LITTLE MONEY, TO-DAY- EVEN A QUARTER-
POOR ANNIE, LYING THERE SUFFERING- AND WE HAVEN'T A PENNY- OH, IF PEOPLE WOULD ONLY BE GENEROUS TO-DAY-
NO ONE CARES FOR MY POOR SCRAPING- IT WAS ANNIE'S VOICE THEY LOVED- AND MR. CHIZZLER HAS DESERTED US- THERE CAN BE NO DOUBT OF IT. NOW-
THERE'S THE OLD FOSSIL, NOW- HUMPH- HE'S NO GOOD TO ME- ANNIE MUST BE STILL SICK IN BED, OR SHE'D BE WITH HIM- WISH I KNEW HOW SOON SHE'D BE WELL-
BUT I CAN WAIT- THEY'LL NOT KNOW I'M WATCHING- BUT IF SHE SHOULD RECOVER HER VOICE, I'D BE A SAP TO LET HER GET AWAY-
WELL, I STILL HAVE THREE THOUSAND- LUCKY I DIDN'T GIVE THEM ANY MORE THAN I DID, OR WHERE WOULD I BE, NOW? WHY DID THE LITTLE DUMMY HAVE TO GET SICK? OH, WELL- SOMETHING MAY TURN UP-POOR "UNCLE" DAN- HE'S SO WORRIED ABOUT ME- HE'S TRYING SO HARD- GEE, IF I COULD ONLY SING A LITTLE, JUST TO HELP HIM- BUT HOW MY THROAT HURTS-
OH, WHO ARE YOU?
ME? I'M YOUR NEIGHBOR IN THE NEXT ROOM- SOME CALL ME "GOLD BRICK JACK"- JUST DROPPED IN TO SAY HOWDY- I HOPE YOU FEEL BETTER TO-DAY-
AH, THERE, LANDLORD- WHY THE HASTE TO DISTURB A LADY'S SOLITUDE?
LEMME BY! THAT KID IS SICK- IT MIGHT BE CATCHIN'- THEY'RE BACK IN THEIR RENT, ANYWAY- I'VE GIVE 'EM NOTICE- I'M GOIN' TO RUN 'EM OUT O' MY HOUSE- I GOT MY RIGHTS-
RIGHTS? SOME PEOPLE SHOULD HAVE NO RIGHTS- HERE IS THE RENT ON THAT ROOM, UP TO A WEEK IN ADVANCE- NOW GO, AND SIN NO MORE-
HA! MY RENT MONEY- SURE- ANYTHING YOU SAY-
WELL, THAT BROKE ME- LUCK'S BEEN BAD LATELY, FOR ME- WHAT AN UNWHOLESOME CROOK THAT CHIZZLER IS, TO PICK ON THOSE TWO- MAYBE I'VE PULLED SOME RAW DEALS IN MY TIME-
BUT I NEVER STOOPED TO CHEAT BLIND MEN AND ORPHANS- WELL, "GOLD BRICK" JACK- IT'S UP TO YOU TO DO SOME THING, TO HELP THOSE TWO-

DICK TRACY
by CHESTER GOULD
WELL, BIG BOY, THE FLAMES ARE STARTING TO LICK THE EAVES — IT WON'T BE LONG NOW!
SO THAT GANG THOUGHT THEY COULD DROWN ME, EH — THROWING ME OFF THAT BRIDGE? WELL, I'LL SHOW 'EM! I WONDER WHERE THEY TOOK MISS TESS AND WHERE THEY'VE GOT TRACY?
OH! OH! I SMELL SMOKE! AND WHAT'S THAT? FIRE! A BIG FIRE TOO!
WHILE INSIDE THE BURNING SHACK
BUT WHY MUST THEY DO THIS TO US — MY DARLING?
BE PATIENT — TESS... THERE IS A WAY OUT. I'LL GET FREE IN A MINUTE!
BUT, BIG BOY, DON'T YOU THINK IT'S RISKY STICKING AROUND HERE TO WATCH THAT SHACK BURN?
RISKY? HAH! WHAT DO YOU THINK I SHOT MY WAY OUT OF THE PEN AND CAME OUT HERE FOR? WHY TO BE ON HAND AND SEE WITH MY OWN EYES — THAT THAT DETECTIVE GETS WHAT'S COMING TO HIM! I WON'T BUDGE TILL HE'S ASHES!
WELL YOU WON'T HAVE TO WAIT LONG, CHIEF. THE SHACK'S ABOUT DONE FOR... THE ROOF'LL TUMBLE IN ANY MINUTE.
HELP — HELP!
THAT SOUNDS LIKE TRACY'S VOICE!
JUNIOR!
KID! YOU SHOULDN'T HAVE RISKED YOUR LIFE IN HERE...
THERE! THE LAST KNOT'S UNTIED! LOOK! SHE'S FAINTED!
SHE'S OVERCOME FROM THE SMOKE — QUICK! GIVE ME A HAND — THEN TEAR OUT THAT DOOR.
IT'S ALL RIGHT, TESS... WE'LL BE OUT OF HERE IN A SECOND.
COME ON! THIS PLACE IS READY TO CAVE IN!
HEY, CHIEF — LOOK! THERE'S SOMEONE MOVING AROUND DOWN THERE! THEY'RE FREE!
COME ON — LET'S GO SEE.
CRASH!
HEY, TRACY!
JUNIOR! GREAT SCOTT — HE'S TRAPPED!

GEE WHIZ, NOW WHAT'LL I TELL TH' FOLKS WHEN I GET HOME, FOR BEIN' SO LATE??
LET'S SEE NOW - I COULD TELL 'EM THAT I STOPPED TO WATCH SOME WORKMEN!! NOPE, THAT'S NO GOOD - THOSE FELLERS DON'T WORK AT NIGHT!! GOSH, I WISH'T I WAS GOOD AT MAKIN' EXCUSES!!
HELLO, PERRY!! MY, MY, WHAT IS A YOUNG BOY LIKE YOU DOING OUT SO LATE IN THE EVENING??
WINDY WILLY!! YOU'RE JUST TH' GUY I WANNA SEE!!
LISSEN, I GOT PLAYIN' WITH TH' FELLERS, WINDY, AN' IT GOT LATE AN' NOW I'M AFRAID TO GO HOME!! AN' I DON'T KNOW ONE GOOD EXCUSE I CAN GIVE 'EM FOR BEIN' SO LATE!!
IS THAT ALL?? I'M FULL OF EXCUSES - LET ME GO HOME WITH YOU, AN' I'LL GIVE 'EM TH' EXCUSES!!
SO YOU FINALLY CAME HOME, YOUNG MAN! WHAT HAVE YOU GOT TO SAY FOR YOURSELF FOR MARCHING IN AT THIS HOUR?
P'SST!! GO ON, TELL HIM SOMETHING, WINDY!!
AHEM, ER-
IT'S NOT REALLY PERRY'S FAULT FOR BEIN' LATE, MR. WINKLE! WHY, HE WOULD'A BEEN HOME LONG AGO IF IT WASN'T FOR TH' STOLEN JEWELS FROM TH' MYSTIC CAVE OF CANCHOO!!
WHAT STOLEN JOOLS? AN' WHAT MYSTIC CAVE??
DON'TCHA UNDERSTAND? PERRY WAS ON HIS WAY HOME T'DAY WHEN HE FOUND YOO CHOO TU'S DIAMOND DAGGER IN TH' STREET! AS HE PICKED IT UP, TH' CHINESE DOCTOR WAS RIGHT BEHIND HIM, AN' CHASED HIM OVER TO TH' HIDDEN ISLAND IN BUCK'S ROCKET SHIP!!

THE MONDAY AFTERNOON BRIDGE CLUB
YOU CAN'T BELONG IF YOUR LAUNDRY SOAP IS WRONG!
HOW POLLY WON THE PRIZE BY GETTING WASHDAY-WISE
WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH POLLY PERRY? SHE HASN'T TURNED UP A SINGLE MONDAY IN MONTHS!
MY DEAR, SHE'S LOOKING TERRIBLY FADED AND WORN THESE DAYS — MORE LIKE FRED'S MOTHER THAN HIS WIFE.
SHE SAYS SHE CAN'T GO ANYWHERE ON MONDAYS — HER WASH TAKES SO LONG AND DOES HER UP SO.
MEANWHILE
HOW CAN YOU GET THINGS SO DIRTY, JANE, DEAR! YOU MAKE MOTHER SCRUB AND RUB UNTIL HER BACK'S BREAKING!
DON'T CRY, MAMA. I WON'T DO IT AGAIN.
EDNA, I'M A WRECK EVERY TIME I DO THE WASH! I DIDN'T GET THROUGH TILL HALF AN HOUR AGO, AND I HAVEN'T STRENGTH ENOUGH TO GET DINNER.
BUT IT'S SO UNNECESSARY, POLLY! I DID A BIG WASH BY 11 THIS MORNING, PLAYED BRIDGE ALL AFTERNOON, AND FEEL FRESH AS A DAISY. DO YOU REALLY STILL SCRUB CLOTHES?
OF COURSE I SCRUB THE CLOTHES! HOW ELSE CAN I GET THEM CLEAN? I USE THE BEST SOAP I KNOW OF — BUT I STILL HAVE TO SCRUB FRED'S SHIRTS AND JANE'S DIRTY FROCKS.
BUT DARLING, WHY DON'T YOU USE OXYDOL? IT'S SILLY TO DO ALL THAT BACK-BREAKING SCRUBBING WHEN YOU CAN SOAK THE DIRT OUT IN 15 MINUTES.
SO YOU'RE CHANGING TO OXYDOL TOO, MRS. PERRY. YOU'D BE SURPRISED HOW MANY OF MY CUSTOMERS HAVE TAKEN IT UP SINCE PROCTER AND GAMBLE INTRODUCED IT.
MRS. FOSTER TELLS ME OXYDOL WON'T FADE ANYTHING THAT'S SAFE IN PLAIN WATER, EITHER.
GROCERIES
NEXT WASHDAY
WELL I DECLARE! JUST LOOK AT THOSE SUDS! EDNA WAS CERTAINLY RIGHT. LOOK, JANE! AREN'T THEY LOVELY AND THICK, THOUGH?
LOOKS LIKE WHIPPED CREAM, MAMA.
WELL, THEY'VE SOAKED FOR 15 MINUTES — NOW LET'S SEE. WHY, THEY'RE AS CLEAN AS CAN BE! THERE'S NOT A SPOT THAT NEEDS SCRUBBING!
GOODY! NOW YOU WON'T SCOLD ME WHEN I GET THINGS DIRTY!
WHAT A LOVELY, SPARKLING WASH, POLLY! DIDN'T I TELL YOU OXYDOL WOULD WASH THINGS WHITER WITHOUT ANY SCRUBBING?
I NEVER KNEW ANYTHING LIKE IT, EDNA. I HAD THAT LINE OUT BEFORE NOON. YET JUST SEE HOW WHITE THE WHITE THINGS ARE! AND JANE'S COLORED FROCKS LOOK JUST AS BRIGHT AS NEW. COME ON! I'M READY TO GO!
SHE'S HER OLD LIVELY SELF AGAIN!
YOU WIN THE PRIZE, POLLY! YOU PLAYED WONDERFUL BRIDGE!
FOUR PACKAGES OF OXYDOL! THAT PROVES YOU WANT ME BACK — BECAUSE IF IT WERENT FOR OXYDOL, I'D STILL BE AT HOME, BENDING OVER A WASHBOARD THIS VERY MINUTE!
SHE LOOKS SO PRETTY AND SMART WHEN SHE'S NOT TIRED.

IT DOES ME GOOD TO SEE YOU SO FULL OF PEP ON MONDAY NIGHT, POLLY. YOU LOOK AS SWEET AND FRESH AS THE DAY I FIRST MET YOU!
WELL DARLING, YOU CAN THANK EDNA. SHE TOLD ME ABOUT OXYDOL — AND OXYDOL MAKES WASHING CLOTHES SO EASY AND QUICK THAT NO WOMAN HAS ANY BUSINESS WEARING HERSELF OUT ON WASHDAY ANYMORE.

Amazing New Laundry Soap Discovery

Soaks Clothes Clean in 15 Minutes . . . No Boiling . . . No Hard Rubbing . . . Yet Clothes Come 4 to 5 Shades Whiter Than By Any Other Method

NRA
WE DO OUR PART

HERE is a new scientific soap development that has already revolutionized washdays in more than a million homes. A creation so utterly amazing that women everywhere are asking and exclaiming, "Will the wonders of science never cease?"

For—up to now—women believed that everything science could possibly accomplish to make washdays easier and clothes whiter, had already been done. But today are finding that they were wrong.

They believed they had the fastest way already. And then found that even the fastest soap that science had hitherto devised was slow, compared to this new invention.

So, is it any wonder that millions are now quitting their former favorites—old-style "granulated soaps," bars and flakes—for this utterly new and different kind of soap!

A Remarkable Invention

This new and improved soap invention is called OXYDOL. And it does these things. Things no other soap can do or has ever done before:—

First: It cuts washing time 25% to 40%. And thus saves hours of labor.

Second: It works utterly without back-breaking rubbing, without scrubbing. For it works by dissolving dirt. You can throw your washboard away.

Third: It makes clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter (by scientific Tintometer test) than old ways. Whitens them so boiling is unnecessary. Yet it cannot fade or injure fabric or color.

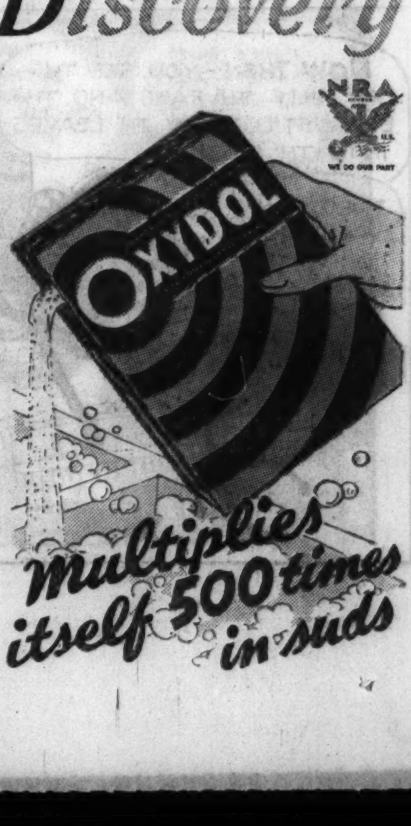
Fourth: It is as kind to the hands (and to clothes) as the finest toilet soap. For it is created by America's most famous soap makers—the makers of gentle "Ivory."

This remarkable soap invention works an entirely different way. First there are special mild elements to soak out dirt—dissolve it—take it out like magic. These are blended with particular elements to protect colors against fade. Then these improved soap elements are scientifically combined with specific agents to soften hardest water. Thus combining in one package the effect of both water-softener AND soap!

Thick, Rich Suds Instantly

Thus OXYDOL gives abundant suds almost instantly. Suds rich like whipped cream—that "stand up" in any kind of water. Once you try it—you'll never go back to rubbing and scrubbing with wasteful, old-style soaps again.

See for yourself what OXYDOL is and does. It will change all ideas you ever had about washing. About whiter washes. About easier washdays. Get OXYDOL at any grocer's—today! Procter & Gamble.



OXYDOL
Multiplies itself 500 times in suds

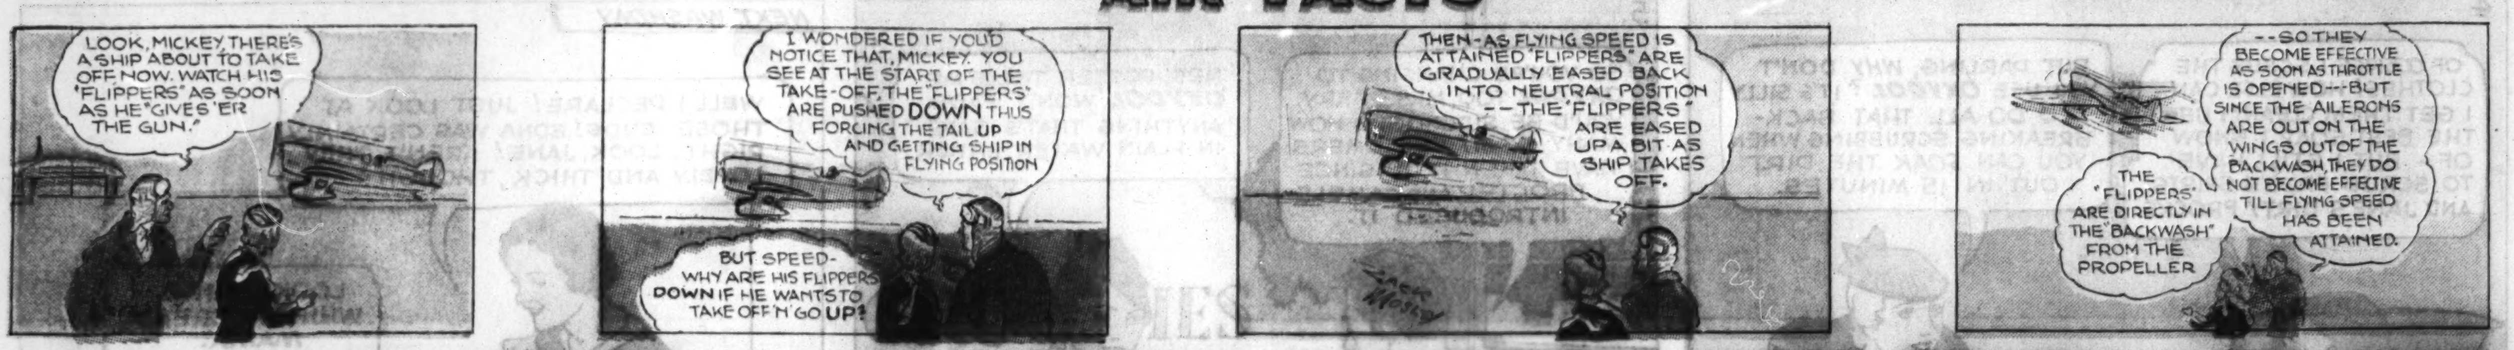
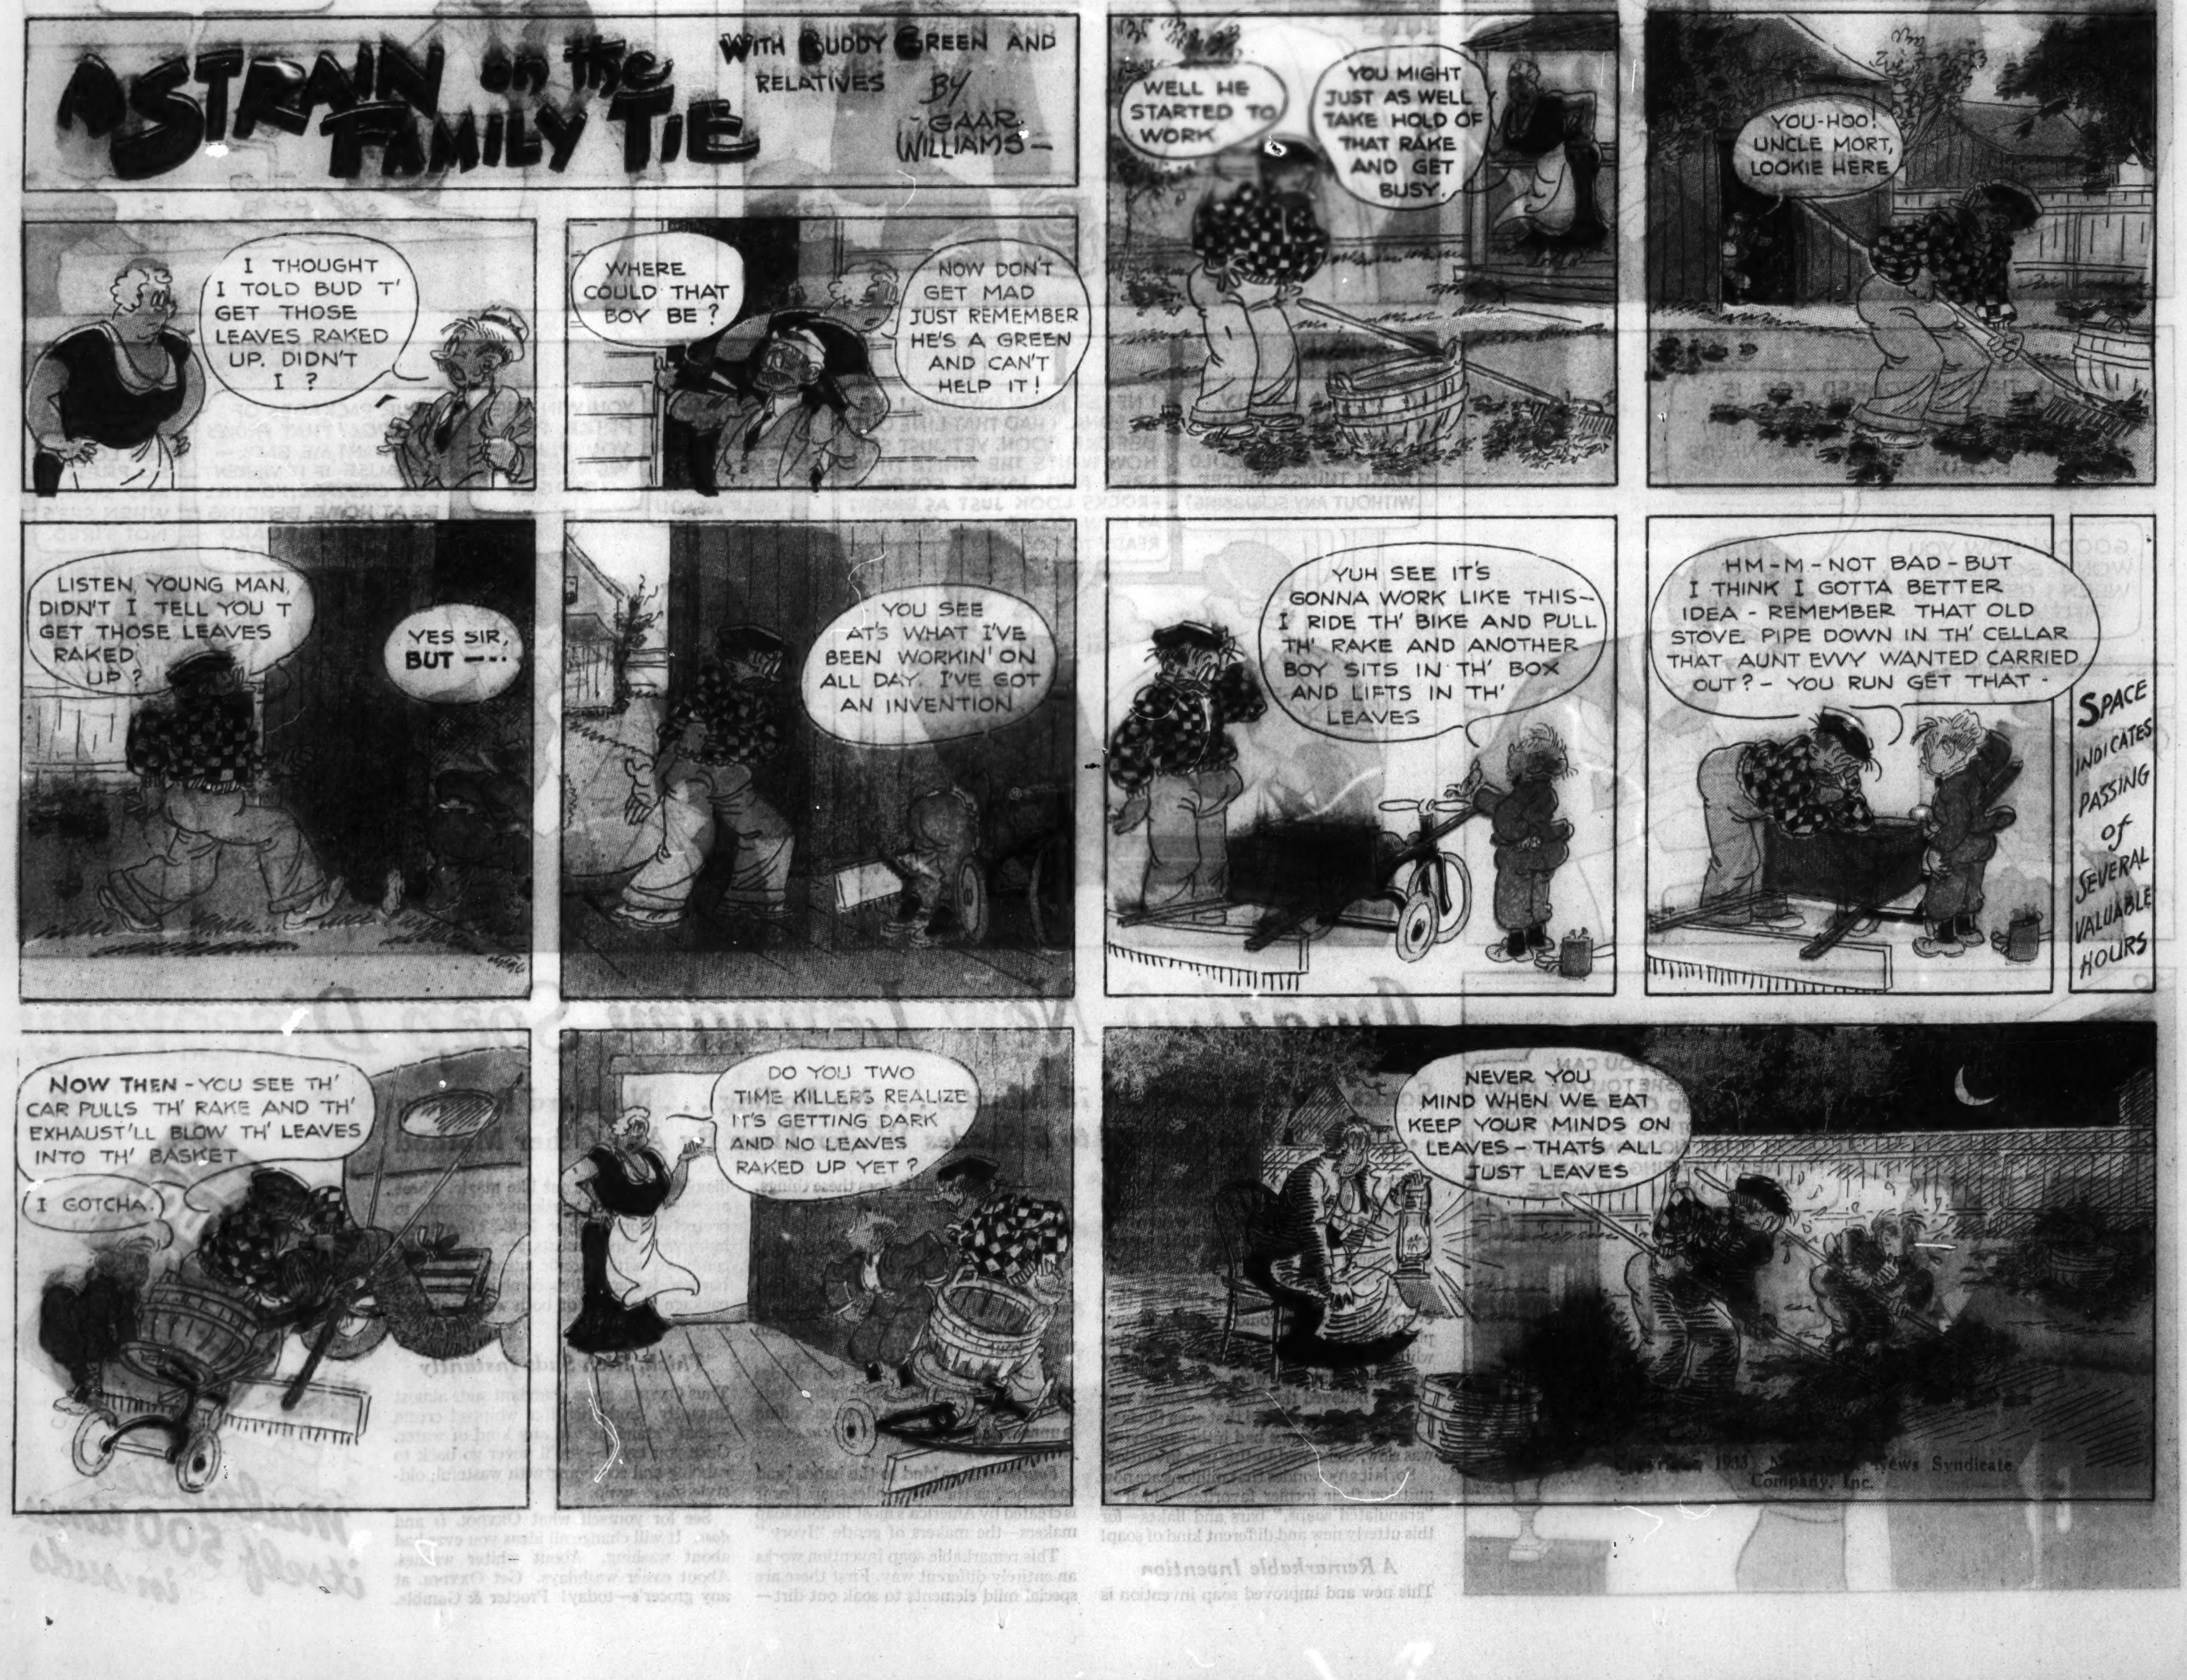
BOY! THE WAY I'M PILIN' UP THESE SOLO HOURS, IT WON'T BE LONG TILL I CAN GET MY PILOT'S LICENSE.
--GUESS IT'S ABOUT TIME I GOT BACK TO THE AIRPORT.
HI, MACK! THAT SURE WAS SOME SWELL FLYIN' YOU WERE DOIN'! WHEN ARE YOU GOING TO TAKE ME UP? I NEVER RODE IN AN AIRPLANE.
GEE, I WISH I COULD TAKE YOU UP PINFEATHERS, BUT YOU KNOW I HAVEN'T MY PILOT'S LICENSE YET AND STUDENTS AREN'T ALLOWED TO CARRY PASSENGERS.
SAY- I'VE BEEN SEEING YOU AROUND THE AIRPORT AN AWFUL LOT LATELY-WHAT DO YOUR FOLKS SAY ABOUT YOUR BEING OVER HERE SO MUCH?
I HAVEN'T GOT ANY FOLKS- JUST MY BIG SISTER.
OH-- I DIDN'T KNOW THAT, PINFEATHERS. --DO YOU LIVE AROUND HERE SOMEWHERE?
SURE--- DON'T YOU KNOW MY SISTER? SHE OWNS THAT NEW LUNCH ROOM OVER BY THE HANGARS.
BOY, SHE'S GOT IT FIXED UP KEEN TOO - JUST LIKE AN AIRPLANE HANGAR! 'COURSE SHE HASN'T GOT IT FINISHED YET BUT SHE'S GOING TO OPEN UP FOR BUSINESS IN A DAY OR TWO--COME ON OVER AND LOOK AT IT!
SURE-- I'D LIKE TO!
MEANWHILE, MARY IS WORKING HARD AT HER NEW ENTERPRISE.
JUST A FEW MORE DAYS AND I'LL HAVE THIS LITTLE PLACE ALL FINISHED AND I BELIEVE I'LL BE ABLE TO MAKE A RATHER COMFORTABLE LIVING OUT OF IT, TOO. I CERTAINLY HOPE SO ON PINFEATHER'S ACCOUNT.
MAYBE I'M TAKING A PRETTY BIG CHANCE--- INVESTING MY LAST CENT IN THIS BUSINESS, BUT I KNOW I'LL MAKF A SUCCESS OF IT---
--ON THE SMALL SALARY I WAS MAKING I COULD NEVER HAVE BEEN ABLE TO GIVE PINFEATHERS THE ADVANTAGES A BOY SHOULD HAVE. HE'S A GRAND LITTLE KID ALL RIGHT! SAY--I WONDER WHERE HE IS NOW?
I NEVER SAW A BOY SO HARD TO KEEP TRACK OF!
OH-- I'VE BEEN WONDERING WHERE YOU WERE-
HEY, SIS! I'VE BROUGHT A AVIATOR FRIEND OF MINE AROUND TO SEE OUR PLACE!
HOW DO YOU DO? I'VE HEARD A LOT ABOUT YOU FROM PINFEATHERS!
ER-AH-- HOW-- ER- PLEASED TO KNOW YOU!
MACK-- I WANT YA TO MEET MY SISTER, MARY-
MARY'S LUNCH HANGAR
YEAH-- SHE SURE IS A SWELL GIRL! YOU OUGHTA BE PROUD OF A PRETTY SISTER LIKE THAT!
WELL-- WHAT DO YOU THINK OF OUR PLACE? ISN'T IT A SWELL RESTAURANT?
BY THE WAY, PINFEATHERS-- THAT AIRPLANE RIDE YOU WERE ASKING ABOUT--OF COURSE I CAN'T TAKE YOU UP MYSELF- BUT I BELIEVE I COULD GET STEVE, THE INSTRUCTOR, TO TAKE YOU UP!
BOY OH BOY! WILL YOU REALLY? COME ON--LET'S GO FIND HIM!
TO BE CONTINUED NEXT WEEK

AIR FACTS



LOOK, MICKEY, THERE'S A SHIP ABOUT TO TAKE OFF NOW. WATCH HIS 'FLIPPERS' AS SOON AS HE 'GIVES 'ER THE GUN.'
I WONDERED IF YOU'D NOTICE THAT, MICKEY. YOU SEE AT THE START OF THE TAKE-OFF, THE 'FLIPPERS' ARE PUSHED DOWN THUS FORCING THE TAIL UP AND GETTING SHIP IN FLYING POSITION
BUT SPEED- WHY ARE HIS FLIPPERS DOWN IF HE WANTS TO TAKE OFF 'N GO UP?
THEN-AS FLYING SPEED IS ATTAINED 'FLIPPERS' ARE GRADUALLY EASED BACK INTO NEUTRAL POSITION --THE 'FLIPPERS' ARE EASED UP A BIT AS SHIP TAKES OFF.
JACK MOSLEY
THE 'FLIPPERS' ARE DIRECTLY IN THE 'BACKWASH' FROM THE PROPELLER
--SO THEY BECOME EFFECTIVE AS SOON AS THROTTLE IS OPENED--BUT SINCE THE AILERONS ARE OUT ON THE WINGS OUT OF THE BACKWASH, THEY DO NOT BECOME EFFECTIVE TILL FLYING SPEED HAS BEEN ATTAINED.



A STRAIN ON THE FAMILY TIE
WITH BUDDY GREEN AND RELATIVES
BY -GAAR WILLIAMS-
WELL HE STARTED TO WORK
YOU MIGHT JUST AS WELL TAKE HOLD OF THAT RAKE AND GET BUSY.
YOU-HOO! UNCLE MORT, LOOKIE HERE
I THOUGHT I TOLD BUD T' GET THOSE LEAVES RAKED UP. DIDN'T I ?
WHERE COULD THAT BOY BE ?
NOW DON'T GET MAD JUST REMEMBER HE'S A GREEN AND CAN'T HELP IT!
LISTEN, YOUNG MAN, DIDN'T I TELL YOU T GET THOSE LEAVES RAKED UP ?
YES SIR, BUT ---
YOU SEE AT'S WHAT I'VE BEEN WORKIN' ON ALL DAY. I'VE GOT AN INVENTION
YUH SEE IT'S GONNA WORK LIKE THIS- I RIDE TH' BIKE AND PULL TH' RAKE AND ANOTHER BOY SITS IN TH' BOX AND LIFTS IN TH' LEAVES
HM-M-NOT BAD-BUT I THINK I GOTTA BETTER IDEA-REMEMBER THAT OLD STOVE PIPE DOWN IN TH' CELLAR THAT AUNT EVVY WANTED CARRIED OUT?- YOU RUN GET THAT-SPACE INDICATES PASSING OF SEVERAL VALUABLE HOURS
NOW THEN-YOU SEE TH' CAR PULLS TH' RAKE AND TH' EXHAUST'LL BLOW TH' LEAVES INTO TH' BASKET
I GOTCHA.
DO YOU TWO TIME KILLERS REALIZE IT'S GETTING DARK AND NO LEAVES RAKED UP YET ?
NEVER YOU MIND WHEN WE EAT KEEP YOUR MINDS ON LEAVES-THAT'S ALL JUST LEAVES

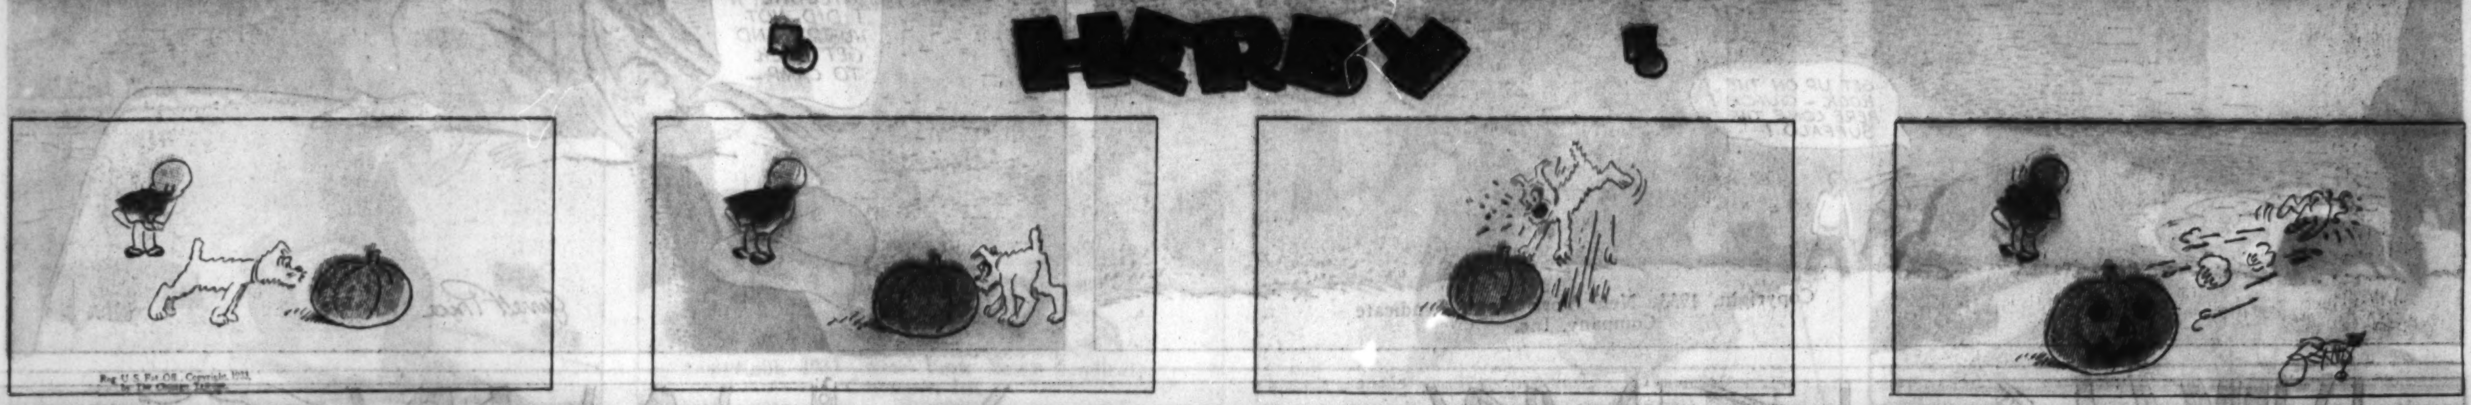
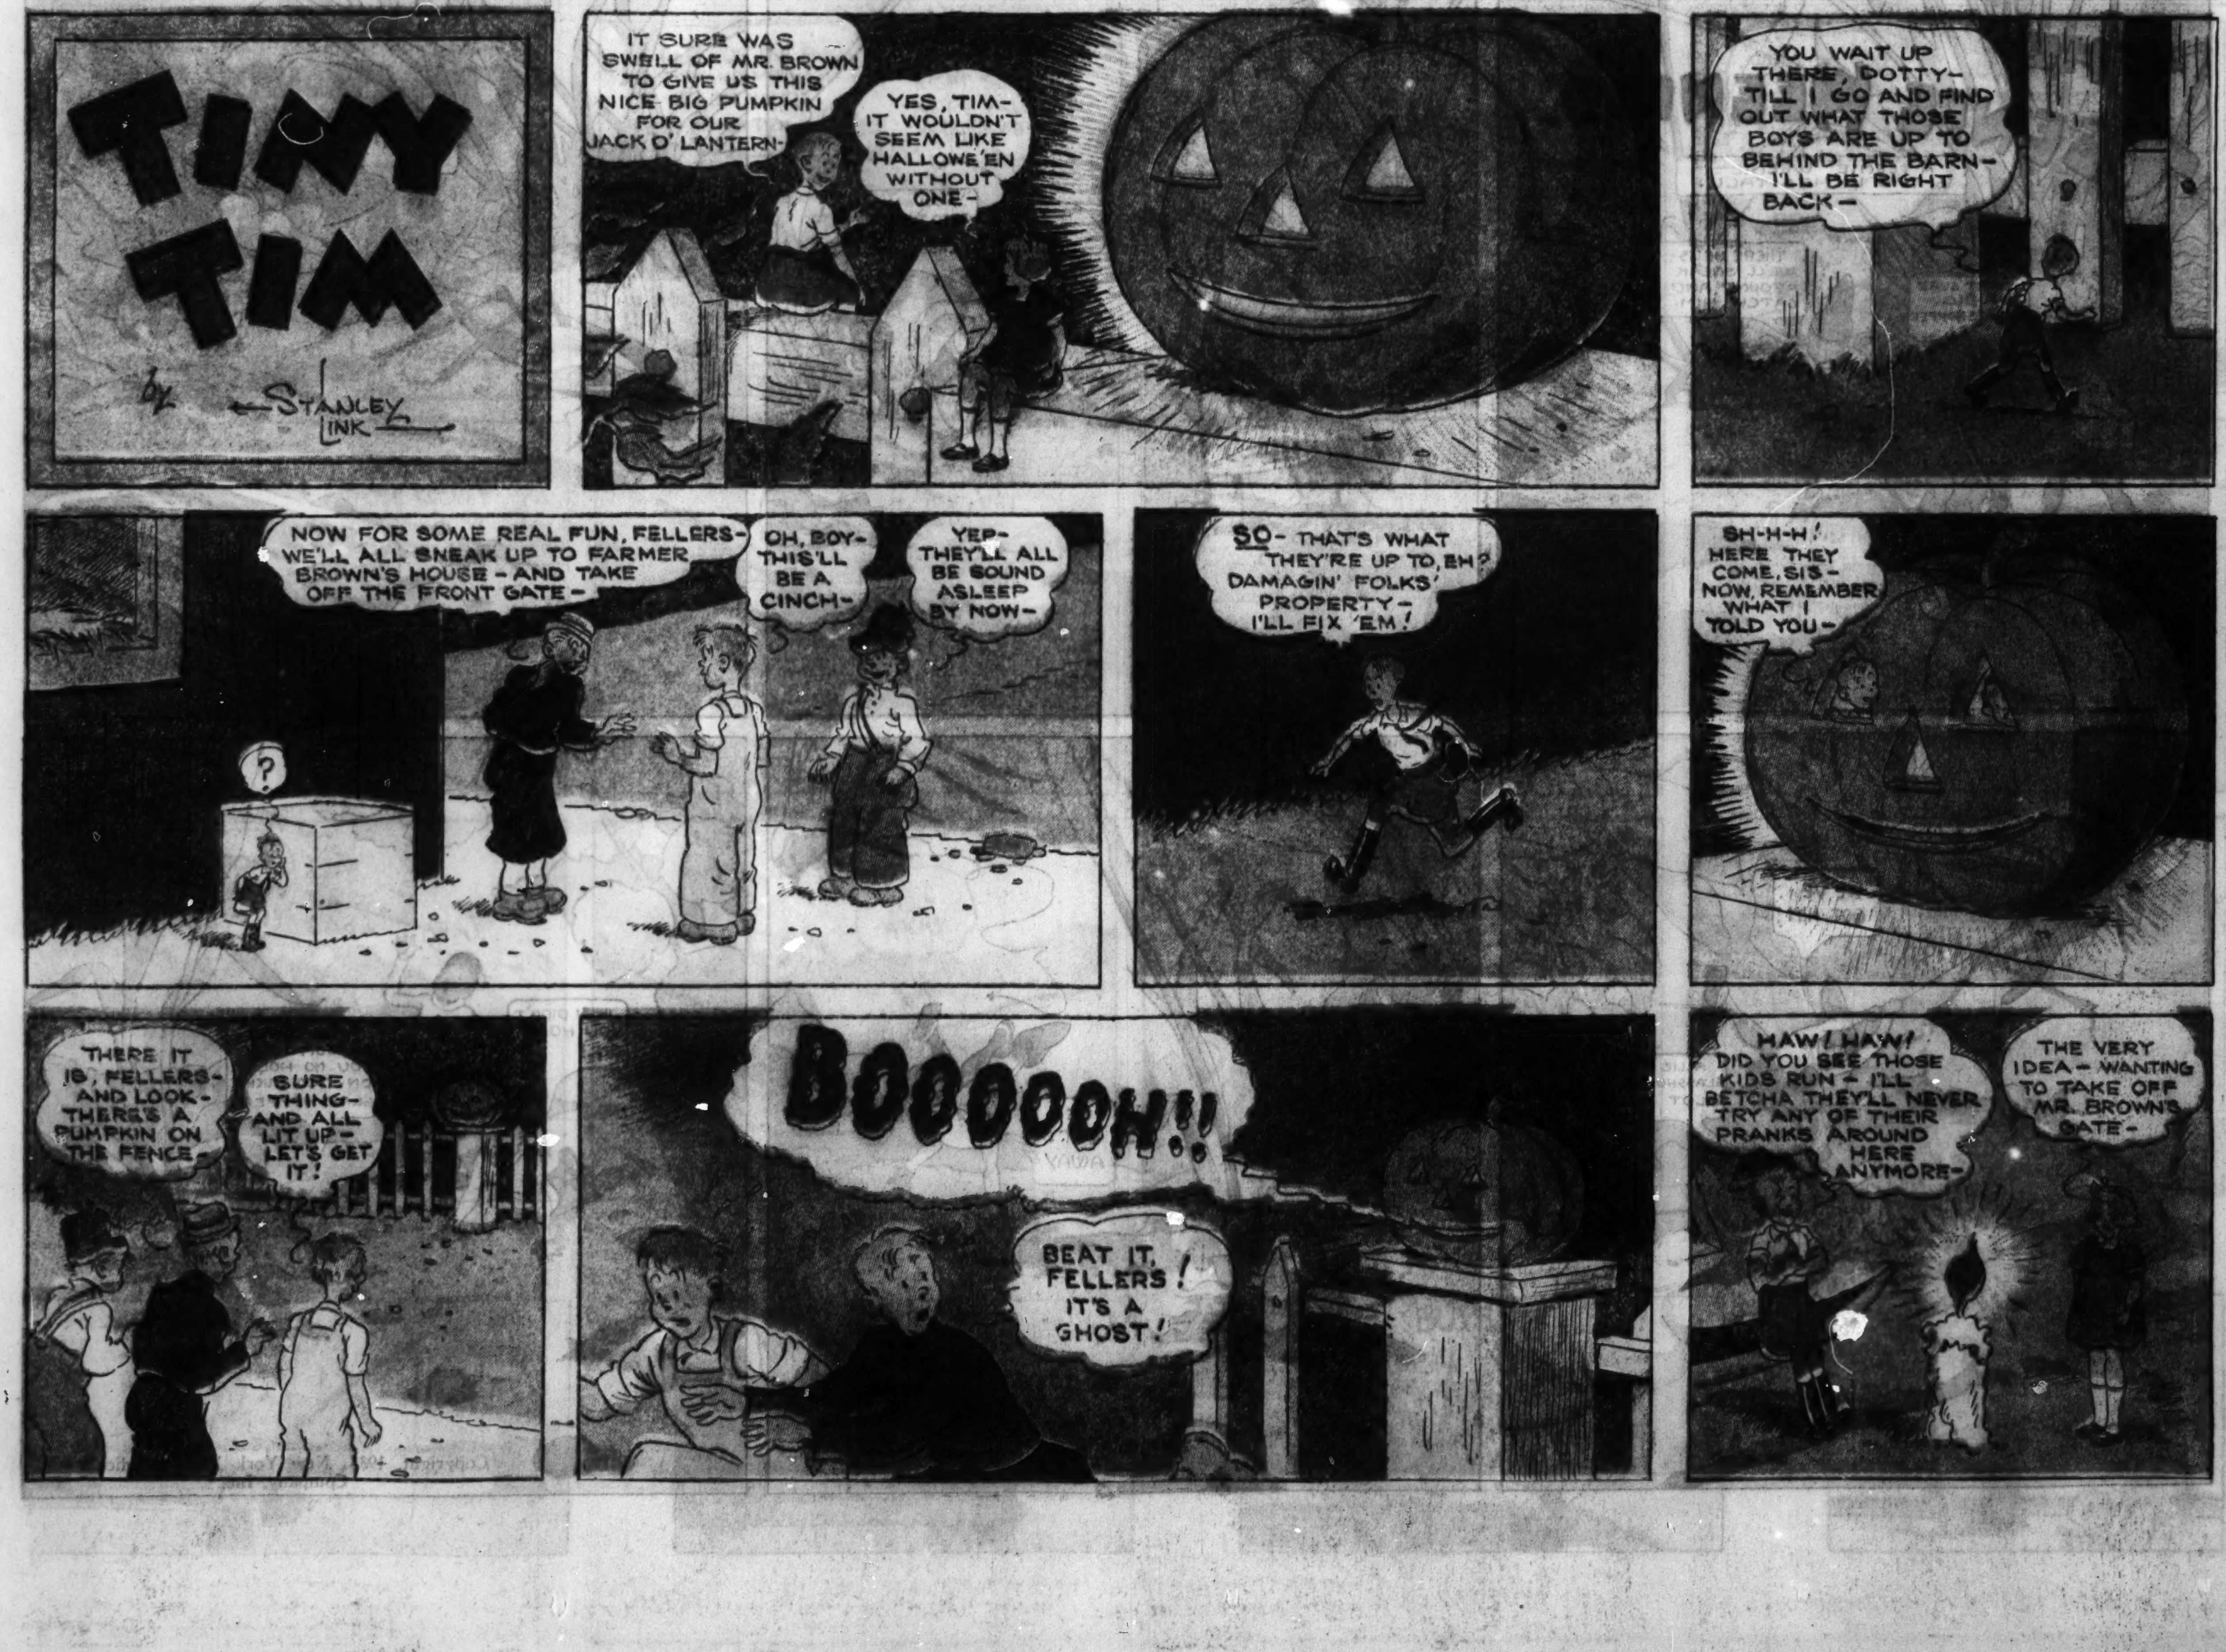
YOO HOO
C'MON. WE'RE GONNA TAKE THE GATES OFF ALL THE FENCES TONITE
WAIT FOR ME
I THINK I'LL GO OUT FOR A WHILE, MA
WELL, THINK AGAIN - YOU'RE NOT !
BUT THE FELLERS ARE WAITIN' FOR ME !
I'M SORRY. NO
AW MA- NOW LISSEN--
WE WANNA PLAY SOME GAMES! THIS IS HALLOWE'EN NIGHT !
IT'LL BE "HOLLER" FOR YOU IF YOU DON'T STOP BOTHERING ME."
GEE, I JUST GOTTA MEET THE GANG - MAYBE I COULD SLIP OUT IF NOBODY HEARS ME--
SO! TRYING TO GET AWAY ARE YOU !
ER-WHO--ME ? NO SIREE! THIS IS A HALLOWE'EN GAME! LIGHT A CANDLE AND LOOK IN TH' MIRROR TO SEE YOUR BEST GIRL !!
THEN I'M YOUR BEST GIRL!
YOU BETCHA!



HERBY



TINY TIM
by STANLEY LINK
IT SURE WAS SWELL OF MR. BROWN TO GIVE US THIS NICE BIG PUMPKIN FOR OUR JACK O' LANTERN-
YES, TIM- IT WOULDN'T SEEM LIKE HALLOWE'EN WITHOUT ONE-
YOU WAIT UP THERE, DOTTY- TILL I GO AND FIND OUT WHAT THOSE BOYS ARE UP TO BEHIND THE BARN- I'LL BE RIGHT BACK-
NOW FOR SOME REAL FUN, FELLERS- WE'LL ALL SNEAK UP TO FARMER BROWN'S HOUSE - AND TAKE OFF THE FRONT GATE -
OH, BOY- THIS'LL BE A CINCH-
YEP- THEY'LL ALL BE SOUND ASLEEP BY NOW-
SO- THAT'S WHAT THEY'RE UP TO, EH? DAMAGIN' FOLKS' PROPERTY - I'LL FIX 'EM!
SH-H-H! HERE THEY COME, SIS- NOW, REMEMBER WHAT I TOLD YOU-
THERE IT IS, FELLERS- AND LOOK- THERE'S A PUMPKIN ON THE FENCE-SURE THING- AND ALL LIT UP- LET'S GET IT!
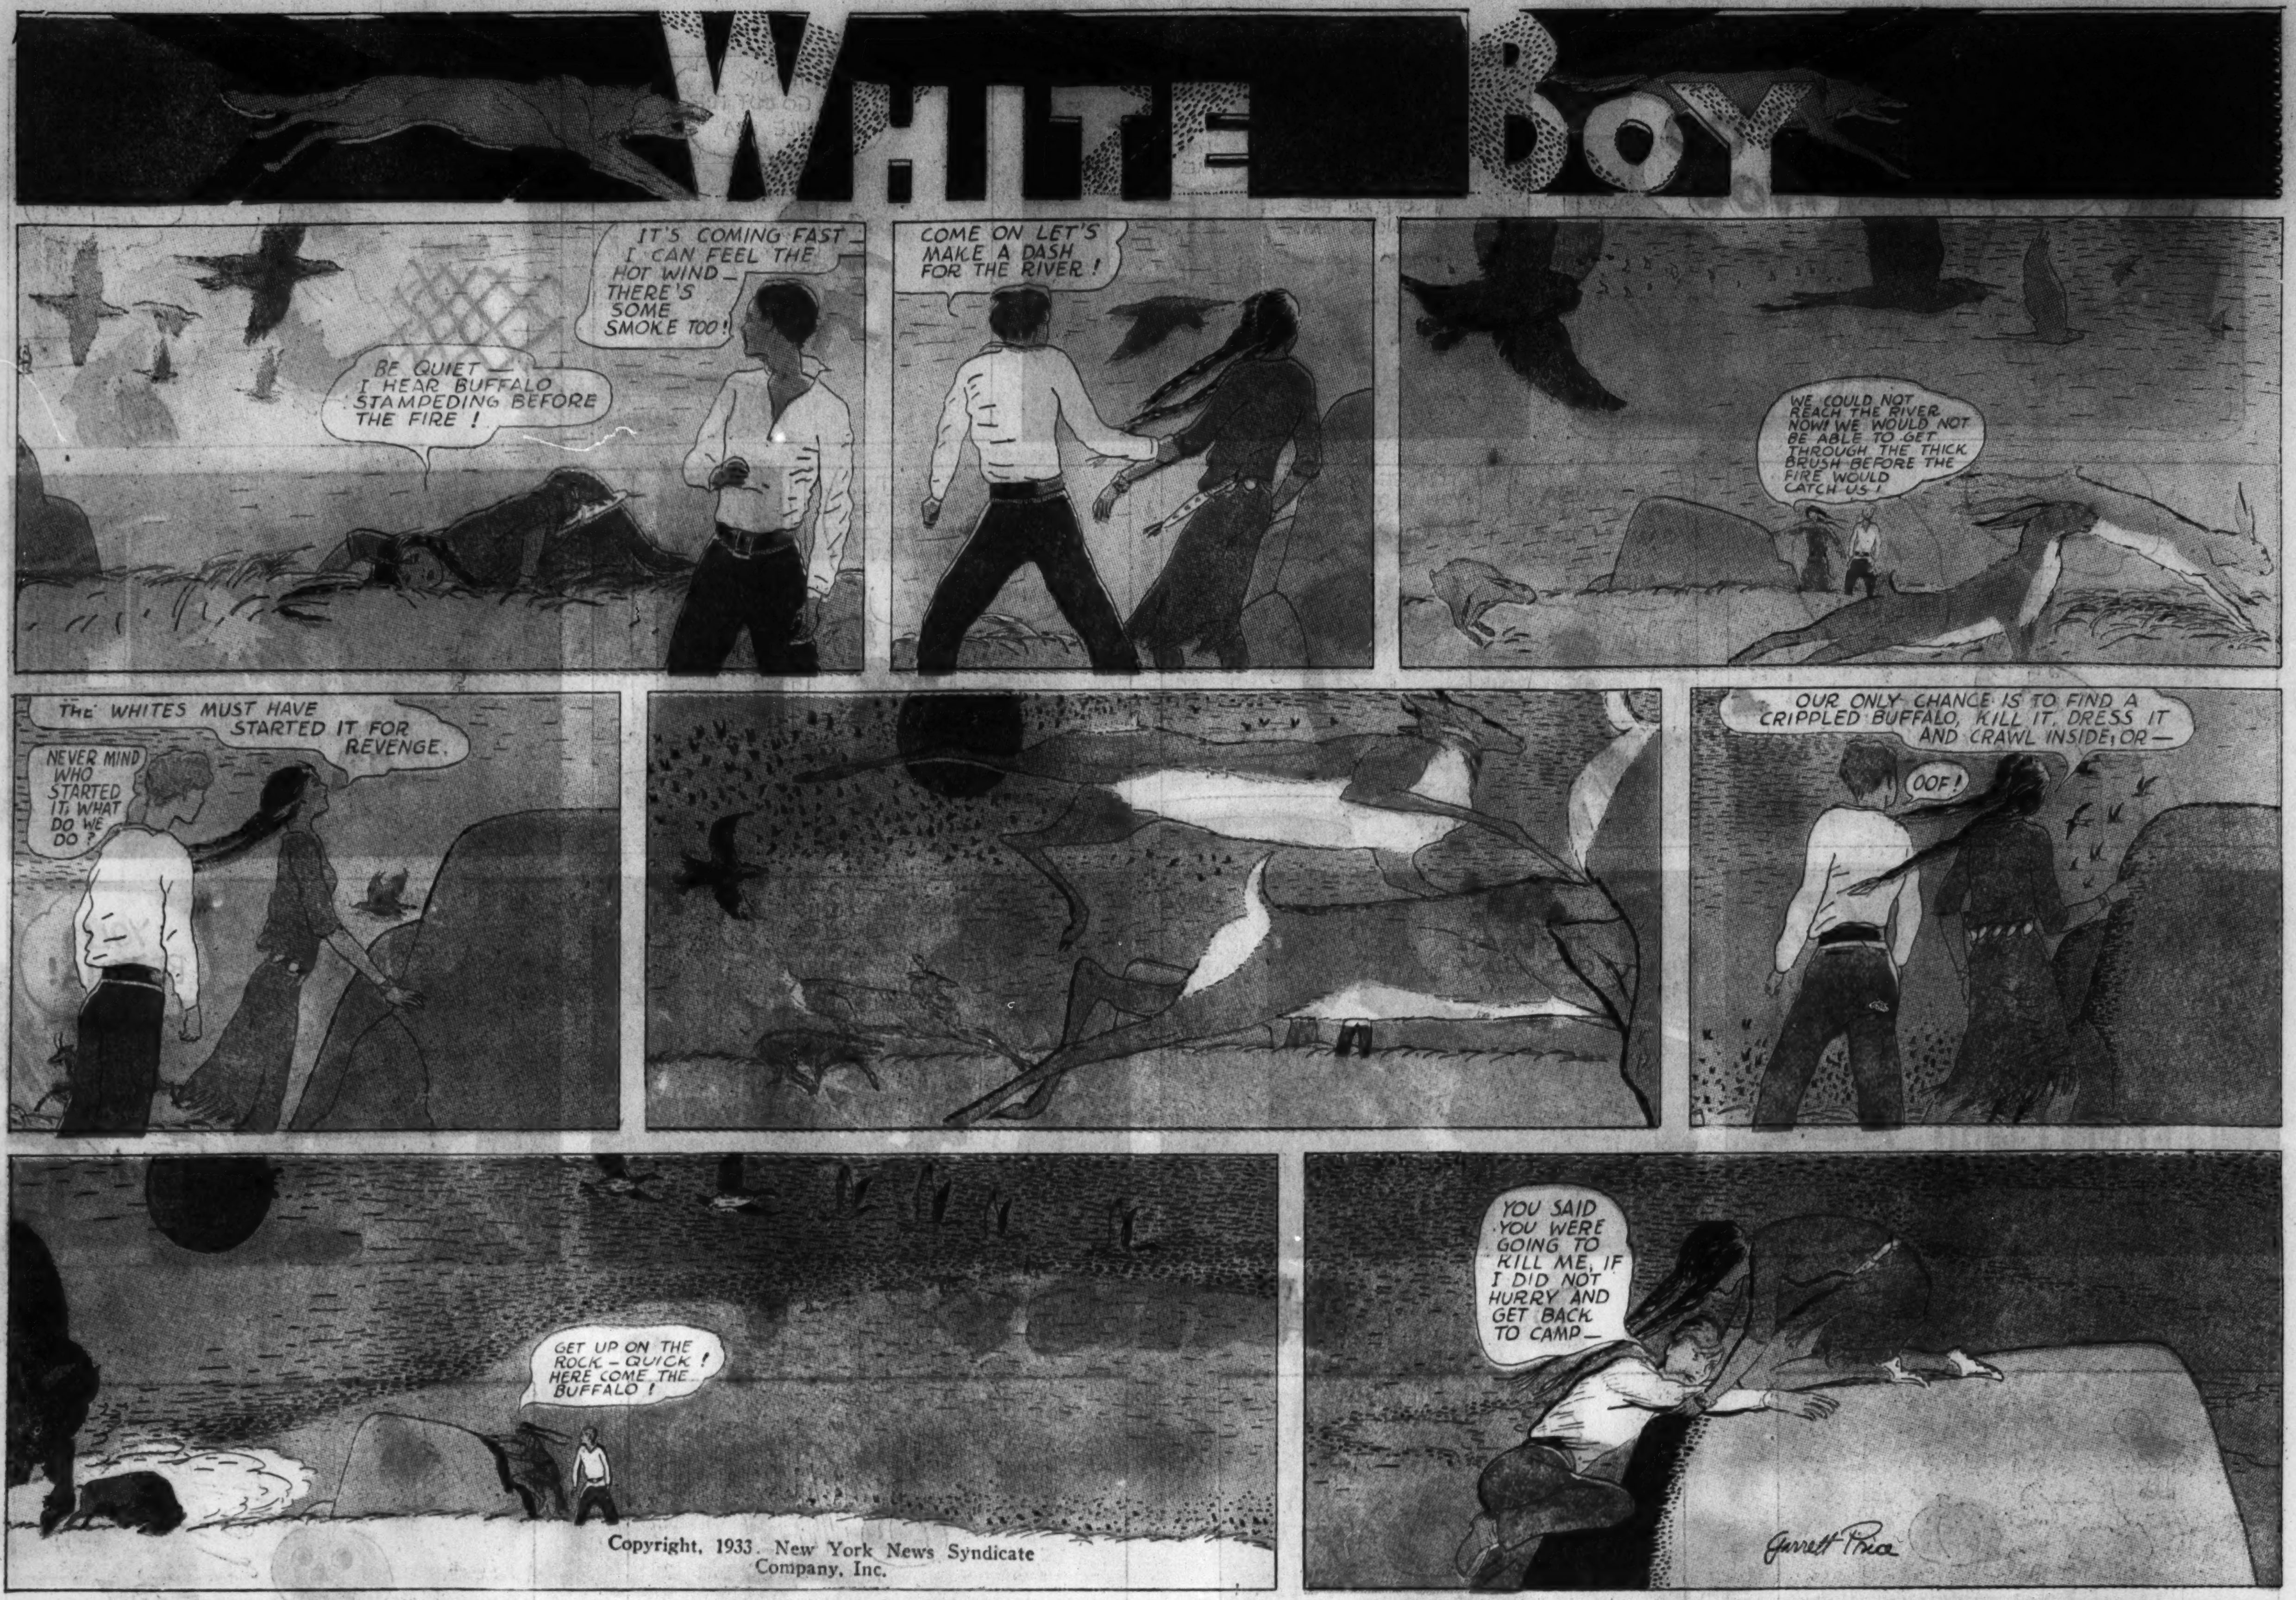
BOOOOOOH!!
BEAT IT, FELLERS! IT'S A GHOST!
HAW! HAW! DID YOU SEE THOSE KIDS RUN - I'LL BETCHA THEY'LL NEVER TRY ANY OF THEIR PRANKS AROUND HERE ANYMORE-
THE VERY IDEA - WANTING TO TAKE OFF MR. BROWN'S GATE-



WHITE BOY
BE QUIET— I HEAR BUFFALO STAMPEDING BEFORE THE FIRE!
IT'S COMING FAST I CAN FEEL THE HOT WIND— THERE'S SOME SMOKE TOO!
COME ON LET'S MAKE A DASH FOR THE RIVER!
WE COULD NOT REACH THE RIVER NOW! WE WOULD NOT BE ABLE TO GET THROUGH THE THICK BRUSH BEFORE THE FIRE WOULD CATCH US!
THE WHITES MUST HAVE STARTED IT FOR REVENGE.
NEVER MIND WHO STARTED IT, WHAT DO WE DO?
OUR ONLY CHANCE IS TO FIND A CRIPPLED BUFFALO, KILL IT, DRESS IT AND CRAWL INSIDE, OR—OOF!
GET UP ON THE ROCK — QUICK! HERE COME THE BUFFALO!
YOU SAID YOU WERE GOING TO KILL ME, IF I DID NOT HURRY AND GET BACK TO CAMP—
Garrett Price

STREAKY
by GUS EDSON
HOW ABOUT A LITTLE SPIN IN THE NEW BOILER, JEANIE?
SORRY, REGGIE - BUT I HAVE A DATE TO GO WALKING WITH STREAKY IDEA!!
WHEN SHE GETS TO THE CORNER, YOU BUMP INTO HER, AND THEN BAWL HER OUT YOU KNOW - GET TOUGH LIKE IT WAS HER FAULT. THEN I'LL COME ALONG AND TAKE A SOCK AT YOU - BUT EASY OF COURSE - YOU FALL DOWN AND MAKE BELIEVE YOU'RE KNOCKED COLD - GET IT?
OK BUT REMEMBER NO HARD HITTING DO YOUR STUFF BONEHEAD
HERE SHE COMES!
OH!!
WHY - WHAT?
WHY DONT YOU LOOK WHERE YOU'RE GOING? SHUT UP!
IT'S A GOOD THING YOU CAME ALONG, STREAKY! THAT BIG BULLY WAS SO FRESH!
WELL I GUESS IT'S TIME FOR ME TO MAKE MY APPEARANCE - REGGIE TO THE RESCUE!
WHATS THE BIG IDEA?!
HEY! WAIT A MINUTE!!
I THOUGHT YOU SAID YOU WERE'NT GOING TO HIT HARD!!
WISE GUY!

by Posen
GEE, POP, IT'S SWELL TO TAKE ME WITH YOU ON YOUR FISHING TRIP - THAT'S ALL RIGHT, SON - - WE'RE PALS - AREN'T WE?
- AND WHAT'S MORE I'M GOING TO MAKE A REAL FISHERMAN OUT OF YOU!
OH BOY - I HOPE I'M GONNA CATCH SOME FISH TODAY
WHAT DO YOU DO WHEN YOU WANT TO CATCH FISH AWFULLY BAD?
WELL, I'LL TELL YOU - - YOU MUST SAY THE MAGIC WORDS "ICKY WICKY" - - THAT'S THE SECRET KNOWN TO ALL GOOD FISHERMEN -
I MUSTN'T FORGET THOSE SECRET WORDS - "ICKY WICKY"
ICKY WICKY
HEH HEH
LOOK, POP! I GOT A FISH!
GEE, "ICKY-WICKY" GETS 'EM ALL RIGHT - - "ICKY WICKY" - - LOOK, POP! ANOTHER ONE!
ICKY WICKY
LOOK, POP!!
HOLY SMOKE! HE'S GETTING 'EM ALL AND I HAVEN'T GOT ANY!

Famous Funnies A Carnival of Comics

Wheatena Tastes Good

MOTHERS: Wheatena is the cereal that is full of the body-building elements that school children need—because bright minds and sturdy, well nourished bodies go together. Ask any teacher. Wheatena is not merely a hot cereal . . . it's the hot . . . brown . . . wheat cereal . . . with the flavor that children and grown-ups like. There is no other cereal like it. Try it . . . cooked just as it says on the package.

CUT–MAIL with Wheatena Package Top

HOP TO IT!

NEVER BEFORE
in the History of Beauty Culture & Barbering

Have shorter hours and guaranteed salaries been specified by government control as it now is in the code of the NRA.

Take advantage of this protection!

MOLER'S short private lesson course qualifies you easily—quickly—actually saves you months of tedious drilling.

Tuition Fees Going Up!
Soon the code of the NRA will prevent beauty and barber schools from charging the public for services rendered. This will greatly increase tuition fees. Now you can learn by Moler's regular course at

Half Rates
but this will soon be eliminated. You must start at once, no time to lose, or make your reservation for the half rate without further delay private lesson course qualifies you with knowledge and skill in half time it formerly took.

REMEMBER MOLER'S

Enroll right now before government control puts these wonderful professions beyond your means.

How to Become a BEAUTY EXPERT

Almost any school can train you to become a mediocre, "ordinary" beauty operator. But if you want to become a genuine EXPERT and earn more money than the average "ordinary" operator, you should investigate the De LEE "university type" of training. Personal instruction under Madame Louise, internationally famous expert, will enable you to qualify for a good paying position in the SHORTEST POSSIBLE TIME.

DeLEE Brings Success

Owners of high class shops recognize DeLEE training as being the best available anywhere at any fee. Consequently, good paying positions in quality shops await DeLEE graduates. The FREE DeLEE employment service will help place you in such a position when you finish your course. If you enroll NOW you will be ready for a position at just the time of year when the demand for operators is greatest. COME IN TODAY. DeLEE is a recognized school, backed by more than $2,000,000 in assets.

Easy Payment Plan

You haven't learned ALL of the facts about beauty culture training until you have visited DeLEE. Do not make the mistake of enrolling elsewhere and then find out too late that you are not getting the best possible training. VISIT DeLEE FIRST. Have a talk with the DeLEE Dean, Miss Ruby Lorrain Stevens, or mail the coupon for the interesting book, "Your Career in Beauty Culture."

MEN

The successful facts that we will present to a few intelligent men suggest the statement that no man who will work hard and become skilled in our business need be in the "Army of Unemployed."

For example: Recent weekly earnings of a few men:
O. K. $124.32; B. C. $119.67; F. L. $154.06.

Three new men with us 4 months, 3 months, and 6 weeks drew the following weekly checks:
$97.50—$91.25—$87.65.

To a lot of people the above facts read like a lot of "Hot Air." If you think so, you are entitled to your opinion; however, we have black and white proof when you come down to investigate.

A BUSINESS OF YOUR OWN!
USE OUR MONEY!
BE YOUR OWN BOSS!

We happen to have a newly invented and patented article that is selling; and we have only a limited number of openings available.

Escape the privations of "hard times" and come down immediately and investigate a live proposition and a money making organization.

NO INVESTMENT.

We pay the rent, light, heat, stenographer etc., place you where the business is, and pay you weekly.

The best trained Specialty Executives available are in Chicago to direct your effort, and—I want YOU to give these men an opportunity to meet you; forget "depression" for a day and look at a startling picture of a prosperous business.

We can only spare time to interview sincere men; each man who can furnish proper references will get a personal interview—this is no ordinary ad and may be your great opportunity. Make up your mind to positively investigate at

MEN

THIS COMPANY WILL TAKE ON 9 ADDITIONAL MEN WHO NEED EMPLOYMENT AND WHO WISH TO LEARN IF THEY CAN DO SPECIALTY SALES WORK. THERE WILL BE NO CHARGE FOR EQUIPMENT, AND NO DEPOSITS REQUIRED. WE WILL TRAIN ALL SUCH MEN FREE—THERE IS NO EXPENSE. THOSE WHO CAN QUALIFY CAN MAKE FROM $100 TO $200 BY DEC. 1.

Our requirements of you are that you be honest, of good reputation, active, alert, permanently settled in Chicago or suburbs, and willing to learn and do the following things:

To learn [as taught] how to make a clean and convincing explanation of why you have approached your prospect.

To learn [as taught] how to show the product so it will reveal the absolute need for it and the necessity of buying it.

To learn [as taught] how to persuade some one to do that which positively ought to be done.

To be honest in your own thought, so that you are entitled to confidence.

To work hard every day to make a genuine success in return for the privilege of a genuine opportunity in a permanent position with good people, who will deeply interest themselves in helping you to get started and to get along.

This is a straightforward offer of sincere intent to worthy men who are in need of good, substantial positions. Please do not apply for these positions unless you feel you can meet these requirements. Applicants will be personally interviewed Monday morning, Oct. 30, 9 to 1, Room 910, at 222 N. Wells-st.

GARY BRANCH OF LARGE EASTern manufacturers will interview several men to fill vacancies in that field. This is an opportunity for real aggressive men who are not satisfied to stay in a "rut." We are merchandising a new invention that is going over bigger than "radio."

APPLY WEDNESDAY ONLY BETWEEN 9 and 12, HOTEL GARY, GARY, INDIANA. ASK FOR MR. POWERS.

THE FAIR

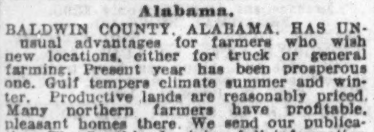
REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.



Alabama.

BALDWIN COUNTY, ALABAMA, HAS UNusual advantages for farmers who wish new locations, either for truck or general farming. Present year has been prosperous one. Gulf tempers climate summer and winter. Productive lands are reasonably priced. Many northern farmers have profitable, pleasant homes there. We send our publication, The Southland, giving full information free on request. E. J. Hoddy, General Development Agent, Dept. B-92, L. & N. Railroad, Louisville, Ky.

California.

IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA SMALL farm homes near established communities yield good income; ideal climate for fruit and poultry; moderate priced lands; easy terms; paved roads and good schools. Only ten years ago life on the farm meant an almost primitive existence. Today wide spread distribution of modern conveniences make pleasant and profitable the hours that used to be tedious and difficult. The Santa Fe railway has no land to sell, but offers free information service to help you get right location. Low fares to California. Write for illustrated Southern California folder and our farm paper "The Earth" free for six months. C. L. SEAGRAVES, General Colonization Agent, Santa Fe Railway, 900A Railway Exchange, Chicago.

Colorado.

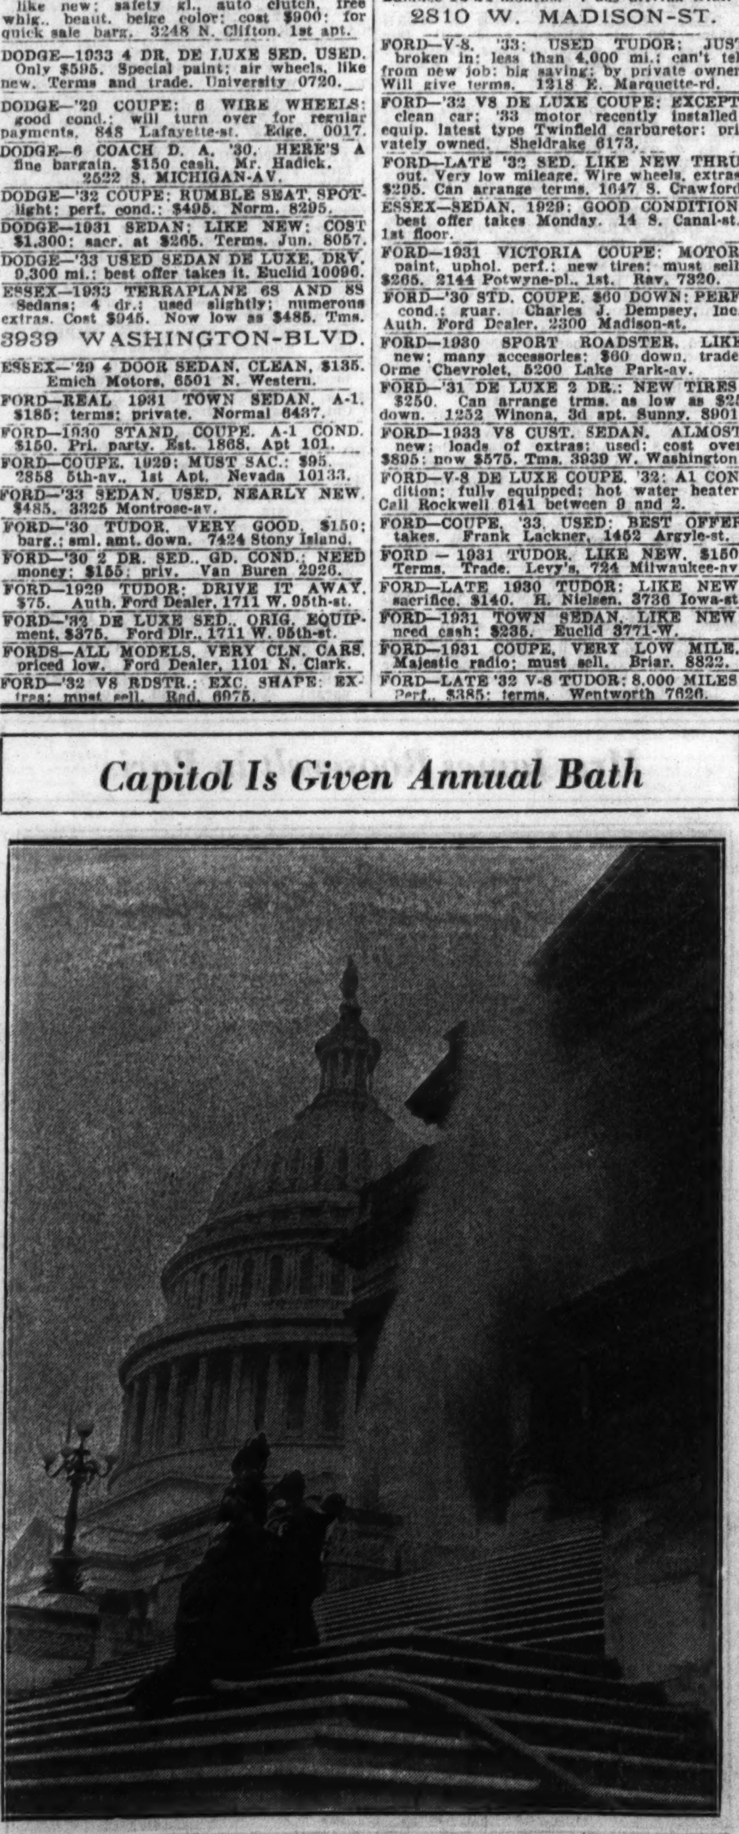
Capitol Is Given Annual Bath



Playing powerful streams of water against the walls, firemen of Washington last week gave the national capitol its annual bath. The historic structure is being groomed for the opening of the next session of congress.

USED AUTOMOBILES FOR SALE.

WE CLAIM THESE ARE THE 4 BEST BUYS IN CHICAGO

The prices go up after Nov. 2nd.

AUBURN—DE LUXE SEDAN, 1932 Custom 8 with wire wheels, side mounts, etc. Dual ratio. Here is one of the most beautiful cars you've ever seen. The finish glistens like a new dollar and the upholstery is immaculate. Motor was driven just enough to be properly broken in. Really, we could represent this Auburn as a brand new car. It cost over $1,500 a short time ago. We placed a special price of $650 on it to move it at once.

CORD—SEDAN, 1931 de luxe model, finished a beautiful desert sand, with stunning crimson wheels. Has wire wheels, side mounts and many costly extras. The motor is as smooth as silk and the appearance leaves nothing to be desired. We sincerely say that this Cord looks and runs better than many autos priced at $1,000 and over. Our sales price is only $550.

BUICK—CONVERTIBLE SEDAN, '32, that is practically unused. It is a real beauty. You'll be delighted by its nice, glossy finish, the immaculate upholstery and the sweet running motor. Has Philco radio, built-in trunk, wire wheels, driving light, etc. You may read of or hear of Buicks that are "like new," but take it from us you haven't seen anything yet until you inspect and drive this classy car. It's a honey and it won't remain long at $545.

PACKARD—SEDAN, 1928, Six that's exceptionally clean throughout and has a sweet running motor. Very fully equipped. Special for $265.

PACKARD
The Yardstick of Value
TWO SUPER VALUES.

'30 PACKARD 733 SEDAN, 7 pass. Std. 8 with wire wheels, side mounts, driving light, seat covers, trunk rack, heater, etc. This beautiful car was chauffeur driven and given the most careful attention. Now the finish sparkles like a new dollar and the interior appears brand new. Tires have very little mileage. The motor is absolutely perfect. Considering the high quality of this Packard, it as an outstanding buy at $695.

'32 FRANKLIN SEDAN. Supercharged 12. Here is a magnificent air-cooled car. Finished a stunning two-tone gray. Practically new Goodyear heavy duty all-weather tires. The interior is immaculate and has many expensive refinements. The V-12 motor performs absolutely noiselessly, but there's abundant power and pick-up when you step on the throttle. It can "cruise" at 50 M. P. H. just as easy as you can do 20 M. P. H. in your old car. If you should show this car to your neighbors no one would believe you bought it "used." Actually it sold for $4,200 not long ago. Priced at only $1,495.

Many other values in Packards and other makes to choose from. Don't miss them.

$150 Buys This Complete Business

I have a complete business, something good that any man or woman or husband and wife working together can set up in their kitchen at home on which you can make up to $25 to $30 a day. For $150 you get absolutely everything you need to start out and make a good profit the first week. This is no "scheme" or "slick proposition," but a legitimate staple business. You manufacture at home an absolutely new food product. Looks and tastes like nothing you ever saw or heard of. Put it up in sacks and leave it with grocers, delicatessens, beer taverns, etc. They sell it for you at a big profit per dozen and it sells like wild fire. Derry now selling 600 dozens a week. Lambert sold 1,896 dozen first 6 weeks. Took in $1,011.20 in cash. No experience needed, as I show you how and start you off right. Call in person at Room 812 Boyce Bldg., 54 W. Illinois-st., or write. Ask for Mr. Archer.

PARTNERSHIP
Manufacturing—Sales Organization.
An unusual opportunity presents itself for several individuals, qualified and experienced in one or more phases of business administration and who have an established recognition, to become active partners in an organization of long and reputable standing.

Such an association would contemplate wide latitude for individual operation and all the benefits of a strong supporting group.

A modest investment would be required. The specific functional activities of the organization are manufacturing, management, accounting, advertising, distribution and new products.

In reply give full details of your experience and age; no consideration will be given otherwise. Confidence observed. Address Executive Vice President, O A 154, Tribune.

THE ALLEN ELECTRIC COFFEE ROASTER puts the retail coffee business on a large profit basis, over 100%. It also solves the question of really fresh coffee. When people see and smell fresh roasting coffee and you let them taste its goodness you have created steady customers. Just think! Everybody uses coffee. We want serious-minded men who have or can secure city and small town business locations to get these profits. On seeing machine you will realize its profit earning power; $250 cash buys machine. If you have this amount and a little extra to get started in business we want to see you at our Chicago factory. This is a sound business put out by a company 50 years in business. Write for appointment, giving phone number. Address O B 320, Tribune.

CAPABLE EXECUTIVE.
An institution rendering a nation-wide service in capital and funded debt readjustment; engineering and production management, has an executive position open to a man with the right background of experience and $5,000 capital for investment. HOW TO FIND TENANTS

The principle is the same whether you want to fill a retail store with customers or find a tenant for a vacant room—make your announcement to the largest number of people you can reach. An inexpensive Tribune Want Ad can place your offer before far more families in Chicago and suburbs than read any other Chicago newspaper. Call Superior 0100—Want Ad-Viser!

LET SOMEONE ELSE TOOT YOUR HORN!

Why not sell that old trumpet or saxophone you no longer play? There are hundreds of people who are in the market for good used musical instruments of all kinds, including pianos. Get in touch with a buyer through a want ad in the Tribune Musical Instruments column. An inexpensive Tribune Want Ad can place your offer before seven out of every thirteen families in Chicago and suburbs.

BID THE OLD BUS GOOD-BYE!

Want to sell your automobile quickly? The speediest way to find a buyer is through a want ad in the Tribune Automobiles-For-Sale column. A low-cost Tribune Want Ad can place your offer before more than 800,000 families on week days. Call Superior 0100—Want Ad-Viser.

WANT TO EXPAND?

Take a look along State Street. Every one of its big stores was once a small establishment. Advertising helped them to become the successes they are today. An inexpensive Tribune Want Ad in the Business Directory each Sunday can help you find new customers and earn more profit, regardless of the kind or the location of your store or shop. Order a want ad for next Sunday's Tribune. Call Superior 0100—Want Ad-Viser!

CALL A TRIBUNE WANT AD-VISER

Tribune Want Ad-Visers are experienced in advertising. They will be glad to help you word your want ad. If your name is in the phone book you can charge your want ad in the Tribune.

Coats and Frocks Achieve Close Harmony

Ghostly Spirits Desert Graves to Roam Again

Goblins and Witches Cast Spell O'er Halloween, but Haunted Still Eat.

By MARY MEADE.

SPOOKS and spookesses in company with black cats and hobgobblins are closing in on us from all sides this week, fairly yammering to start a party and bring the feel of fall harvest into the house with another Halloween. And since haunts just aren't to be argued with, let's join the ghostly convention and have us a lot of fun. Just two days to collect foods and ideas, so we'll start the wheels for tomorrow by laying the plot today.

But don't mistake me. I'm not talking of youngsters, parties and of them alone. Not by a far cry. Whether we're five or eighty-five, we love hilarious doings—or would, once we fell into the midst of one of them. And nothing so breaks the ice with the neighbors and turns acquaintances into friends as a dim lighted, cross legged party of riotous folks, grinned over by wicked jack o' lanterns and punctuated by the staccato of popping corn, sizzling hearth apples, or merely the announcement of a real Halloween dinner ready on the table.

Buffet Popular.

Buffet suppers seem to be some sort of kin to the Halloween season. They're easily prepared, cost little, and the help-yourself idea is bound to bring out the gayest there is in everybody.

Decorations may be simple. You can work wonders with a little crêpe paper and some trick lighting effects. For a change, depart from the traditional black and orange and shroud the lights in blue crêpe paper. You'll get a weird, ghostly effect guaranteed to send grade A shivers coursing up and down your guests.

Bright colored balloons filled with lighter-than-air gas, bedecked with faces and let loose to meander about the ceiling, will give the impression of ghostly visitations. Or if you "just don't go" for such spectral frivolities, gayety and color fairly dance all over a Halloween party just the same if rich autumn leaves, whopping yellow pumpkins, cornstalks, cattails, goldenrod, and plenty of nuts and fruits enter into the fall harvest decoration motif.

Pretzels Are Fun.

There must, indubitably, be ghost stories and fortune telling. And if you want a modern variation to top off the fun, stage a pretzel biting contest. Hang curlicue pretzels from strings and let your guests, blindfolded, bite the pretzels into the shapes of letters. As in the old apple peeling and throwing games, that letter should be the initial of the biter's destined mate. (Better skip this number if your guests are married and have already figured that letter out for themselves.)

Foods seem to hunt themselves a black and orange color scheme to complete this spell of the Black Cat. As a first course to a light but spooky supper, how about a fruit cup of broken orange sections, chopped prunes, and black cherries piled back into orangeskin cups cut to resemble jack o' lanterns? Eyes, nose, and mouth may be cut out with a sharp knife. The top takes graciously to fluting with a scissors.

Make Butter Kittens.

If the meal calls for butter, round butter balls fashion admirably into chubby kitten faces. Creamed cheese makes quick work of the ears, and bits of shredded cereal may be poked on for whiskers. Don't fuss with them, and be sure they are kept well chilled till just before serving. Even the slightest resemblance to a small yellow feline will win a good laugh. Bread or salted wafers may back up the kitten butter balls.

Swashbuckling pirate boats make first class main courses for spook suppers if they are founded on pastry patties, puff paste cases, fried noodle nests, or one of the popular cereal biscuits crushed gently down the center and filled to bubbling over with chicken or ham à la king. Swankily topping off any of these

SKETCHED IN PARIS BY A TRIBUNE STAFF ARTIST.

● At the extreme left in the foreground is one of Augustabernard's most beautiful daytime frocks. It flaunts bows at the back of the two-band girdle and has short draped panels at the shoulders in front. ● Jean Patou puts a nutria bib collar on the wool frock, shown second, and buttons up the sleeves below a gaping, square shoulder. ● Chanel proves, in the third frock, that moire can be a young fabric. She lines the neck and bow and the sleeve bows with white and puts a tiny peplum on the removable belt. ● Worth designed the handsome frock at the right, making it of soft angora wool and trimming it with Persian lamb to match the coat. The plaited panel at the back of the skirt is a distinctively Worth feature. A girlish bow finishes the V neck.

Paris Dresses Flatter Wrap —and Wearer

Colors Blend Softly or Contrast Sharply; Monotones Are Permitted.

By BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—By this time every right minded woman has settled the problem of her winter coat or coats. That comes first and the complementing frocks follow after. Paris has loads of these little flatterers on hand, designed to get along happily with all kinds of winter wraps, be they fur or cloth, long or short, swagger or fitted.

The kind of life we lead today has changed the character of the dress. We live in and out of town at the same time. Distance is conquered, and dresses have to be ready to fit into urban, suburban, and purely rural atmospheres all in one day.

Don't Outshine Wearers.

Sliding from one atmosphere to another is only part of their job. They have to compliment their wearers and keep it up to the last thread and button. The brazen hussy of a frock that outshines the woman inside cannot crash the gates of smart styles this season. No girl in her right mind is going to flaunt a frock that looks more important than herself.

The elegant woman is choosing her frocks from three angles—the winter coats, her own sweet person, and the places that frock must go. She is picking simple little dresses to wear all day, dresses that are beautiful in color and material, and that have a bit of softness where it is most needed, that is, around the neck.

Sleeves and Necklines.

Paris has so many ways of making the top of the winter dress highly complimentary there's a flattering neckline for every woman. Bibs, jabots, bows, drapery, fichus, collars, and ruffles are leading ways.

Sleeves, too, are calculated to act in the same way. Where they can be worn, short sleeves are in high style on winter frocks. They bring in long, flattering gloves and muffs to bridge the gap of the bare forearms. Vionnet's big bishop sleeves, shirred at the armholes and wrists, are enhancing little numbers in the sleeve styles of Paris. There are lots of long, fitted sleeves, too, where necklines are befrilled. There are those wing backed leg o' mutton sleeves of Augustabernard. There are Chanel's short split sleeves, and Patou's long sleeves that are open at the top. And there are others that hang from the charming dropped shoulder yoke, which is a big feature of the season's dress fashions.

Gray Is Foil for Brilliance.

Dress body lines are almost universally simple and molded in the waistline region. Skirts are also quite simple and not much flared. The waistline is sometimes unmarked except by a bit of drapery. It is often held by a self-material belt, and therefore inconspicuous, or it is boldly draped or belted, or thrown into relief by a flared peplum below.

Dress colors are exceedingly important to style. They are rich or bright, according to the color of your coat. Paris likes the tawny yellow frock with the smoky gray coat, and the tawny red with brown coats. She likes, too, a dark red frock with a taupe or gray coat, or with a dark blue coat. A plum red coat is worn with a chartreuse green frock. A brown coat is put on over a dress of warm almond green. Dark green and silver gray make another smart combination, and wild rasp-

IT'S THE LAST ROUND-UP FOR PARIS PATTERN USERS IN THE $250 CONTEST

● The Sunday Tribune presents today the fourth of the new and exclusive Paris patterns originated by Bettina Bedwell. Cash prizes totaling $250 will be awarded to women who make costumes from this or from any of the other Paris patterns which have appeared during October. Today's pattern and details of the competition will be found on another page of this section.

Eyebrow Artistry Grows Increasingly Complicated in Platinumed Hollywood

Lines Arch to Dizzy Heights or Swerve off on Tangents for New Beauty

By Antoinette Donnelly.

HOLLYWOOD.—[Special.]—Platinum heads! More platinum heads, and still more platinum! Blondes of other shades, but blonde and ultra blonde! The promised land of the preferred sisterhood, is Hollywood at the moment. It's rumored that a few brunettes and vivid reds got in under the big tent when nobody was looking, but for all of me, the dark phenomenon is kept dark. Still, I've been here but a few days and tomorrow may bring its brunette surprise, or red head. Surprises are one thing you may count on in this land of excitement, fun and make believe. Both in the offing, and close up, too.

Take the new makeup scheme, for instance. New since I was here before. Rouge, lipstick, powder, grease paint, everything used must have brown in it to synchronize with the panchromatic film design for screen photography. So, you see girl after girl with silvery or golden hair, face aglow with Polynesian or red Indian coloring, or a deftly welded combination of yellow-red-brown. Startling, but fascinating under the lights intended for its wear. For other wear, 'twould be grotesque.

The hilariously light hair tones, the makeup described and eyebrows are, to me, feminine Hollywood's news features of the moment.

Ordinary Eyebrow Is Thing of Past.

Let's review the eyebrow parade first, because it intrigues me most. I remember the time when eyebrows were just nice ordinary belongings with need of disciplining only when they ran off their natural course a bit wildly. Or, so they were treated.

Well, Hollywood makes of eyebrows a fetish, we might say, or better, a medium of expression. It makes of an eyebrow a feature to widen, to shorten, to lengthen, to arch, to lift—anyway, to work on and create the illusion of a different face, a prettier face, a more beautiful one or a more interesting one, maybe a wickeder one should the cinema need arise.

An eyebrow here, in other words, is something more than a line of hair surrounded by nose bridge, brow, and temple.

Wide-Set Look Is Desirable.

"Dot" Pondell, makeup artist at the Paramount studios, upon whose sculptural genius depends many a screen face's reputation, points out to me the possibilities of revolutionizing a face with clever eyebrow treatment.

Always, of course, there must be "width" between the eyebrows to give the eyes the wide-set look. Sometimes it is necessary to begin the inner line of brow well over and above the lid to get the desired effect, meaning, of course, that hairs must be plucked out to leave a wide expanse over the nose bridge.

With a broad face, the eyebrow must be arched higher to slenderize its length.

An oval face is given an almost ovalish lift of brow.

A fleshy fullness over the upper lid is minimized with a thin, tapering line and eyebrow.

Sometimes what the face needs is a longer "path" of eyebrow down the temple way.

And sometimes the eyebrow may be left politely alone if it is a good eyebrow and suits the face.

The trend, Miss Pondell tells me, is toward a fuller hair line over the eye. Also, to treat the eyebrow as it belongs to the individual face, not to Greta Garbo's or Dietrich's face.

Anyway, here's a new beauty world to conquer, girls. You might be looking yours over with a view to modernizing, slenderizing, cleverizing that perfectly good face of yours.

Then you remember the ice cream we called "frozen tiger dessert" not so long ago? It works in to perfection at the end of a Halloween supper. It's a combination of orange ice and chocolate ice cream, either frozen together in brick form or spooned out in mottled fashion into glass sherbet cups. Chocolate wafers might be the "also rans," adorned with orange or white icing to form funny faces. Or use yellow wafers tricked out with chocolate icing in amazing designs of your own choosing.

CIDER FRAPPE.

This is simply a frozen cider punch. It contains 1 cup orange juice, 2 cups cider, ¼ cup lemon juice, 2 cups water, and add ⅞ cup sugar. Add ½ cup of the water, hot, to the sugar, dissolving it. Add the other ingredients and freeze to a soft mush in the refrigerator freezing tray. Serve it just this way, in small, slender glasses. It's to be sipped, remember, not spooned up.

ORANGES.

1 pork loin
6 oranges, uniform size
6 small sweet potatoes
6 marshmallows
Butter
Flour
Salt
Pepper

Have a loin of pork prepared at the market with the chine bone sawed loose from the ribs. Wipe the meat, dust with salt and pepper, and dredge with flour. Sear it on a rack in an uncovered roasting pan (no water added), using a hot oven (480 degrees F.) for 15 minutes, or until browned. Then reduce the heat at once to a slow oven (300 degrees F.) and continue roasting till the meat is tender, about 30 minutes per pound.

Meanwhile, cut a slice off the top of each orange and scoop out the pulp. Remove the membrane from this pulp and mix part of it with the sweet potatoes which have been boiled and mashed. Season and add butter. Pile this mixture into the orange cups and bake in the oven till well heated through. Just a few minutes before serving remove the oranges, top each with a marshmallow, return to the oven, and bake until puffy and brown. Serve these around the roast pork loin on a large, hot platter for a perfect Halloween triumph.

Paris Coats and Frocks Achieve Close Harmony

berry red with brown still another. They all make your mouth water, they're that beautiful.

The one color ensemble of dress and coat is not out of the fashions, of course. It's easier, and you can add touches of the lovely colors if you're afraid to jump into the dress and coat contrast.

Paris Plays a New Game with Prints.

Another feature of fashions in Paris is the printed or patterned frock with the plain coat, or vice versa, usually stripes and prints, done on wools, silks and velvets. Extraordinarily attractive if you know how to pick and choose. And extremely smart, 'cause they're hard to do well.

Safe frocks for any woman and frocks with Paris chic are those illustrated. It is dresses like this that will be worn around Paris more than any others. The Augustabernard frock at the left in the foreground is one of the best and most wearable. It is made, in the original model, of a rich dark green silk crêpe, with a blouse seamed up the center front and draped high across the throat. This drapery becomes a small turnover collar at the back of the neck, as shown by the figure on the balcony above, and the blouse buttons below this collar on one button, being wrapped over a little and open below. The back of the bodice doesn't end on the shoulders, but falls over the shoulders in front in two short, rounded panels. Extremely tricky cutting. At the waistline Augustabernard sets in two bias bands of the material, which make a sort of belt. They are tied in two bows at the back.

Chanel Reinstates Moire as Youthful Fabric.

The next figure, toward the right, shows a frock which Jean Patou does in semi-sheer amethyst colored wool. It has Patou's special sleeves that are in one with the plain bodice, and that are square at the top, open just below the shoulders and buttoned below that to the elbows on brown buttons. The dress has a bib of nutria, draped close around the throat in front, and making a collar in the back, as shown on the figure at the extreme left. Below this the dress buttons to the bottom of the yoke. The skirt is high and split in the center at the front and top, and in back it has a buttoned belt. An effect of skirt fullness is obtained in front by two panels that are sewed at the sides and open down the center front, ending above the skirt hem.

Chanel's young frock, which he makes in deep red moire, is shown next on the right. This simple frock has a gored skirt and buttons down the front to the hipline. At the round neckline is a knot of moire, lined with white, and the short sleeves, split at the outside partway, have white lined moire bows. The moire belt has a narrow circular white lined peplum that comes off with it.

Rope Welcome Mats Come Gayly Colored in Smart Designs

EVERY one recalls the heavy brown rope welcome mats of a few years back. They were serviceable enough, but their porcupine tendencies made them a bit impractical. Touching them ungloved usually meant a quill or painful sliver in some part of the hands.

The modern rope door mat is no longer an object to be feared. It has been refined and deprived of its prickly qualities. It is now bleached to an off white, or dyed in shades of blue, green, rust, and rich dark brown. Woven in an attractive design, the mat is reinforced so unobtrusively it is difficult to realize the strength and durability of such an apparently loosely woven shoe cleaner.

Approximately 24 by 36 inches, it is reasonably priced and sold in one of the Chicago department stores.

New Shade of Blue Is Lovely Under Light

ELECTRIC light has always been a death sentence to the beauty of pale blues worn in the evening, particularly in velvets. That's why a new shade, gentian or cornflower, is stepping right out this year. In velvet it retains all of its depth, even under difficult lighting. And do the blonde darlings love it!

Tables Small and Specialized for Every Need

Occasional Pieces Replace the Graceless "Center" Stand of Bygone Days.

"What's Wrong with Your Rooms?" a booklet by Edith Weigle, giving simple solutions to complicated problems of furniture arrangement, is 5 cents by mail. Three cents at the Tribune Public Service Office, One South Dearborn street.

By Edith Weigle.

BACK in the days when tables were "center" tables there was not much to say about them. You put them in the middle of the room and covered them with a decorative [?] cloth, then placed the lamp and the evening paper and some books on them and Johnnie and Mary did their sums there after supper while you did the mending and your husband read.

In those days the center table was the nucleus, as it were, of the family living room. Today, however, one seldom sees it used in that manner. Reading tables there are, but they are placed against a wall, or in a bay window—anywhere but the exact center of the room.

And there is a whole new crop of small tables that is flourishing as vigorously as mushrooms after a rain. There are lamp tables, bridge and game tables, coffee and cocktail ones, drop leaf and pie crust models and bedside tables. No matter what your problem, a table is there to solve it.

Lamp Stands Used for Balanced Unit.

Decorators are fond of placing lamp tables at either end of a sofa to create a balanced unit, and one furniture manufacturer has made some especially nice types for that use. One that we have in mind and that is sold at a Chicago furniture store has long, slender tapering legs and a little metal gallery about the top. Instead of a wooden surface, however, one finds a clever little top of imitation green onyx that makes this table unusual and smart.

Mahogany tier tables are always popular with discriminating people. The type pictured today is most adaptable. It may be used in the living room, the dining room, the entrance hall, or the bedroom and its circular shelves offer convenient spots for colorful accessories.

The other photograph shows a second type that is nice to have in any home. It serves as a reading table and boasts an extra lower shelf for magazines and newspapers. Both the models shown are made by one of the finest table manufacturers in the country and are sold in Chicago and elsewhere.

Nests of Tables Need No Longer Match.

Nests of tables are taking on new lines. No longer is it necessary to have each one like the other, for instance. You can select a set with the largest quite plain and simple and having a leg at each of the four corners, and the second one a Duncan Phyfe type with a pedestal base and curving, brass tipped supports. Yet they live together in perfect harmony.

Then there is the big family of tilt top tables that have been popular ever since the days of Thomas Chippendale. They are appropriate for the small sized rooms of a city apartment because they occupy so little space. In the old days the tops tilted to make a fire screen; now they do it to save space.

One store is showing a good looking line of tilt top bridge tables, the wood being painted an old-white and antiqued and a hand painted design gracing the center of the surface. Or a black crackled finish is available, if you prefer, with a pastoral scene in soft, rich colors.

Coffee Tables Have Handy Glass Trays.

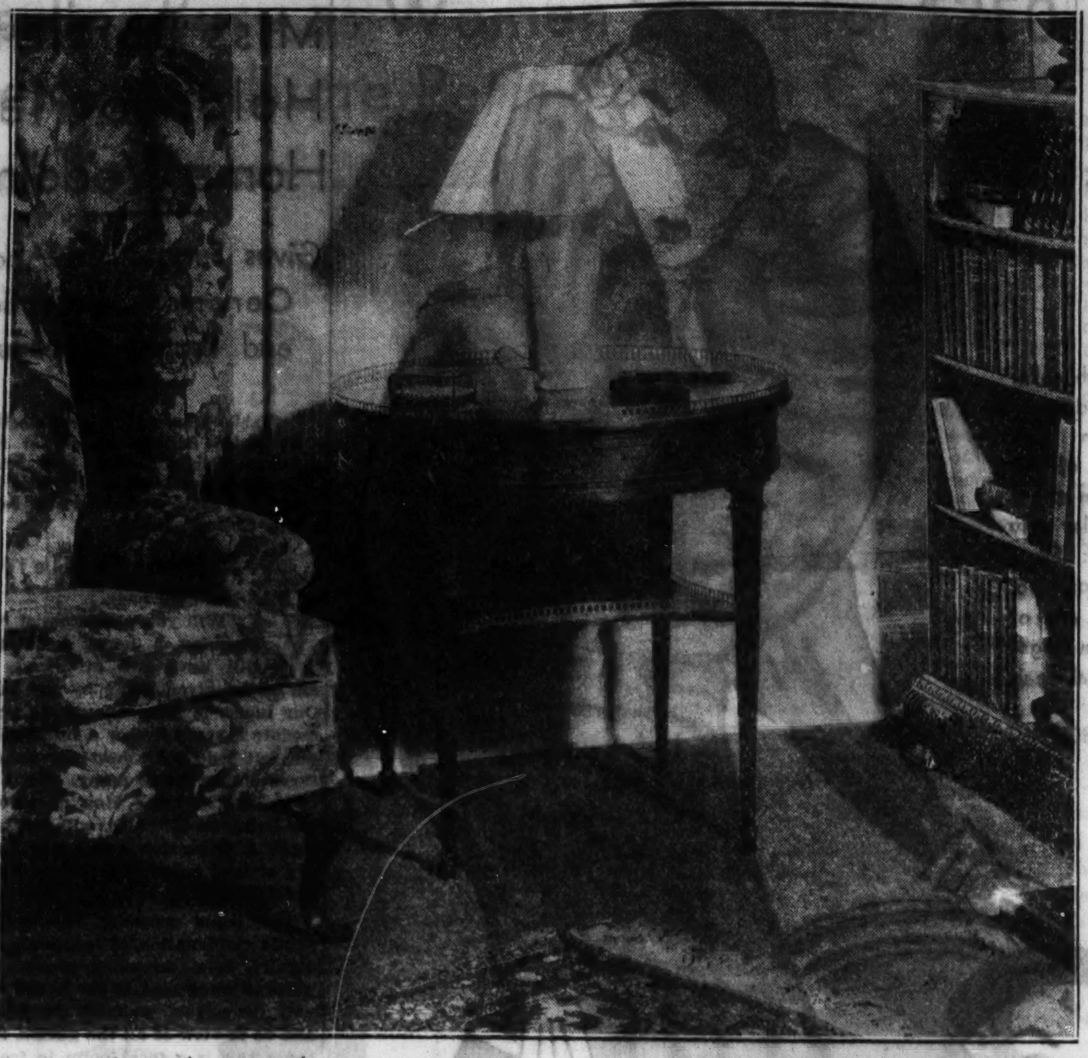
Quite the handsomest black table we've seen has a semi-circular leaf that folds back against the wall and interesting cabriole legs. The frame and legs are black, while the inside of the leaf and the top are a mellow, creamy, antique white with just a touch of gold.

Coffee tables are most obliging these days, for almost all of them are equipped with removable glass tray tops so that beverages may be served without danger of spilling on the fine wood surface.

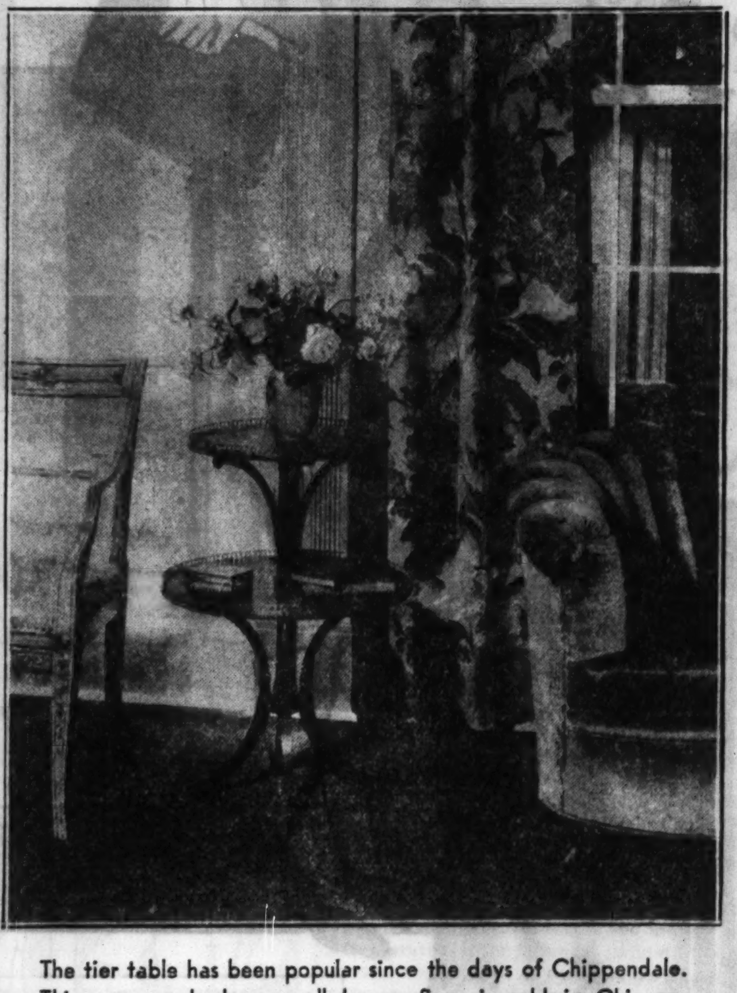
One chic little painted table has an inset of black mirror glass in the top which contrasts beautifully with the white and the colors of the hand painted floral decoration about it.

The octagonal table with the too highly polished, glossy burl top and the too fancy legs is definitely out of the 1933 style picture. The new, better styled, better looking types have put it forever in the background.

TABLES THAT FIT ANYWHERE



An attractive mahogany gallery top table has a lower shelf which adds to its usefulness.



The tier table has been popular since the days of Chippendale. This one, made by a well known firm, is sold in Chicago.

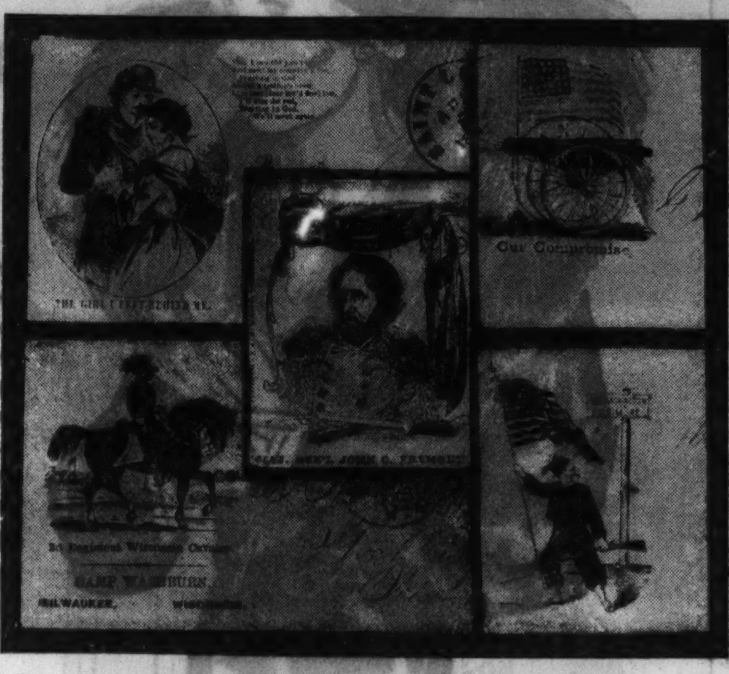
THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen



The average citizen in the late war was too busy buying Liberty bonds and keeping track of meatless and fuelless days to pay much attention to the visible evidences of patriotism, and so used very few of the so-called "patriotic" covers which were so common during the civil war. The illustration shows a few examples of average designs. The envelopes vary from those with just a line of red, white, and blue on the flaps, to others covered with scurrilous messages directed against the enemy. The two covers at the left showing "The Girl I Left Behind Me" and the "Cavalrymen" from the Second regiment Wisconsin cavalry were sent by a Stockbridge Indian to the Sachem of the tribe in Stockbridge, Wis.

Mr. Cabeen will be glad to answer questions concerning stamps. A stamped, self-addressed envelope should be inclosed in case a personal reply is desired.

TYPOGRAPHY, producing as it does the books, newspapers, and magazines, accounts for the bulk of commercial printing, and likewise it has been found to be the cheap and practical method of getting out the greater part of the world's stamps. Processes differ with the various stamp printers as a result of their experience, but on the whole typographed stamps are uniform and generally carefully executed.

De La Rue & Co., who print stamps for Great Britain and colonies, use electrotype plates made on lead matrices. These matrices are struck from the original engraved die in a coining press and fastened together in the form of the desired plate. The copper shell obtained by electrotyping is backed up with type metal and then nickel faced to give a durable surface. For the colonies two printings are required; one plate being used for the general stamp design, with a series of plates for the name of the colony and the value labels. The first named plate is called the "key" or "head" plate, the others are "duty" plates.

The Quetzal.

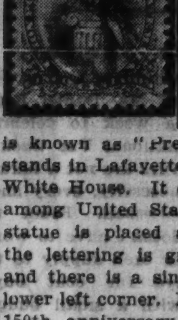
Guatemala is famous for two things at least—the marimba and the quetzal. The first is pleasing to hear, the other to see. The quetzal is the national bird of Guatemala and represents to the native of that country the spirit of freedom for it is popularly supposed that it cannot be kept in captivity. While only the size of a small dove its golden-green tail may reach a length of three feet. In general its wings and back are of the golden-green color, while the breast and chassis are a vivid scarlet. In early days it was a criminal offense to kill the bird, but the chiefs plucked the plumes, as from an ostrich, to decorate their bonnets. Today it is so much respected that the Guatemalans have named their standard coin a "quetzal."

Kosciusko Stamp.

The 5 cent stamp issued on Oct. 13, in recognition of the services of Kosciusko to the American cause, is of the standard size and is printed in blue. It shows the statue of that famous general by Anton Popiel, which stamp of 1923 seems to have made a "bull" in more ways than one, for the legendary animal which he has used is distinctly of Persian ancestry, and had little in common with the beasts which lived in Iraq, or Mesopotamia as it was called until it gained its independence from Turkey.

Poland.

Poland has had four presidents since it declared its independence and adopted a republican form of government. These were Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, Gabriel Narutowicz, Stanislas Wojciechowski, and Ignace Moscicki. The chief executive of this state is known as "Prezydent-Rzeczpospolstands in Lafayette park, opposite the White House. It comes as a novelty among United States stamps for the statue is placed at the right while the lettering is grouped at the left, and there is a single numeral in the lower left corner. It was issued on the 150th anniversary of the day when he became a citizen of the U. S.



A Winged Bull.

Your Questions.

P. H. W.—At this date the status of the "Byrd" stamp is still in question. Official announcements state, "As the new Little America 3 cent stamp is being issued solely for use on mail matter of the Antarctic expedition, supplies thereof will not be placed on sale in postoffices for use on ordinary domestic mail."

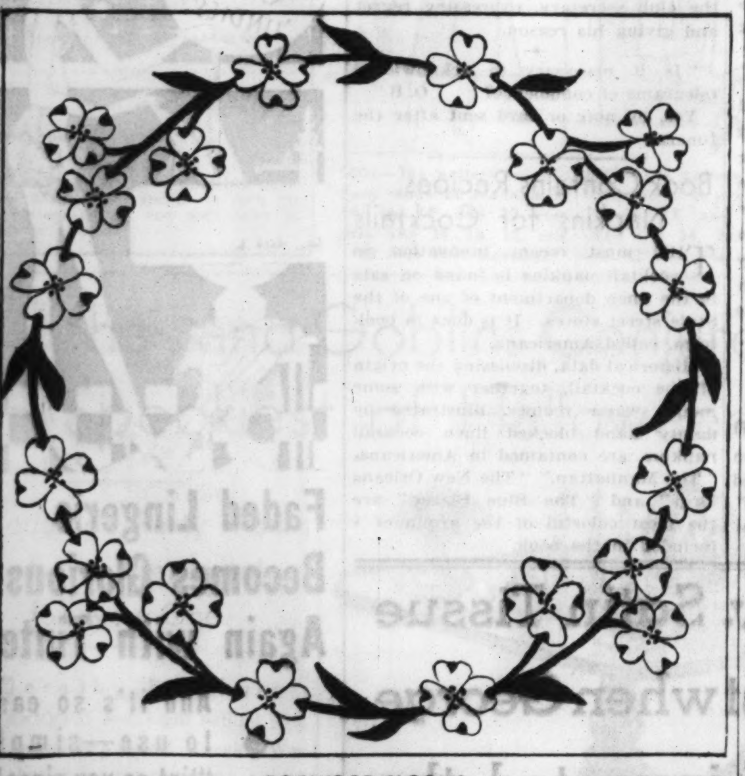
Dainty Dogwood Bloom Wreath Frames Softly Tinted Background



DOGWOOD BLOOMS.

White Blossoms Encircle Quilt Design to Give Springlike Loveliness; Pattern Charmingly New and Different.

By Nancy Cabot.

THE delightful blossom known as dogwood bloom has formed the design for a great many quilt and embroidery patterns; we are inclined to think this the best. At any rate it is different. The white blossoms are charmingly springlike against a softly colored background.

Tropical Fish Now Invade the HomeAquarium

TROPICAL fish in the home aquarium may add an exotic note to the life of many an indoor gardener this winter. A Chicago department store has introduced them in lieu of the time honored goldfish.

Paddling about in one of the smart new rectangular aquariums with chromium base and trimmings, the finny little things are a good deal less trouble to care for than they ever were before.

Water Need Not Be Changed in Latest Tanks.

Their water never needs to be changed. The addition of a pint or two once or twice a week is all that is necessary. Living plants in the aquarium give off oxygen and absorb the carbon dioxide.

Electric light bulbs set in the removable chromium top of the aquarium not only illuminate it with a mellifluous light but keep the plants alive. They are supplied with "juice" via a cord connected with a wall plug.

To make the aquarium completely self-operative scavengers are allowed to flourish in the gravel at the bottom to eat the decayed food and plant film which would otherwise foul the water.

Tropical Fish Demand Live Water Fleas in Diet.

No thin, pasty white wafers, but live water fleas comprise the diet of these tropical fish, which, by the way, are the only sort that thrive in the unique environment of this new aquarium.

Real coral, sponge, or mushroom formations and flowers, frogs, and storks of china or glass replace the mossy castles and rocks which found their way into home aquariums in the mauve decade and have remained there pretty much ever since.

Brass Dogs Dangle from New Wooden Bracelets

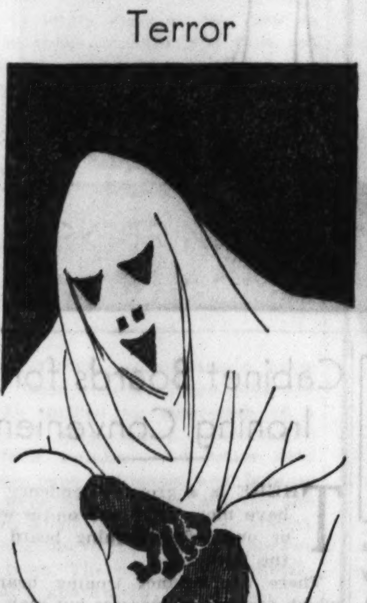
THE vogue for wooden jewelry has been given added impetus since the bracelets came out. These, like all the wooden stuff, are grand for sports wear, particularly if the wearer has a weakness for pups. On one bracelet four little dogs in brass are suspended from the brown wooden band; on another are four Scotties in ebony.

Scarves Recall Grandma's Styles

THE shadow of grandmother's day and her dress decrees gets closer and closer. The latest tintype touch to 1933 dress is the Paisley scarf, a band of silk about a foot wide and two yards long, in Paisley colors and prints, worn Ascot fashion with dark dresses and coats. Its ends are fringed.

As a contrast other new scarves are distinctly of this day and age. They're huge squares of Batik in the most thrilling of colors, Chinese vermilion, royal purple, magenta, and jade green.

Terror



By Eleanor Jewett.

I'm afraid in the playroom,
And afraid in the hall.
There may come a ghost
Out of anywhere at all!

The ghost may be dressed
In a terribly long sheet,
With shining eyes and clutching hands
And quiet, slippered feet.

O, I'm afraid to stay up
And afraid to go to bed—
Even though it's only dress-up,
I don't want to see that HEAD.

Inexpensive Desk Lamp Helps Young Students

WHEN the child starts back into school it is vitally important that he have a well lighted desk or table to work on. If he can have a room all to himself for his studies, that is desirable. But if this is not possible he can have at least a well illuminated corner where he can work at his lessons. There are many special little lamps for this purpose: inexpensive lamps but ones which will pay their way in eyesight saved and eliminate any glare.

A CHAIR INNOVATION

Something brand new and clever in the reading chair line is this wing chair which comes in rust and green. By pressing a button concealed in the upholstery two lights are turned on, these being part of the piece, itself. With the illumination off its source is not apparent. It's an ideal thought for the person who likes the light on her book, not in her eyes.

Fancy Imported Soaps Come Uniquely Packaged

IMPORTED soaps have taken unto themselves new shapes. Some of the soaps have a delicate odor of citrous fruits and are shaped like segments of orange or grapefruit. Twelve of these segments are wrapped together in transparent paper to resemble a large orange or a grapefruit.

For masculine bathers there are white soap golf balls, and for guests you may choose teeny little bars in pastel shades. The small round bars come 36 to the box, and they're reasonably priced.

Wraps of Rich, Sleek Fur Fit Every Budget

Swagger Coats Adopt Silver Muskrat and Insure Sealskin a New Vogue.

By Rhea Seeger.

FEMALE fur hunters and any descendants of Mr. Daniel Boone can have a week to celebrate . . . for national Fur week is here. And since furs are not a luxury, but a practical necessity, every shopper will be interested. From the bright gal who doesn't have to worry about nicking her cash supply to the just-as-appreciative fur coat buyer who struggles with a small budget, there are fur coats that will positively make you lose your breath until you buy them for your own. Moderately priced models have been as distinctively designed as any of the precious furs.

For instance . . . some of the smartest swagger coats of the new collection are made of silver muskrat . . . swanky, casual things that can trot about town, go to lunch, comfort you through a football game, top a simple wool suit on a very cold day and even go places at night, and the price tags are amazingly modest. And don't sniff at sealskin. The fact that it has been neglected by the younger set for a season or two makes its revival all the more spectacular this season. You'll find sealskin coats made of thick lustrous pelts as rich and interesting as anything you can wear . . . you'll find both formal and informal models, for street or dress parade . . . and sealskin is the best investment you can make, for it practically wears forever!

Bulkiness Does a Fadeout.

Fashionable new fur coats are as slim and as slenderly fashioned as any fabric coat . . . the old bulkiness that marked previous models has completely disappeared. New fur coats are worked or manipulated in the most intricate manner in the curving, willowy silhouette of 1933. Shoulders are broad but not exaggerated, collars are massed high and most comfortably and the waistlines are nipped in to accentuate the toplofty altitude of the shoulders. Length is a matter of personal choice . . . short, waist length capes or jackets swing debonairly over bright wool street suits or dresses . . . three-quarter length swagger coats are smarter than ever . . . and for afternoon the full length coat . . . opulent evening wraps are long and even trained.

Not a coat in any of the fall collections will make you thick, bulky, or fat . . . if you know your streamlines. You can find a short, sleek fur coat that will keep you sleek and slim if you have bothersome curves . . . you can find long haired fur coats that will make you look like a Russian princess, especially if you are tall and thin. . . . The average shopper of average build can be just as easily satisfied with numerous other modes.

During this fall season you can see and buy every possible type of fur coat for every occasion and for every clothes allowance. Fur coats from just one Chicago collection have been sketched today. They illustrate the intriguing new fur possibilities for fastidious and particular shoppers.

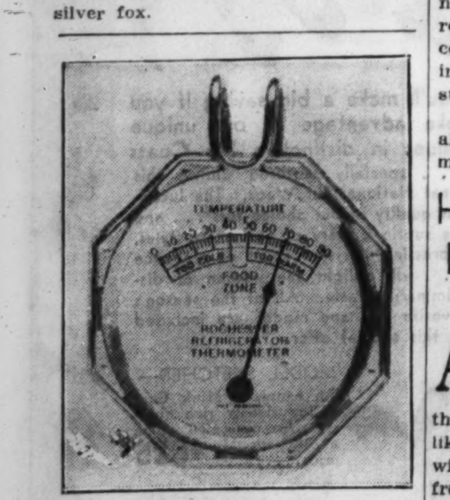
Ascot Ties and Plaid Linings Give a Sporting Air.

At the lower left . . . the newest model in swagger coats made of finely matched silver muskrat pelts . . . the long sleek lines are achieved with skillful planning, so that all bulkiness disappears. The lining is of plaid wool with the inevitable ascot tie scarf at the throatline.

New and as smart as anything you can find is the inky black sealskin at the lower right. It is also fashioned for general wear in the swagger length. Every tailored detail is perfect . . . a coat that is a gorgeous buy for any shopper.

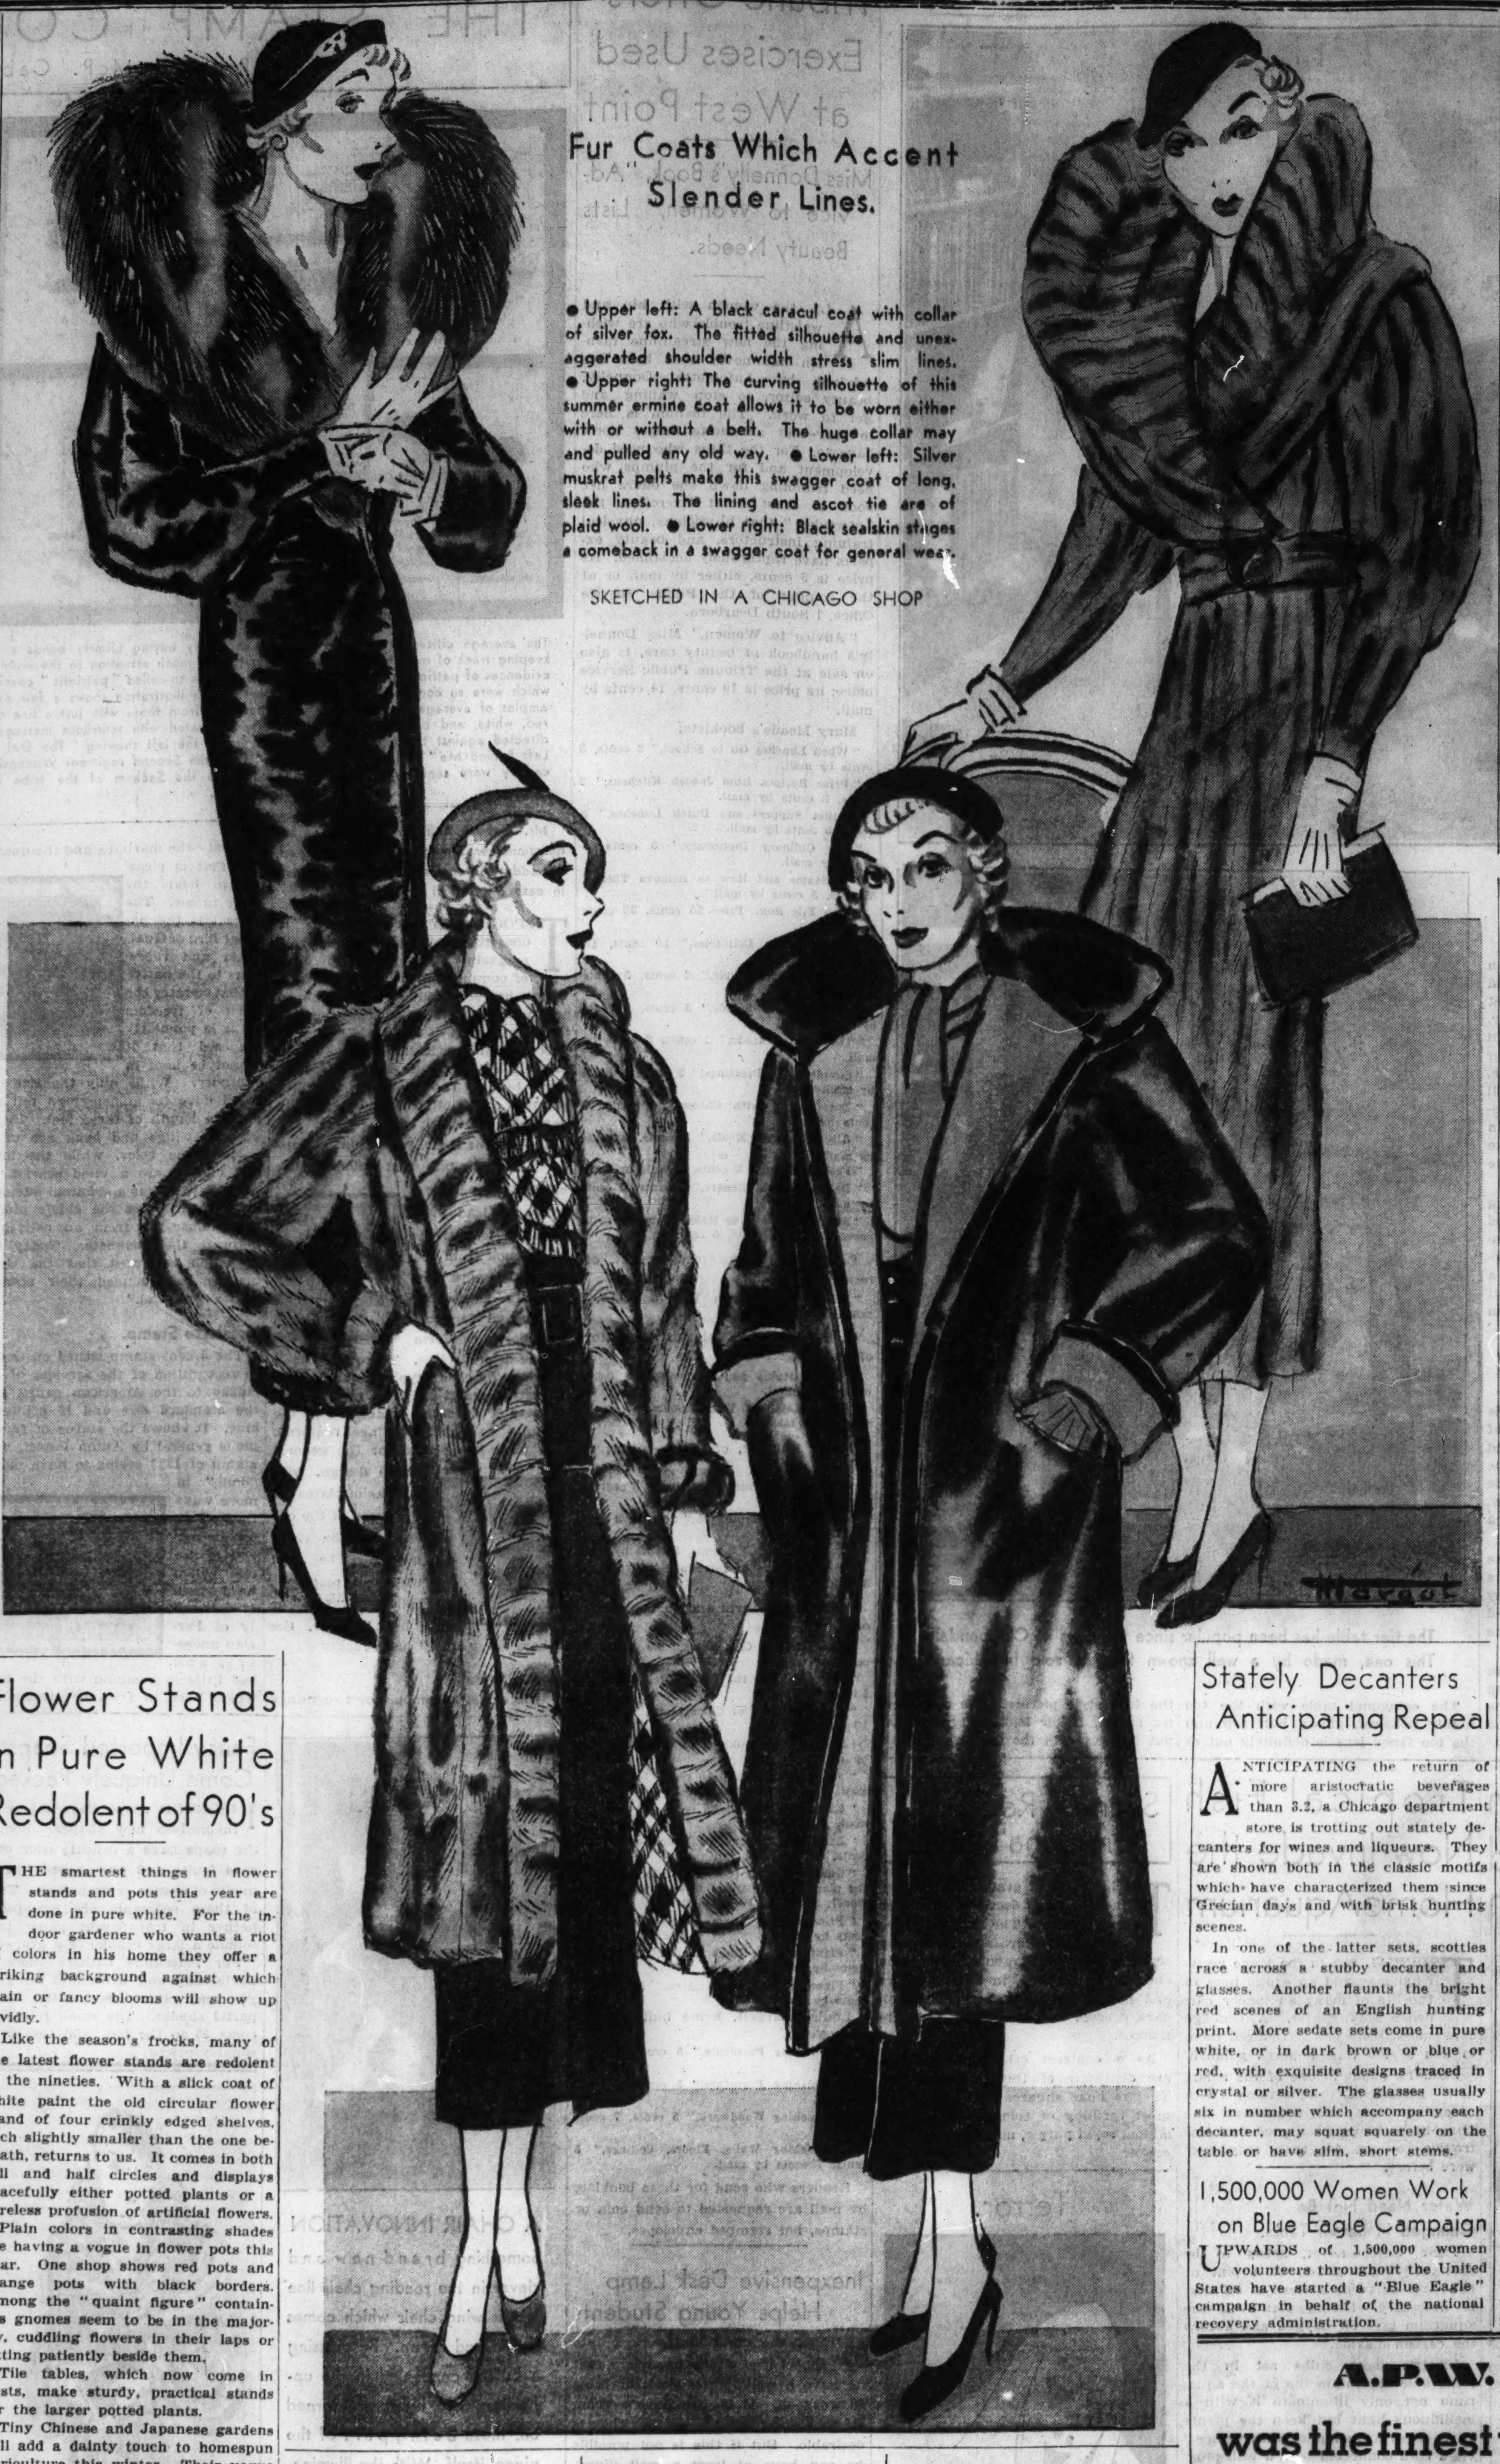
A belted summer ermine coat also fashioned in the new curving silhouette is shown at the upper right. It can be worn with or without the belt. The collar is huge and can be puffed and pulled around the face in a dozen different ways. The taupe beige color is the most flattering shade of the lighter furs.

The black caracul coat of beautifully matched pelts, worn by the model at the upper left, is undoubtedly the most patrician model you can buy. . . . The newest coats stress the long, slimly fitted silhouette and unexaggerated shoulder width and are collared with silver fox.



A SAFEGUARD

As a safeguard for the care of your food, this little refrigerator instrument snaps over the grill in the food compartment. Other similar dial thermometers are manufactured for individual rooms, as well as for outside the window. They come in handsome shades, with a genuine enamel dial.



Fur Coats Which Accent Slender Lines.

SKETCHED IN A CHICAGO SHOP

Flower Stands in Pure White Redolent of 90's

THE smartest things in flower stands and pots this year are done in pure white. For the indoor gardener who wants a riot of colors in his home they offer a striking background against which plain or fancy blooms will show up vividly.

Like the season's frocks, many of the latest flower stands are redolent of the nineties. With a slick coat of white paint the old circular flower stand of four crinkly edged shelves, each slightly smaller than the one beneath, returns to us. It comes in both full and half circles and displays gracefully either potted plants or a careless profusion of artificial flowers.

Plain colors in contrasting shades are having a vogue in flower pots this year. One shop shows red pots and orange pots with black borders. Among the "quaint figure" containers gnomes seem to be in the majority, cuddling flowers in their laps or sitting patiently beside them.

Tile tables, which now come in nests, make sturdy, practical stands for the larger potted plants.

Tiny Chinese and Japanese gardens will add a dainty touch to homespun floriculture this winter. Their vogue is heightened by the fact that they are now used as "projects" in school rooms. Small sons and daughters come home experts in oriental gardening, ready to produce new fangled results.

The garden may either be purchased already deftly set up or bought piecemeal and assembled in the home.

Home Filing Case Is Efficient, Decorative

A FILING case that is business-like as an office and colorful as a living room has been devised for use in the home. Made of thin but sturdy metal, glazed to look like leather, it is rectangular in shape with a wide opening at the upper front for convenience in examining its contents. The interior is equipped with a complete set of manila folders, initialed and arranged in alphabetical order. Because it stands over a foot high, the case amply accommodates 8½x11 paper as well as the ordinary stationery of social correspondence.

The "record chest," as it is called, may stand on the floor, sit upon a shelf, or perch on a spacious desk. Its efficiency will simplify life for amateur authors, overworked business men, and arden letter writers—or any one who has a hobby on which he likes to keep an orderly system of references.

Young Emperor Ends Sacrifices and Ceremonies

HUE, Annam.—(AP)—Fewer and plainer celebrations have been ordered for Annam by its 20 year old emperor, Bao Dai, who was modernized by studies in Paris.

Animal sacrifices have been barred from public temples, some minor festivals have been stricken from the calendar, and more sober costumes prescribed for official ceremonies.

Plantings, harvests, and hunting trips, as well as marriages and deaths, especially deaths, are the occasion for complicated sacrificial rites in this part of Indo-China, where the people, believing in gnomes and demons, worship nature in trees, rocks, soil, and sky.

At official ceremonies the mandarins have appeared with kimonolike coats, chair rocker shaped shoes and parasols.

Youngsters Take Honors for Expert Bridge Play

AMONG the expert bridge players in the United States are little Patricia and Norma Carlson of San Francisco, Cal. The ages of the sisters are 6 and 5, respectively.

Table Shows How Young Diners Can Be 'Comme Il Faut'

DINING room etiquette becomes a game for youngsters if they have a small table of their own, set in the approved manner. Too, it gains in social meaning if two or more children eat together.

A State street store is now displaying a setup for two diners of the youngest generation. The table is oblong and maple and the chairs, set at either end of it, match. Individual doilies and napkins from Czechoslovakia in green and yellow are colorful and practical. The centerpiece is a prim little plant.

A glass, a plate, and knife and fork lie at each place. The glasses have rough surfaces which make them easy to handle and the plate rims slope definitely so that the child can help himself.

The table gains in interest if it's set by a window.

Preserving Leather.

To keep leather coverings on chairs and couches around the home in good condition, it is said that ordinary saddle soap will do the work efficiently and well.

Cabinet Boards for Ironing Convenient

THERE is a growing tendency to have more than one on-the-wall or on-the-door ironing board in the house.

There are cabinet ironing boards which require no recesses but may be fastened with long screws on the wall, directly over the plaster or on the back of a door.

Such cabinets which are completely out of the way when not in use project not more than two or three inches—and sometimes even less than two inches into the room. Panel doors conceal the board when it is closed and form a solid support when it is in service position.

Such cabinet ironing boards are useful not only in kitchen and laundry, but also in a sewing room or a bedroom.

THE BABY'S DIET — Choose it wisely and prepare it carefully. At one month old your baby should have orange juice. Do you know when to add vegetables, cereals, meat? Diet for babies from birth until 2 years of age is one of the features of "Building the Baby." You won't want to be without this valuable book. Price, 50 cents; by mail, 65 cents. On sale at the Chicago Tribune Advertising and Public Service Office, One South Dearborn street, and Tribune Tower Lobby, Chicago.

Miss Bartlett Helps to Plan Home Wedding

Gives Suggestions About Ceremony, Reception, and Proper Procedure.

"Table Manners," a new booklet by Helen Bartlett, is sold at the Tribune Public Service, One South Dearborn, for 3 cents. Its price by mail is 5 cents. Address Helen Bartlett, Chicago Tribune.

By Helen Bartlett.

VIA the mail bag:

"Will you please assist me in planning a home wedding? I will have two attendants and am to be given away by my father. Our house is large enough to accommodate seventy-five or a hundred people, but I do not know how we could serve dinner for so many. What time of the day is best? How do we enter the living room? Also, will you please settle a discussion as to whether we are obliged to provide chairs for the guests? D. M. M."

The home wedding should be a subtle combination of informality and dignity. The ceremony proper takes place in some spot in the house which will provide a suitable background and be in view of all the guests. Sometimes this is a focal point in front of a window, or between two. Sometimes, in large homes, it is the entrance hall.

There Should Be Two Entrances.

If the layout of the house permits, this place should be accessible by two different entrances. Clergyman, groom and best man enter one way, the bridesmaids, bride and her father by the other. Seats are not provided for the guests, who stand during the ceremony. The bride's mother and other members of the family mingle with the guests as they assemble.

When the ceremony is to begin, the clergyman, best man and groom enter the room, and take their places at the imaginary altar facing the guests. At the same time others of the bridal party enter, the two bridesmaids leading, walking together, followed by the bride on her father's right arm.

After giving his daughter away the father steps back to stand beside his wife. During the ceremony the bridal party stands with backs to the guests, facing the clergyman. At its conclusion they turn, and standing in the same place, receive the good wishes of the guests; there is no recessional. The clergyman usually leaves the room to change to street clothes, then joins the guests.

After an interval of receiving felicitations there is a general move in the direction of the dining room. Food is usually on the order of that served at a glorified tea. The bride and groom and the parents do not eat until they have spoken to all the guests.

Late Afternoon Is Fashionable Time.

The bride chooses the hour of the wedding. The most fashionable choice appears to be 4:30 or 5 o'clock with a reception following. Weddings are seldom followed by a large dinner.

Yes, by note or card sent after the funeral.

Stately Decanters Anticipating Repeal

ANTICIPATING the return of more aristocratic beverages than 3.2, a Chicago department store is trotting out stately decanters for wines and liqueurs. They are shown both in the classic motifs which have characterized them since Grecian days and with brisk hunting scenes.

In one of the latter sets, scotties race across a stubby decanter and glasses. Another flaunts the bright red scenes of an English hunting print. More sedate sets come in pure white, or in dark brown or blue or red, with exquisite designs traced in crystal or silver. The glasses usually six in number which accompany each decanter, may squat squarely on the table or have slim, short stems.

Book Contains Recipes, Napkins for Cocktails

THE most recent innovation in cocktail napkins is found on sale in the linen department of one of the State street stores. It is done in book form, called Americana.

Historical data, discussing the origin of the cocktail, together with some mouth water recipes, illustrated by dainty hand blocked linen cocktail napkins, are contained in Americana. "The Manhattan," "The New Orleans Drip" and "The Blue Blazer" are the most colorful of the group of 8 included in the book.

Model Supper Table Wears Blithe Colors

A BLITHE table for a supper party where beer and pretzels are the leit-motif is set up in a State street store for knowing hostesses to come and oberve.

Small, oblong trays ["social supper trays," if you must know the name!] in different colors, and generous glasses, decorated with the coats of arms of famous German brewing houses, are the equipment furnished each guest. At either end of the table pretzel dishes take their stand, one tin, the other a miniature wooden bucket.

Salt and pepper shakers are like beer kegs. The centerpiece is a jolly Negro waiter on a wooden circle that has places for six glasses. He is flanked by two cheerfully useless little wooden figures. The cloth is of checked oilcloth.

The table shown is a study in the harmonious use of riotous colors. The cloth is blue, the trays alternately green and orange and the ornaments red and white.

Shears and Needles Busy as Women Strive for $250 in Prizes Offered in Tribune Paris Pattern Contest

All Four Models Are Printed Today

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Every woman is going to want a new frock to wear during the coming holidays, and such a dress as pattern No. 5005, with Paris chic sewed into its very seams, is within the capacity of the home dressmaker.

The leading Paris fashion for afternoon dresses, which can be worn for informal evening also, is one which has sleeves and bodice back in different material to the fabric of the dress. Mainbocher, Jean Patou, Lanvin, and all of the great dressmakers make a point of such frocks as the one shown today.

This dress is charming, made of a flat crêpe silk, with sleeves, bodice back, sides, and sash of satin. Velvet combined with satin is stunning if one wants to be really grand, or it can be made of a soft wool with a satin top. Paris makes this into an evening frock, with long sleeves, by making the top in lace or net.

The way in which the dress comes up to make a small jabot scarf at the neck is a fashionable detail.

This dress may be made also with short sleeves of light colored satin laced up with narrow velvet ribbon in the color of the dress, if you want to wear a short sleeved frock. The ribbon can lace up on eyelets if you are good at hand work. The ribbon lacings are a Chanel feature.

Today we are reprinting the Paris patterns offered previously this month. The first, No. 5001, is for a street frock that features the slim silhouette, the low back neckline featured by Vionnet and the feminine shoulder treatment of Schiaparelli inspiration. In wool it is a practical costume for work or for street; in satin it is an eminently attractive informal afternoon dress.

Pattern No. 5002 is for the versatile gown, the costume beloved of the Parisienne. Originally this model was in smoke gray crêpe with the huge bow of Burgundy satin and a trousseau of bows in other fabrics and colors to make many costumes of one. Slits at the neck and one in the flat belt keep the bows in place.

Our third Paris pattern, No. 5003, offered last Sunday, also added versatility to its virtues. The softly draped neck is high in front and falls along the shoulder blades in back. The big sleeves, à la Vionnet, are shirred into the blouse and the collar of striped material is thrown around the neck like a sling. Plain color for the frock and a bright stripe for collar and cuffs are the most popular combination.

Home Dressmakers Will Get Cash

IN the homes of thousands of women who have chosen one or more of the four CHICAGO TRIBUNE Paris patterns published this month the sound of the snipping of shears is a preliminary to the click of a small camera. These women have made or are making Paris costumes with their own hands; in addition they are preparing to compete for the $250 in cash prizes offered them by THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

The four patterns offered during October by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE Paris pattern service, which has now become a permanent SUNDAY TRIBUNE feature, are those around which the contest centers.

Women who use one or all of these patterns are invited to have snapshots of themselves taken in the finished garment and to submit these pictures to Rhea Seeger, TRIBUNE fashion expert.

Miss Seeger, assisted by a committee of stylists and fashion editors, will select from the photographs the most successful Paris-patterned costume and to its maker award a cash prize of $50. Second prize will be $30 and the third award $20. In addition there will be seven awards of $10 each and sixteen of $5 each.

Awards will be based only on the successful adaptation of the pattern chosen; photographic quality will not be considered. Snapshots are preferred; expensive photographs are not desired.

All pictures submitted should have the name and full address of the home dressmaker written or printed clearly on the back. The snapshots, addressed to Rhea Seeger, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, should be mailed before midnight of Nov. 19. No pictures will be returned.

The date of publication of the awards will be announced later.

[Note that orders for patterns should be sent to the New York address given in the order blank. Snapshots of yourself in the finished costume, which you enter in the $250 prize competition, should be addressed to Rhea Seeger, Chicago Tribune, Chicago.]

Witches and Goblins Conjure Up Haunts for Spookiest of Halloween Festivities

Masquerade Party Means Lots of Merriment for Every One.

By Dorothy Parkhurst.

OOOOOH! See, right behind you, looks like a ghost! Eeeek! Was that a cat brushing my ankle? Lookit! A black cat! Ssh!

You guessed right. We were just listening in on the grewsome beginning of a hilarious Halloween party. And can you think of a better night for a party than this night of nights, the night of ghosts, goblins, witches, and spooks?

Of course you'll have the party a masquerade. You can let off a lot of steam by being somebody else for a while. The timid soul will come bedecked as a ghost, scaring every one by moaning weirdly and clutching with icy fingers. Perhaps others will dress according to their suppressed desires—movie actresses, toe dancers, aviators, and what not.

Give the Guests a Spooky Greeting.

The setting for the party should be as dark and spooky as the haunted house of the most hair raising thrillers. Better have a ghost to greet the guests. A cold rubber glove filled with liver will furnish the welcoming handshake. All the lighting should be furnished by jack o' lanterns (both grinning and frowning varieties) and by floor lamps dressed up to resemble witches, scarecrows, and ghosts. Cover the light bulbs with blue paper, place masks in front of them, and dress the lamps in whatever manner your heart desires. If any of your neighbors own a black cat, invite it over, too. Imitation bats dangling on rubber bands suspended from the ceiling will add to the weird effect.

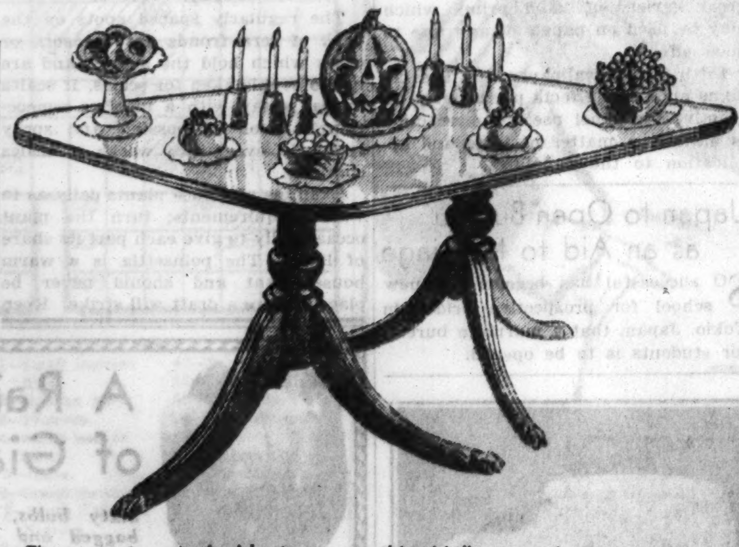
As each guest enters, pin a number on him. Then furnish every one with a pencil and paper and have a "Who's Who" contest. The person who guesses the most identities correctly is given a prize.

Be Sure to Have a Ghost Story.

And now is the time for an uncanny ghost or murder story. The story teller striving for extreme realism might pass around different parts of the anatomy (secured from the butcher). These will include a calf's heart, liver, cooked macaroni "blood vessels," and all sorts of large bones. And the darker the room, the shriller the screams that will be forthcoming.

Or, if there is no talented story teller present, there might be a continuous story which one person starts and the next one picks up at a crucial moment, thus being continued around the group.

Since Oct. 31 is the date folks are supposed to learn all about their future wealth, health, and happiness, decorate a corner for a fortune teller's booth and dress up some 'maginative person as the witch who reveals the future to each guest in turn.



The grinning jack-o'-lantern on this Halloween buffet table is surrounded by carrot candlesticks, grapes, marshmallows in cabbage shells, and nuts in scooped-out turnip dishes. Isn't it clever?

Bookends May Match Mood of Owner's Library

BOOKENDS this year may suit the mood of the volumes themselves as well as complementing interior decoration. Profiles of George Washington in metal and miniature statues of Columbus, gallantly waving his hat to the world at large, make appropriate support for tomes on history and politics. Lovers of adventure tales can surround their favorite books with dashing buccaneers in colorful clothes and militant pose. A set of James Fenimore Cooper or assorted books of pioneer tales can be bucked up by metal Indians on horseback.

Animals are, as usual, legion. Besides the traditional scotties and elephants, there are cats, ducks, herons, deer, owls, wildcats, squirrels. One store has a smart pair of modernistic turkeys done in glazed bronze and a set of fierce glaring ducks, also fashioned more after the manner of art than nature.

As in most household accessories this fall, black and white is the favorite color scheme. In one pair of bookends it is carried out by pensive-looking white cats, couchant on a black metal base, in another by a feminine figure in purest white, also reclining on a black rectangle.

Grotesquerie is almost entirely gone from bookends—except for an occasional pair of skeptical looking brass monkeys. Plain, figureless bookends come in lovely designs. One pair is built of cubes of white and dark red marble, arranged with geometrical precision. Another stately set, made of gold, has a rich allover design of classical motif.

ADULT TOUCHES MARK TRINKETS FOR CHILDREN

THOUGHTS for children's gifts: Good little girls and boys will be thrilled by possession of a real wrist watch. But they'll like their watches even better than the ones papa and mama wear because they have little Mickey Mouses and Orphan Annies on their faces. Mickey Mouse points to the time with his two front paws. The watches are unbreakable and guaranteed to run.

For the child's playroom there are funny little dogs' heads carved from wood, with eyes that tell the time. One eye gives the hour, the other eye the minutes.

And little girls may now sport bead bags and leather purses, like mother's, only smaller. These come in all colors to match new fall clothes.

Sister will be much more anxious to hang up her hat when she comes home if she has a doggie hat rack. The rack perches on top of a fluffy dog's head, and the children will find it amusing to see the dogs wearing their hats.

Jewelry for children is patterned after adults' jewelry. There are small colored pendants, lockets, and carved ivory chains and flowers. Bracelets for little girls are adorned with colored bone dogs and elephants. And pins are fashioned like queer little modernistic animals of all kinds. To keep their possessions in order there are small leather jewelry cases in bright colors.

Paris Favors Plaided Materials for Diversified Wear

The home dressmaker about to create her season's wardrobe can't afford to be without the fall and winter edition of the Chicago Tribune Book of Clotilde Fashions, the 48 page issue showing the latest styles in color and giving valuable suggestions about fabrics and accessories. It is 15 cents a copy, but when ordered with a pattern the price is 10 cents. Address Clotilde Patterns, Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Station, New York City, or call at the Tribune Public Service Office, One South Dearborn, Chicago.

By Clotilde.

PLAIDED or checked woolen dresses are charming on junior girls, and, if it interests you, Paris is keen about plaids. Plaided designs are shown on everything from woolen sports frocks to more formal velvet frocks, so all you have to do will be to select your checked material and make a dress by pattern No. 3004.

A tiny checked plaid in brown and yellow made the original model, and the collar was of white bengaline silk. A brown suede belt was worn, although one of the dress material may be used instead.

It's not difficult to make and is smart and becoming when finished. A choice of two kinds of sleeves is given, but the long ones will be preferred for this time of year. They are exceptionally good looking, full length and cut in one piece. They fit snugly at the wrists and boast a becoming fullness on the upper half. The bodice is simplicity itself to cut and make, and the pretty skirt, with the curved line across the top in front, and the graceful fullness at the hem, is cut in two parts. Always pin baste, and stitch these seams from the top toward the bottom. Fit the skirt close to the waist and hips, but take care not to make it really tight.

Little Girls Get French Model.

Pattern No. 3375 is for one of those darling jumper type dresses for small girls. It's typically French with its lapel shoulders, turnover collar, and prettily grouped skirt plaits.

The blouse is cut up to the neckline, and finished with a detachable white piqué collar. The sleeves are full length, and show narrow white cuffs. The neck and armholes of the jumper should be faced with the dress material, cut exactly like the parts to be faced, and the collar may be lined, cut double, or finished with a bound edge. The belt or band joining the skirt and waist ends in sash ends at the center back, while the skirt plaits flare gracefully.

Blue broadcloth combined with blue and white dimity, with collar and cuffs of white piqué, would be darling, and so would a navy blue wool challis jumper with white broadcloth for the blouse.

Here's an Asset to Any Wardrobe.

Naturally girls enjoy wearing good looking clothes in the classroom, and a dress made by the pattern, No. 2966, will be a smart addition to any wardrobe. The simple bodice is finished at the neck by a pretty collar and a large flat bow. The long sleeves have white turnover cuffs. Both collar and cuffs should be detachable, and of white piqué. The skirt, with panel front, deep yoke to the side seams, and plaits on each side of the panel front panels, is extremely graceful.

It should, of course, be made of woolen. A hairy tweed weave, or a tweed jersey in rust or brown shades would be lovely.

Scarlet Coq Muff Lends Drama to Black Gowns

DRAMATIC accompaniment to the perennially popular black velvet or chiffon evening or dinner gown would be a diminutive round muff of scarlet coq feathers seen in a Chicago shop. The demure girls will stick to using it as a muff. The striking types will fancy it as a colorful cuff for one slim arm.

Kilowatt Efficiency and Candlelight Design Are Gracefully United in the Latest Wall Fixtures

Antique Mien Hides Dynamic Energy

"Color Magic in Your Rooms," a new booklet by Miss Winslow, which tells the amateur decorator how to plan color schemes, what tones to avoid and what to choose to bring beauty to her home, may be had for 5 cents by mail, 3 cents at the Public Service Office, One South Dearborn.

By Claire Winslow.

IT IS a far cry from the crude and inefficient lighting devices of our ancestors to the beautiful sidelights and lamps of the present time. Nowadays, no matter what style of furnishings we plan for our rooms, there are fixtures designed to harmonize and to give that unifying touch every well dressed interior needs. And at a reasonable price, too. A few years ago good looking, nicely styled lighting fixtures were expensive, a single sidelight, for example, selling around $50. But the tale of the price tag is quite different today.

Scouting about we found some especially nice sidelights we're showing you today in the illustrations. They are designed and made right here in Chicago and are sold direct from the factory and at two loop stores.

Brackets Take Cue from Eighteenth Century France.

Pictures Nos. 1 and 3 are Directoire and Empire brackets, respectively, No. 1 being of old French green and gold with little gold stars typical of the period, in a circle. No. 3 shows a cluster of arrows caught in a black metal band on which are gold stars in relief. The colors are French gold and black and the lights are of the taper variety. The single gold loop at the top gives an interesting finish.

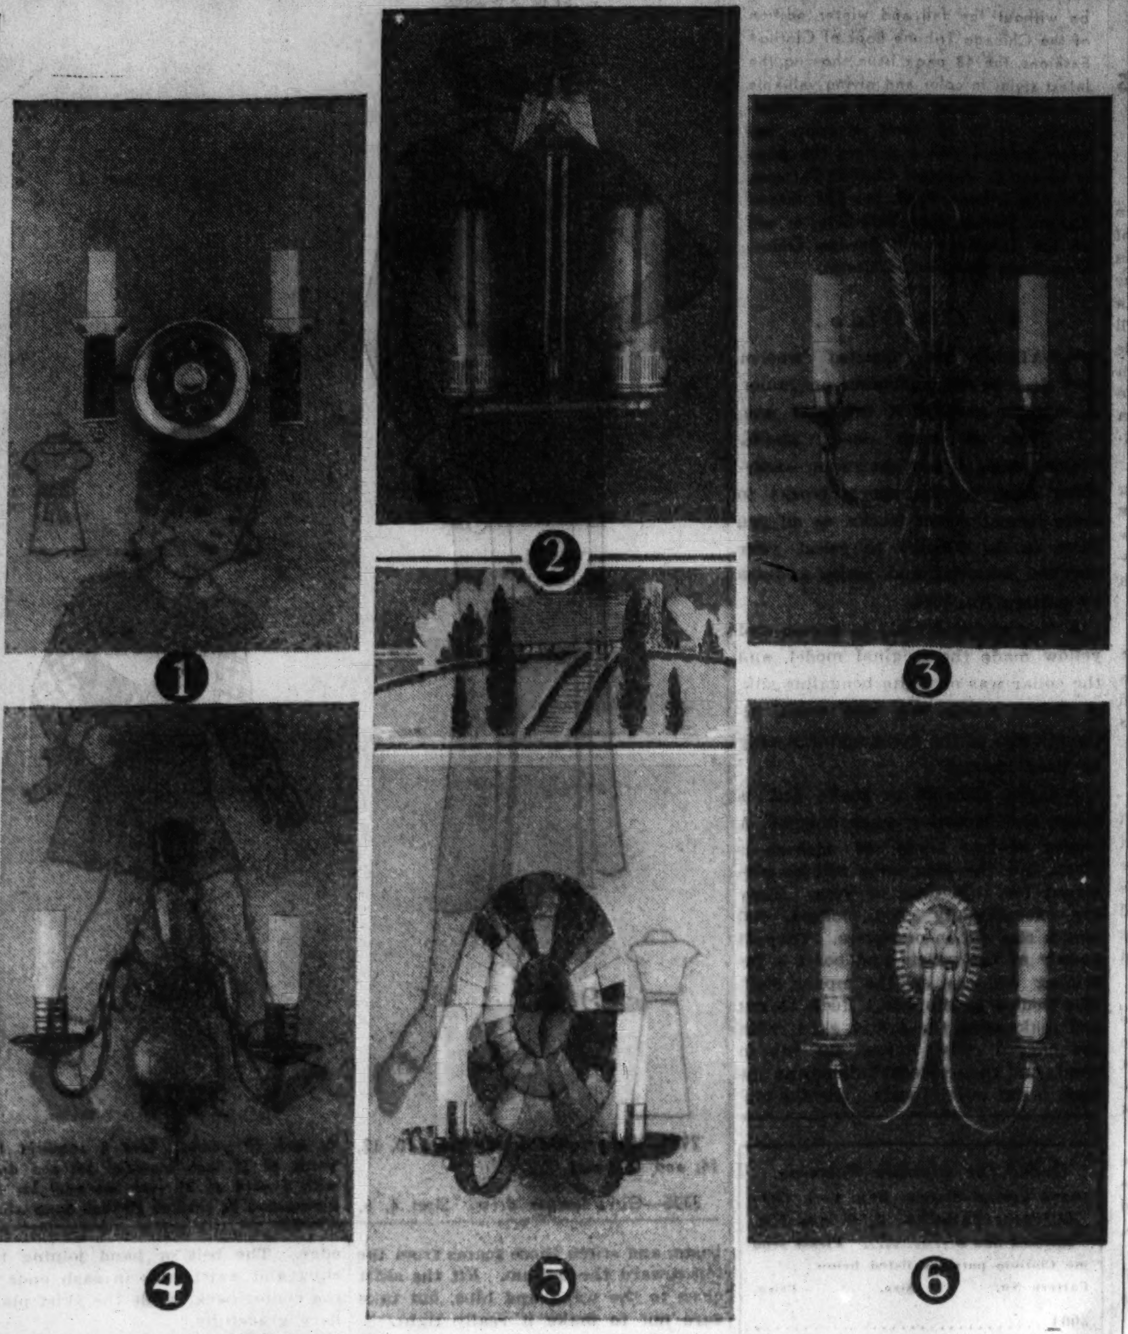
Between these two pictures is one of a most artistic and appropriate two-bulb sidelight for a Federal American or Colonial room. It has the gold eagle, so typical of that era, and the glass shaded receptacles for candles [in this case electric ones, of course]. It is perfect in the Colonial living room, so popular today, filled with mahogany reproductions of antiques, the woodwork a cream white enamel, and the fireplace and mantel white, also.

Flemish Fixtures for Room of Sturdy Mien.

The first photograph in the lower row shows an interesting bracket of Flemish inspiration that would be attractive in a room done in English oak, for example, or in rather massive dark beechwood, or in an early American maple interior. It suggests sturdy chairs and tables, gay red toiles, an open hearth, simple furnishings.

No. 5 is an early American sconce, particularly attractive because of the small sections of mirror grass that are fitted together to form the back. The lights are reflected in this mirror in a lovely fashion. It may be had either in old brass or pewter.

Lastly, No. 6 shows a late 18th century English bracket, ideal for the Georgian room, of brushed silver. The graceful curves of the two metal arms and the interesting detail work make fixtures such as this highly decorative features of any room.



Nos. 1 and 3 are sidelights for Directoire and Empire rooms, while No. 2 is appropriate in a Federal American or Colonial interior. It is of colonial gold and black metal with crystal glass chimneys. No. 4 is a Flemish bracket in brass; No. 5, an interesting early American mirror sconce, and No. 6, a brushed silver fixture designed for a late 18th century English room. All made and sold in Chicago.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Mountain School Asks Sally for Discarded Textbooks of All Types to Supply Many Needy Students.

By Sally Joy Brown.

WE have recently had an appeal from a university which serves the mountain people of the southern Appalachian area. The majority of the students come from simple mountain homes, homes where cooking is done over great open fireplaces, where clothing is obtained by the weaving and spinning of cotton, wool and flax, where luxuries are few and far between.

In this rough, broken country, there are only occasional roads, all but impassable at their best, and completely so at their worst. Primitive cabins, usually of logs, still house many thousands of people in this region. Owing to the physical makeup and economic condition in this section, the schooling of children is neglected. School terms are absurdly short and a high percentage of illiteracy is the natural result.

For more than thirty years this university has been endeavoring to encourage and educate these people, and their difficulties are immeasurably enhanced by the hardships and limitations which the poverty and isolation of this territory impose. Students work their way through school, doing all the service work of the institution, running the large farm, doing everything possible to earn their education, since money is extremely scarce.

The school, which is located in Tennessee, is much in need of books, and is without the necessary funds to obtain them, hence this appeal. Their need includes volumes of every type, fiction, languages, mathematics, bacteriology, botany, home economics, etc.

"Dear Miss Brown: My husband has been out of work for the last three years, and we have had to ask for relief. We have six small children, and as the baby is just beginning to walk and our floors are cold and damp I should like to secure a rug. Do you think one of your readers has an old one we could have?

"MRS. McL."

Can any one fill the need mentioned by this physician?

"Dear Miss Brown: I have an elderly gentleman patient recently discharged from the county hospital who is in dire need of an ambulatory lower limb splint, the type that would serve to support an injury to the lower one-third of the femur. If you should know of any one who could loan this man such an apparatus for six or eight weeks' time I will see that it is returned in exactly the same condition as received. Obtaining this splint will remove this man from county aid, and materially shorten his convalescence. H. B. C."

"My Dear Miss Brown: I am writing at the request of a large family in need. I have know them a long time and believe them deserving of help. The father is sickly and the grown sons have been unemployed for two years. Their wants are many, but their greatest need at present is bedding. They just haven't any blankets or comforters. If any one has any bed clothes to give away may these people have some? They will be glad to call for them anywhere. M. J. R."

This is but one of the many urgent requests for bedding now in our files. If you have any to dispose of, won't you let us know?

One of our numerous pleas for baby clothing runs as follows:

"Dear Miss Brown: I have a niece with me who is to become a mother in two months. Her husband has been out of work for nearly a year. She has no clothing of any kind for the expected child. Anything any of your readers have and care to give would be greatly appreciated.

"MRS. B. M."

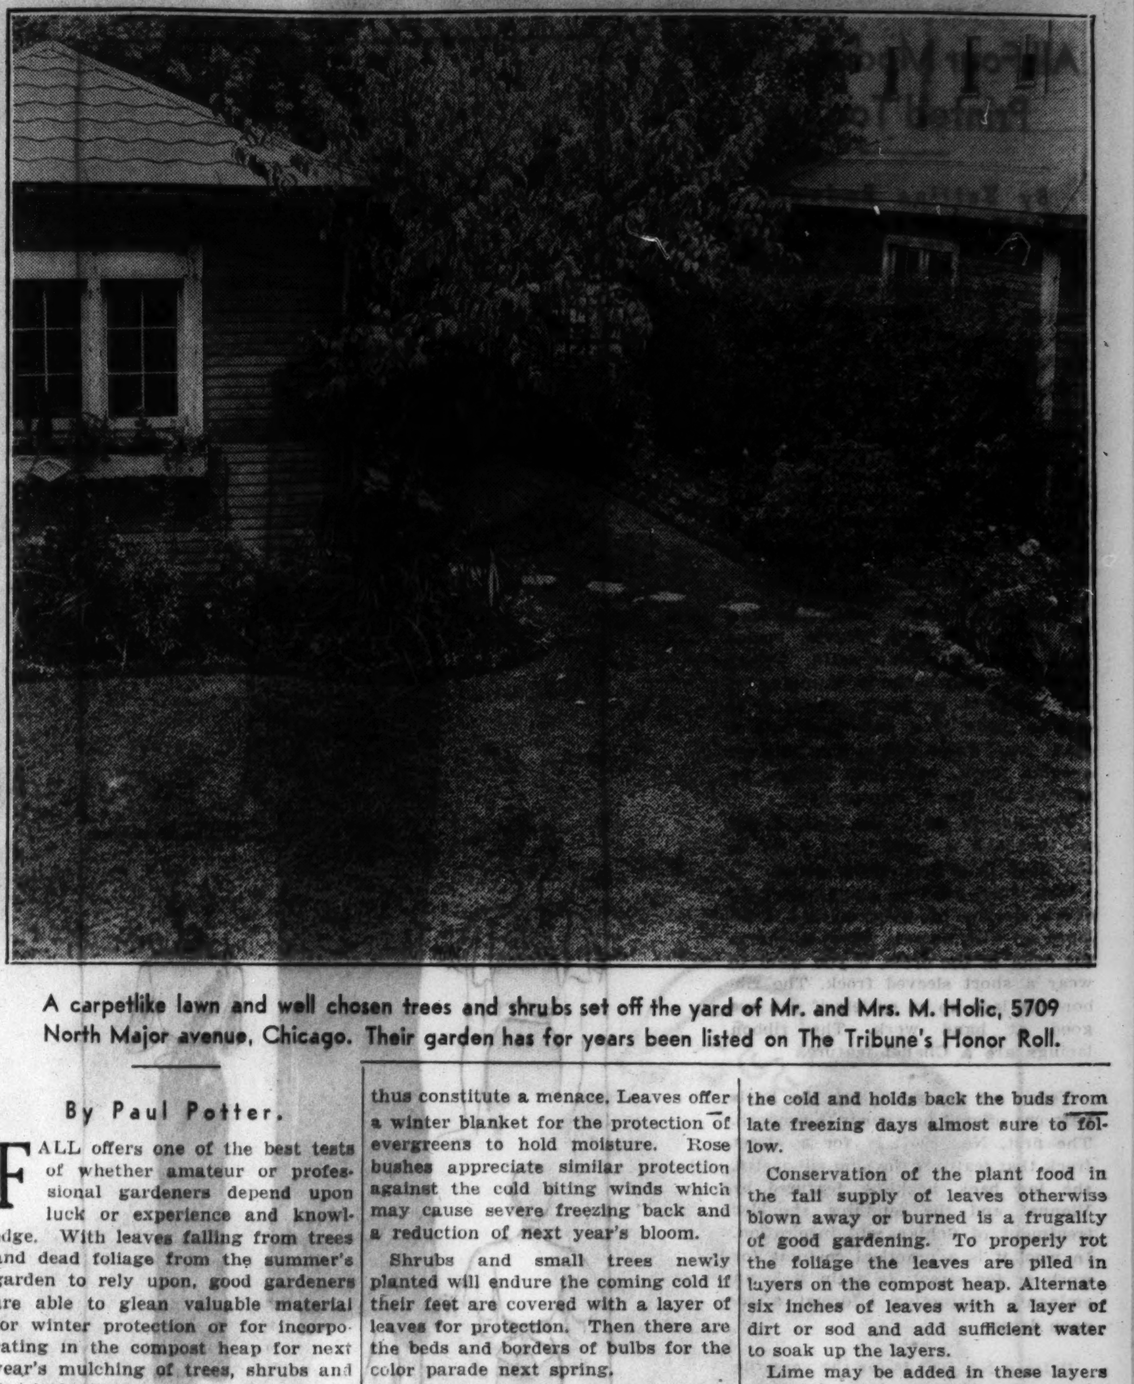
A case worker recently sent this appeal to me:

"Dear Miss Brown: Do you think one of your readers on the south side has a piano I could have? I am interested in a family consisting of a mother and eleven children, only two of them of working age. I found Mrs. M. to have a wonderful musical education and ability, and the older children play well. After the recent death of their father it was necessary that they sell their piano in order to obtain money for food. They miss the instrument a great deal as it has provided almost their only pleasure of recent years and I would like to assist in securing one for them. L. M."

Any one with a love for music can understand just how much a piano would mean to this family.

Alert Gardeners Salvage Fallen Leaves for Winter Covering for Tender Plants



A carpetlike lawn and well chosen trees and shrubs set off the yard of Mr. and Mrs. M. Holic, 5709 North Major avenue, Chicago. Their garden has for years been listed on The Tribune's Honor Roll.

By Paul Potter.

FALL offers one of the best tests of whether amateur or professional gardeners depend upon luck or experience and knowledge. With leaves falling from trees and dead foliage from the summer's garden to rely upon, good gardeners are able to glean valuable material for winter protection or for incorporating in the compost heap for next year's mulching of trees, shrubs and floral plantings.

In fact, it's considered a major crime in gardening to burn leaves and other compost materials unless they contain weed seeds or are diseased and thus constitute a menace. Leaves offer a winter blanket for the protection of evergreens to hold moisture. Rose bushes appreciate similar protection against the cold biting winds which may cause severe freezing back and a reduction of next year's bloom.

Shrubs and small trees newly planted will endure the coming cold if their feet are covered with a layer of leaves for protection. Then there are the beds and borders of bulbs for the color parade next spring.

Wait until a heavy freeze has occurred. Then provide a leafy mulch, kept in place by strips of scantling. When the first warm days occur between cold spells, the mulch retains the cold and holds back the buds from late freezing days almost sure to follow.

Conservation of the plant food in the fall supply of leaves otherwise blown away or burned is a frugality of good gardening. To properly rot the foliage the leaves are piled in layers on the compost heap. Alternate six inches of leaves with a layer of dirt or sod and add sufficient water to soak up the layers.

Lime may be added in these layers if the compost is to be incorporated next year into soil where the acidity is an objection. The compost is spread out on the soil before spading or plowing under.

Paneled Walls Are Acquiring Papered Finish

THERE was a decorative period several years ago which resulted in the production of a great many paneled walls of one kind or another. These paneled walls often had no coloring whatever about them beyond some point of neutral shade.

During the last few years there has been a tendency on the part of owners of such rooms to get away from the bleakness which formerly they worshiped. Many have employed wallpaper with which to fill in these panels. There are several types of paper peculiarly appropriate for such work. Which should be selected is a matter of taste, circumstances, and study of the specific room. Without prejudice in favor of any type of wallpaper, let us name them in the following order.

First, there are scenic effects. These are particularly appropriate for large panels. Many of them are reproductions of old papers; some are modern in design. Their price is reasonable, and properly hung in panels they virtually become pictures.

Second, there are the flocks or wool textured papers. These are marked for their richness. They have all the beauty that could be obtained from any woven material or fabric and yet are highly sanitary. Flocks give a warmth difficult to secure by any other treatment.

Third are the pressed papers which may be secured in many qualities and designs and are particularly marked for their recognition of the formal in classical design. Fourth, there is a great variety of hand prints which may be used on panels of any size to good effect.

Fifth, every wallpaper line has designs and color effects particularly attractive for panel use. The selection is entirely a matter of taste and application to the panelings.

Japan to Open Bureau as an Aid to Marriage

SO successful has become the new school for prospective brides in Tokio, Japan, that a marriage bureau for students is to be opened.

THIS WEEK IN THE GARDEN

Monday, Oct. 30.

Unless the bulbous stock for indoor use has already been procured this should be done without delay. Pot up a varied assortment to have a succession of bloom all winter.

Pot chrysanthemums may be purchased for embellishing the window at any time. As with all flowering pot plants, see that watering is carefully done each day, for plants in flower become dry rapidly.

Tuesday, Oct. 31.

A good, small growing tree for the yard is the thornless honey locust [Gleditsia triacanthos inermis]. Its light, airy foliage, and graceful form fits in well with other plants.

Spade up the ground to have it in the best condition for sowing hardy annuals. Nothing like a good seedbed for young seedlings. Sowing should be done late enough to prevent immature growth and the likelihood of injury from frost.

Watch the house plants and make a special effort to grow specimen plants. See that the sanseveria, palm, and pandanus are not permitted to remain too long in dense shade, or until they become soft. The north window will grow good Boston ferns.

Wednesday, Nov. 1.

Plant a few berried shrubs to lure the birds and for the beauty of the fruits. Suggestions include cotoneaster, aronia or chokeberry, sambuscus or elderberry, cornus or dogwood, lonicera or bishhoneysuckle, and Japanese barberry [berberis].

Thursday, Nov. 2.

The regularly spaced spots on the back of fern fronds are the sori, or cases which hold the spores, and are not to be mistaken for scales. If scales appear spray with a nicotine concoction as soon as possible and spray regularly every two weeks if scales continue.

Examine all house plants daily as to water requirements; turn the plant occasionally to give each part its share of light. The poinsettia is a warm house plant and should never be placed where a draft will strike. Keep the temperature at not less than 60 degrees, otherwise the leaves will turn yellow and fall. It is a difficult plant to carry from the young stage to the flowering period on account of changes of temperature and the dry condition.

Friday, Nov. 3.

Geraniums that have bloomed all summer in the garden will not do so in the house. Buy new, young, and well developed stock if flowers are to be had. Give the maximum of light; do not overwater, and keep in comparatively small pots, for when overpotted these plants fail to flower well.

The Mme. Salleroi geranium is a small, silvery leaved plant that is excellent for house culture. Rose geraniums should be included because of their fragrant leaves, and deliciously green color.

Saturday, Nov. 4.

Clean the garden tools and oil the parts to prevent injury from rust. Oil the hoes after a thorough cleaning and they will be as bright in spring as the day they were bought.

Get the hose under cover.

The lily of the valley may be flowered at any time but the pips should be purchased from a reputable house. Simply crowd a few pips in spaghnum moss in a container which will fit the number desired, place in the dark for a few days, and later in the light, and the blooms will appear as if by magic.

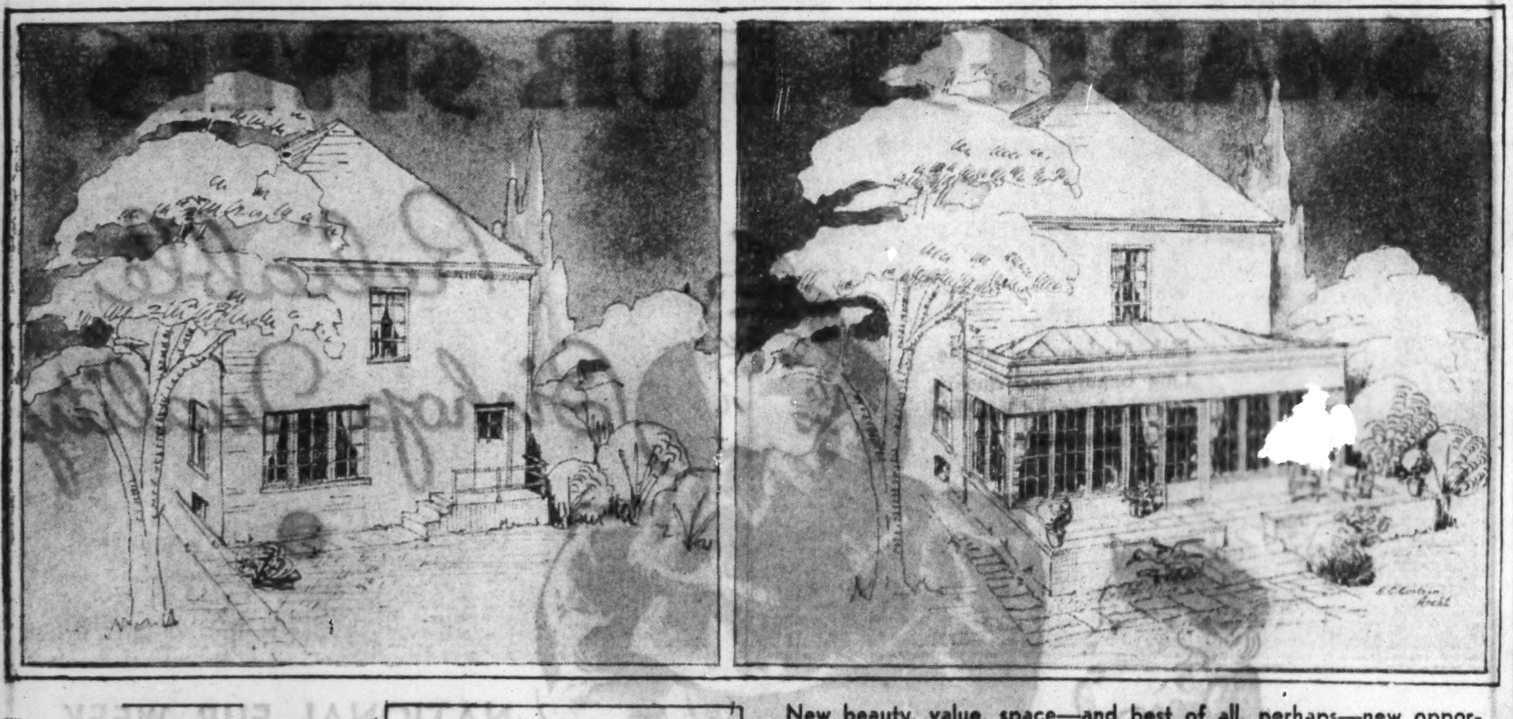
Sparkling Glass Transforms a Breezy Porch to Radiant, Sun Filled Room for Year Round Use



New beauty, value, space—and best of all, perhaps—new opportunities for sun bathed rooms within the home can be secured by glazing an existing porch or building a new one in the manner shown in the sketch at the left. No matter the age of the dwellers in a house, an "out door sunroom" which is enclosed and heated for winter comfort is a year round joy and delight. The bare side of a house or a rear wall, such as the one shown in the picture at the left, offers space for the addition of a glazed porch, bay or sunroom. Nor is it possible to overestimate the advantages to be had from such sun bathed spaces within a home during the chill, cold seasons of the year when a house needs all the light it can get.

Construction Costs Are Small

If you are wondering just how to change the face of your furniture, woodwork, walls or floors, write to Louise Bergelt, Chicago Tribune, for the booklets:

"Refinishing Furniture," 5 cents, 7 cents by mail.

"Refinishing Woodwork," 5 cents, 7 cents by mail.

"Refinishing Walls, Floor, Ceilings," 5 cents, 7 cents by mail.

By Louise Bergelt.

IN house or in apartment an outside porch, enclosed with glass, and heated, lighted, and furnished, is a manifest asset.

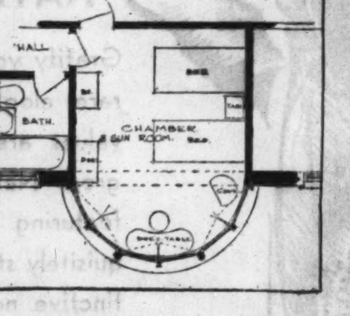
IF we have been enjoying these past warm months some little porch, open or screened in, for warm weather use, now is the propitious moment to glaze it in.

IF we have some old fashioned, exposed porch which has long outlived its ornamental days, now is a seasonable time to remove it and to build in its place a new, modern, glazed-in sunroom.

IF we are pressed for more space, in need of an extra, sunlit room for growing youngsters or for frailer, older family members, the month is at hand to provide that space.

Indeed, whatever our individual domestic demands may be, we all of us want as many bright, sunny spots in our homes in winter as we can afford. Many of us, moreover, want these spaces more than ever before, since in so many instances houses are accommodating beneath their roofs more people than in previous years.

The sketches today, showing in the one case a large sunroom added to the rear of an average sized house, and in the other case a small bay built into a home, are practical examples of possible house enlargement. The sketches were designed by Elmer C. Carlson, architect, 7910 Cottage Grove avenue.



In the cold weather months we cannot have to much sun and light in our bedrooms. The plan seen above shows how easily a semi-circular bay, large enough to accommodate a day bed or a dressing table and chair, can be built into a home.

Architect's Advice Needed for Important Alterations.

When an existing porch is to be enclosed with glass, remodeling firms, material supply houses, lumber dealers, and local carpenters are all available sources to consult regarding the work. There are still big bargains to be had in materials, and by improving a house at the low costs possible today the worth of your house will advance proportionately when values are again restored to normal.

If, however, one is starting on any really important alteration in the exterior or the interior of a house, on the adding of a porch or a sunroom which will affect its shape or its appearance, a competent architect should be consulted. He can be asked merely to make rough sketches of the proposed changes and give suggestions as to the simplest and best methods of making the desired improvements. The expense of such advice will not be high and much money may be saved and many mistakes avoided. Again, the entire work, from the drawing of the plans and the specifications to the entire supervision of the job, may be placed in the architect's hands.

Newest Glass Admits Ultra-Violet Rays.

The space created by building a sunroom at the rear of the house can be used for divers purposes. It can serve as sleeping quarters for the children, as playroom for them, or it can be converted into a large breakfast and lounging room for the entire family. The additional space afforded is obvious. In winter its sun bathed interior with light from three sides provides healthy and abundant indoor exposure to the sun's rays. [Especially this is true if the windows are glazed with the now well known type of glass which admits a considerable amount of the ultra violet rays of the sun.]

Sometimes a porch can be profitably removed from the front of the house to the side, if its space is needed for living purposes. In this way a porch is given more privacy. A porch at the front of the house can suffer from a standpoint of real livableness if it forms the approach to the house, for in this way it is a traffic lane for incoming and outgoing family and friends.

Many a house and many an apartment has a porch which would need but little change to convert it into a winter sunroom or a winter bedroom.

Glazing May Be Decorative as Well as Health-Giving.

In glazing such a porch choose as good a type of glass as can be afforded, that it may be clear and sparkling. Much improvement has been made in window glass in the last few years. From its former state, that of being a most ordinary building material for the sole and simple purpose of admitting light, it has now become a decorative medium as well as a health giving one, and we see ornamental glass of various kinds for doors, windows, and interior decorative effects of various kinds.

Like an attic or a basement, the porch of today can be put to work for the family good. It can become a part of the house, properly glazed, and heated, and furnished. When we need more space it is ready for the taking, or if it isn't all ready and waiting to be utilized it can be built on and serve a definite usefulness in the domestic régime.

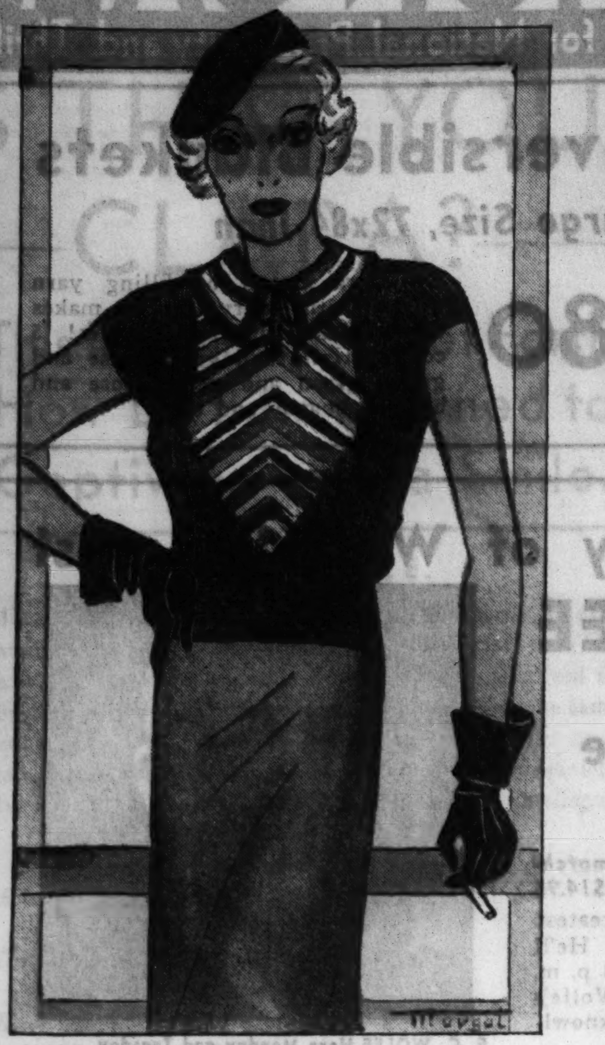
Knit Blouse Revives the Dickey for Gay Relief from Monotones



By Jean Macdonald.

DAILY the pages of knitting fashions are turned back only to discover that what is so smart and new today was most popular a decade or two ago. The blouse illustrated today is a simple knitted one—with an old fashioned "dickey" effect, which is one of the newest ways of introducing color in a monotone suit. When jacket or cape is removed one still has an attractive blouse with tiny cap sleeves. A Peter Pan collar is perennially youthful and becoming, and the straight knitted band at the hip runs on the cross to give sleek molded line.

The persistent knitter who has a medley of odd yarns ranging from half a ball to half a dozen yards will find it exactly what she needs to make a variegated vestee. This particular blouse is designed to avoid use of charts, crossed threads or meddlesome balls of yarn hanging on rubber bands that impede the progress of the knitter. Made in black with shades of tomato, orange, yellow, rose and a thin line of bright blue, it is easily and quickly knitted. Don't be hesitant about using strong colors, because the effect is striking and in no way bizarre. Boucle, 4 ply wool, rayon or luster yarn may be used in a a blouse of this type.

HOW TO ORDER.

If you wish instructions for making the vestee blouse illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

Old Woman in Shoe and Her Family Here Again

A SWEET toy for the young child who has measles of mumps or just rainy day blues is a cunning little leather shoe about six inches high that belongs undoubtedly to the old woman of the nursery rhyme, the one who had so many children she didn't know what to do.

The shoe is chock full of baby dolls. And perched on the top of the doll pile is the old woman herself, looking just the right bit bothered by her troubles.

Wire Cutters Furnish Evenly Sliced Cheese

DO you envy the grocer the thin, smooth slices of cheese he produces? It's simply done with a new cutter made up of tiny wire. Small sized cutters of the same variety may be purchased by the housewife. The handles come in a wide range of colors and it's said they cut equally smooth slices of ice box cookie dough.

Feminine Rooters Like Latest Sets of Three Sweaters

THE well dressed feminine football rooter will keep warm this season in not one, but three, sweaters. And she won't look like a bundle either. Her first sweater will be a sleazy affair of thin wool, sans sleeves. The next layer, also of thin wool, will have elbow length sleeves. The outside jacket constituting the third layer will be an honest to goodness sweater jacket that comes down to the hips and has long sleeves. The girls think it's fun to have each of the three a different color.

And a further new development in woolens is the skull cap, closely knitted and even closer fitting, that fits like a baby's cap. On the top is outlined a circle in contrasting color, its edges defined by short fringe. It gives the effect of a monk's tonsure and is jauntily becoming to the pert type.

USED DURING OR AFTER DINNER

It's called a "grape bottle," this lovely green reproduction of an antique. With the four little cups it may be used for liquers, but original hostesses have made smart use of a pair to serve as cruets or just one for French dressing. A local shop is displaying it.

Appetizers of All Nations Listed in Tribune Booklet

HAVE you met the pretzel canapé? Here's how this clever little appetizer is made: Fill the hollows of small pretzels with creamy Roquefort cheese and roll in ground pretzel crumbs. Chill before serving.

This is but one of the unusual appetizer recipes found in Mary Meade's booklet, "Appetizers . . . How to Make Them . . . When to Serve them." Along with an assortment of thirty recipes for canapés, cocktails, and appetizers, the booklet contains directions for appetizing guests in the Italian, Swedish, German, Greek, Russian, French, and American manner. The booklet is sold at the Public Service Office, One South Dearborn street, for 3 cents. Or send 5 cents, coin or stamps, with your name and address to Mary Meade, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

DON'T BE AFRAID, IT'S REALLY HARMLESS

This glass fish with such fierce fins and surprised eyes may serve as a table decoration or just a bright bit of color on bookshelf or mantel. It's a lovely shade of sea green and is sold in a Chicago shop.

THE TABLE GOES EMPIRE

China and crystal keep in step with the nineteenth century movement with the introduction of the new Empire pattern. The service plate is ivory porcelain with the typical Empire design in 22 K. gold. The two decorative bands may be green, blue or burgundy. Every type of goblet is obtainable in fine crystal bearing the same design. Seen at the Merchandise Mart and sold in Chicago shops.

Bright Ruffles Flirt on Slips for Lace Gowns

SOPHISTICATION, with just the right paradoxical touch of the "Little Women" note, is simply rampant in the new clothes for debs and subdebs. Trains on gowns are almost commonplace; so are the very girly-girly touches like big bows tied beneath the chin, dainty little hair ornaments and the unmilitary epaulets, otherwise known as angel wings, that top the most beguiling frocks.

Swishy taffeta petticoats, enough like grandmother's to make you gasp, are no longer news. Everyone is wearing them. But the new slips to wear beneath the new lace evening gowns—these very, very Mae Westish, by the way — are simply thrilling. They have real honest-to-goodness dust ruffles in a contrasting color.

It works like this: With one of the clinging gowns of red lace you wear a red silk slip; at its hem is a crisp, deep, dust ruffle of taffeta in navy blue. Or maybe you're weak for white. Beneath the white lace frock, then, is a white silk slip, its dust ruffle a shiny, startling black.

This can be worked in any color contrast scheme you fancy—and the more startling the contrast the more successful the effect beneath the fine lace.

New Bag and Gloves Contribute to One's Evening Glamour

SIMPLY swell-elegant are the new satin and velvet evening gloves, gauntlets that reach almost to the elbow, where their flare is edged with ostrich feather banding in harmonizing or contrasting colors.

And equally elegant, with Paris screaming from every stitch, is the pancake evening bag. It's round and flat and white and looks exactly like a very Ritzy flapjack of velvet or satin. And if you're fanciful you might carry the likeness further by imagining that the rhinestones with which it is sprinkled are sparkling crystals of sugar.

Velveteen Hat and Scarf Sets Inexpensive and Gay

SHOPPERS will remember the introduction, last season, of the velveteen set of small perky hat with Ascot scarf to match. Very smart indeed—but O, so expensive. This season Providence and the manufacturers have seen fit to send them in less costly versions. The snappiest pair imaginable, a small crown hugging skull cap topped by a dashing bow, with a longish, square ended scarf, now costs less than $10. Colors are sapphire blue, Chinese vermillion and bottle or jade green.

IS THAT YOU, CLARA?

In This Installment Is Set Forth How La Bow Learned to Captivate with a Smile.

By MAE TINEE.

SOME say that Clara Bow's vogue was due, primarily, to after war hysteria. That she was the FLAPPER ULTIMATE. That she was YOUTH DECADENT. Reformers said she stirred the worst emotions in men and influenced other women to do the same. Her films, they declared, should be forbidden.

Sincere, undoubtedly, and not without reason, these opinions. Strangely, though, Clara impressed other, and quite as intelligent, students of nature far differently.

Have you never heard in her ringing laugh
The echoing breath of a sigh?
Have you never detected the unshed tear
That brightened the glint in her eye?
Have you never noticed the downward droop
Of her lips? Perhaps you were blind
And couldn't see what others saw—
The face of the Woman Behind.

One stood by her side—'twas a "party" night—.
And she laughed loud, again and again!,
And he swore that her wanton merriment
Was a barrage for hidden pain.
Then—he said—she sang an old home song.
'Twas apparent to his mind
That the song was not sung by the woman there,
But was moaned by the Woman Behind.

Perhaps, in the dim, dark past of Clara's ancestry, some supposedly gay court lady looked out on a censorious world with the same tragic, laughing eyes and lured men on with a smile that had heartbreak behind it. Do the eyes of Clara Bow reflect mind shadows of another day? It has been said: "The eye of genius has always a plaintive expression, and its language is pathos."

Are we to discover that Clara Bow IS a genius?

She Learned About Life.

● Of her dim, dark past we can have no knowledge. So let's look a bit to the subject's childhood for light on her universal appeal—despite everything.

Not a very happy, and in no way a glamorous one.

Poor as the proverbial turkeys were the Bows. Clara tells you, herself, in an interview:

"We were awfully poor. Three little rooms in a Brooklyn flat. Mother was an invalid . . ." (Her mother died in a sanitarium after having exacted a promise from her tempestuous little daughter that she would NOT follow a screen career.) . . . "Dad was undersized and untrained. He picked up odd jobs around the wharfs. My playground was the street. I learned a lot about life . . ." (What sort of life, we wonder!)

"I learned more from pictures than from school. I didn't go to pictures just to see 'em. I went to live 'em. I'd go home and be a one girl circus, taking the parts of every one I'd seen and playing 'em before the glass. It did something to me—inside—made me happy. Mother was so sick. And then my grandfather, whom I'd always loved so much, died. And making believe like that helped no end . . . The kids all laughed at me. They called me Snookums. I used to get red and mad and ashamed . . ."

(In itself all that mummery before the glass was unremarkable. Clara, like the rest of us, yearned to be taken out of the routine of life by putting into practice what she saw on the screen. We all do it, to a greater or less degree.)

He Grinned When He Saw Her.

● "Just the same, when a magazine announced a contest for would-be film actresses, I sent in my photograph—the sort you get for 'this coupon-and-one-buck.' Then I just JITTERED for days. One day—GEE!—a letter came telling me to REPORT FOR A TEST! O boy, O boy, O BOY!" (Can't you just see her?)

"Dad went with me. He was always a grand old dad . . ." (In this day of our Lord witnesses aver that upon every possible—and impossible—occasion Dad Bow beats his chest with his two fists, crying aloud the while with pride that bids fair to tip him over—"I AM THE FATHER OF CLARA BOW!") . . . "There were a lot of prettier and better dressed girls at the magazine office, and I shrank back against the wall.

"At last the editor came out and when he saw me he grinned. I'd put on some makeup, and, of course, I didn't know how. I MUST have looked peculiar.

"He said: 'What's your name, little girl?'

"I was so scared I said: 'I don't know.'

"He laughed like a fool—a NICE fool—and took me into another room where there were a lot of famous artists. THEY screamed, too. But Corliss Palmer made me up right. Then they told me to fall off a roof; and almost drown at sea; and watch my sweetheart crashing in an airplane. It was hard to do, there in an office . . ."

Introvert, extravert—and that missing quantity we're going to get to—all playing parts in that episode.

She Supports Her Relatives.

● Going back, for a minute or two, to that "grand old Dad": Robert Bow is about 55, and, though indubitably a loving father, has been no bulwark in the life of his young daughter.

He's been married three times—first to Clara's mother—and twice to girls young enough to be his daughters. His third wife, Tui Lorraine, aged 21, was, in fact, an intimate of Clara's. How the latter felt about these two essays into matrimony nobody ever knew, for Clara has always stood stanchly by her father, and he's got along pretty well, thanks to her. She financed him in a restaurant business which failed—as did various other enterprises in which she backed him

Clara's invariably kind to folks. Few girls support more relatives. Recently she made life joyous for one little Johnny and Lillian Bow, Brooklyn cousins who had the time of their lives playing around the Fox studios while she was working in "Hoopla."

Weeping Spoiled Everything.

● Well, Clara won that contest conducted by the Brewster magazines; judges, Harrison Fisher, Neysa McMein, and Howard Chandler Christy. For first prize she received an evening gown and a screen contract which guaranteed that she would play in one picture and receive a beautiful silver trophy.

She annexed trophy, gown, and a "bit" in a silent movie titled "Beyond the Rainbow," with Billie Dove. She was told to cry—and her makeup ran so badly that she was cut from the film.

Right then and there she introverted and went to business college. BUT—the fate which will not let her sink into oblivion was already busy. Three months later Elmer Clifton saw her picture in an old magazine issue. And gave her a role in "Down to the Sea in Ships."

Alice (Clara) was all set to enter Wonderland.

Playing the Role of Sinclair Lewis' Heroine

Ardor in her soul and romance in her eyes! Fascinating and unusual picture of Irene Dunne, isn't it? She's appearing in the title role of "Ann Vickers," now playing at the Palace.

Hollywood Happenings

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—(Special.)—Mae West and Marlene Dietrich wear diamond rings over their black gloves. Very striking effect showing up the stones plenty, like a jeweler's window.

● Joan Bennett, who has been forbidden work while awaiting the arrival of the stork, is having a wonderful time going social in a big way. It's a big change for Joan, who never went to parties except over the week-ends when she worked in pictures.

● Meanwhile June Collyer, who has returned to work after two years of wifeing and mothering, allays her maternal anxiety by checking with the baby's nurse four times daily.

● Hollywood is welcoming back Taylor Holmes, who is soon to begin work as the star of "What a Wife!" for Educational.

● You can never tell the yearnings behind a comic's mask. Slim Summerville admits that Chinese culture and art are what he hones after and if he ever gets a chance he will go to China and find out all about it.

Sequel to 'Of Thee I Sing' Is Not Its Equal

Even So, 'Let 'Em Eat Cake' Is Twice as Good as Average Revue.

By BURNS MANTLE.

NEW YORK.—(Special.)—Quite naturally, much too much was expected of "Let 'Em Eat Cake," the widely heralded sequel of "Of Thee I Sing." All of Broadway was sitting back—sitting back expensively, despite the new theater code, because first night places were costly—waiting to shout a snooty "I told you so" at George Kaufman, Morrie Ryskind and the Gershwins. And shout they did.

But there is this much in the new satiric revue's favor. Even though it is no more than half as good as the Pulitzer prize winner it seeks to follow, that still makes it about twice as good as the average revue.

What the boys have tried to do in carrying on the adventures of President John P. Wintergreen, Vice President Alexander Throttlebottom and their cabinet is to lead them into a brush with the proletariat.

"Blue Shirt" Revolution.

In "Let 'Em Eat Cake" Wintergreen and Throttlebottom are defeated for re-election. Wintergreen organizes a revolution with the help of Throtty's five thousand dollars and the encouragement of one Kruger, a professional revolutionist of Union square.

It is a revolution of the Blue Shirts, and this puts Mary Wintergreen back at her machine making these shirts. A huge business is built up in shirts and blouses. The revolution is a success when the army comes in on promise of being assigned the war debts. Its platform demands a new Mickey Mouse every day, the face of Mae West on postage stamps in place of George Washington, and compulsory humor from radio comedians.

"Kill the Umpire."

After that there is a fantastic lapse in the attempted satire. The nine justices of the Supreme court are organized into a ball club to play the nine representatives of the League of Nations, with Throttlebottom as umpire.

Deciding against the home team, Throttlebottom is ordered executed on a brand new guillotine, the gift of France. Rather labored comedy, as you may guess.

William Gaxton, Lois Moran and Victor Moore repeat their original characters and most of the cabinet members are returned. Moore is the most successful of the trio, but it is hard going even for Victor. The Gershwin score is a brassy disappointment.

A "'Male' Captive."

Jed Harris, having been absent from the local producers' walks the last several months, is back with an importation called "The Green Bay Tree," a drama that has caused considerable excitement in London.

It is concerned with the possessive jealousy of an older for a younger man, and has, therefore, fallen readily into classification by the easy sensationalists as a "'male' Captive."

Perhaps because I am normally a little dumb about such things, I can see but slight similarity in the two plays. There are touches of decadence and suggested abnormalities in "The Green Bay Tree," and the insistent may read anything they like into the plot, but from all surface indications the story as told by Mordaunt Shairp, is merely that of an egocentric millionaire who adopted a boy of 8 years and reared him as a model

"EVER IN MY HEART"

Looking into the future; dreaming of the past, or maybe just sittin' and thinkin', are Barbara Stanwyck and Otto Kruger in this scene from "Ever in My Heart." At the Chicago theater.

NEW "CANDIDA"

KATHARINE CORNELL will act Shaw's "Candida" for the first time outside New York in Seattle, Wash., Dec. 27. She first appeared in this play in the 48th Street theater, New York, on Dec. 12, 1924, for the Actors' Theater.

After three weeks of special matinées "Candida" was put into the regular night bill. Miss Cornell continued in the part until she was compelled to quit the cast because of her contract to appear in Arlen's "The Green Hat," which made her a star. Thus she has not been seen in "Candida" in any city except New York.

Miss Cornell never has acted in Seattle, which is the birthplace of Guthrie McClintic, her husband and stage director. Basil Rathbone will appear as Candida's husband, Orson Welles as Marchbanks, and A. P. Kaye as Candida's father.

Theater Letter Box

To the Dramatic Editor:

New York, Oct. 26.—I have covered about everything new on Broadway. Really interesting fare. Saw the new Abbott-Dunning show, "Heat Lightning" . . . Brady's "A Party," with Mrs. Patrick Campbell . . . Irving Berlin's and Moss Hart's smackingly good "As Thousands Cheer" . . . Kenyon Nicholson's fast and racy "Sailors Beware" . . . the Guild's "Ah Wilderness" . . . and when you sit through this new down to earth O'Neill you'll be surprised. Also the Group Theater's "Men in White" . . . Really very encouraging, the last four. Yes, indeed, the theater here is thriving and I'm glad to say is promising much.

As for myself, I will bring back for our playhouse "Girls in Uniform," from which "Maedchen in Uniform" was taken. This is in English and is splendidly written. I understand it has been banned by Chancellor Hitler because of the picture of unwielding severity in German girls' school discipline . . . also have "Both Your Houses" and Albert Bein's "Little Old Boy." Bein is a Chicago boy and his play is well turned out.

Wherever feasible a name player will be guest artist. Also discussed with Jacob Ben Ami the possibility of my presenting him in the English translation of Dostoievsky's "Redemption," played once by the Le Galliene theater as "The Living Corpse" and last done by Moissi under the ægis of Rheinhardt. This last in an all-professional showing for a loop house. Hope I can swing it.

"Dinner" Film Compared with Play

"Dinner at Eight" Movie Discussed in Relation to Its Stage Source.

By Charles Collins.

THE photoplay version of "Dinner at Eight" arouses my interest because it has come to Chicago treading upon the heels of the drama that served as its scenario. "Exit, Broadway; enter, Hollywood" seems to have been the stage direction for this incident of the city's amusement life. The play ends, but the story goes on.

The specialists on cinema affairs have already said their say about this supermovie with its impressive galaxy of major stars. Now I shall take a crack at the subject from the point of view of a follower of the sick institution upon which the film industry preys like a monstrous parasite.

First of all, I regard the arrangement of "Dinner at Eight" for the camera and microphone as an excellent job in its field. The two hours that I spent in watching the circumstances attendant upon the botched and almost frustrated dinner party of the aristocratic Mrs. Jordan were highly recreative. I liked the photoplay better, I suspect, than some of the movie critics, who failed to fall into their customary ecstasies.

Easy Job for Scenario Writers.

It was, of course, an easy matter to transplant "Dinner at Eight" to the picture screen. The play itself was written in a cinema style; its structure was episodic, and its sequence of scenes had the pattern of camera technique. It could have been photographed without any important changes in the narration of its story.

Certain alterations were made, however, and I am of the opinion that they manifest decided intelligence on the part of the studio staff. The major change was a softening of the sardonic mood of the piece. The bitter snarl that Broadway regards as the proper note for satire was gently modified, and as a result the photoplay is a more human and persuasive piece of work than the drama.

The theme of "Dinner at Eight," as written by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber, was: "Swell Park avenue dame tries to throw ritzy dinner party. Three rousing jeers!" Hollywood, in preparing this strong dose of scorn for its millions of patrons, wisely decided to omit the raspberries. Moreover, by granting that Mrs. Jordan's circle possessed certain kindly and humane characteristics, Hollywood came closer to the true spirit of social satire than the original authors.

Omissions and Additions.

The treatment of Carlotta Vance, the gaudy old actress, shows improvement of design. In the drama this character hung at a loose end; in the photoplay she is neatly braided into the story of the society girl's liaison with the collapsed celebrity of the old-school movies.

The omission of the scene that deals with a brawl in the servants' quarters meets with my complete approval. In the play this bit of melodrama served no purpose except to point a feeble jest about the destruction of the masterpiece of aspic jelly that was to grace Mrs. Jordan's dinner table. I objected to it in my review of the drama, and much to my surprise I find that Hollywood agrees. The scenarists of other days would have said: "This scene is our meat," but apparently the picture industry has been improving its breed of literary lads.

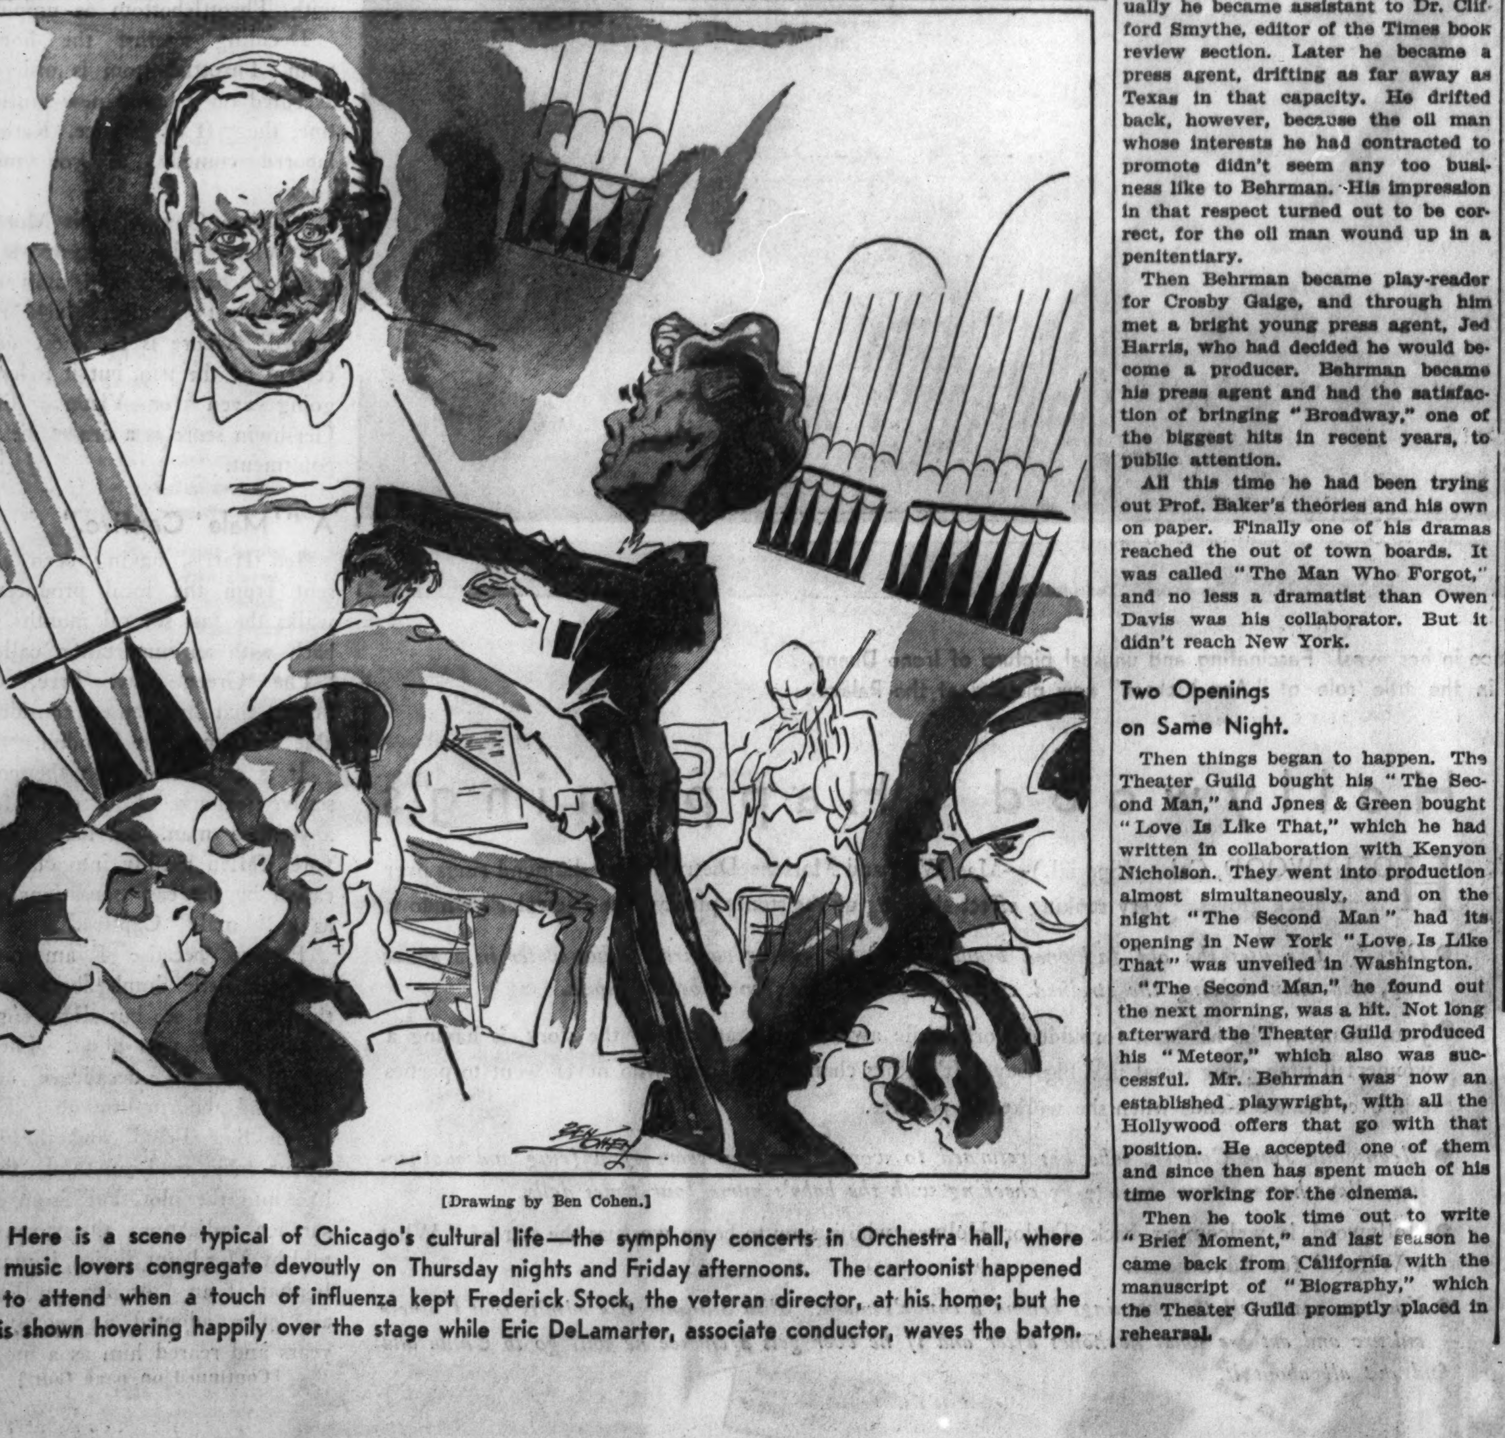
Anti-sentimentalists may roar over two passages at the close of the photoplay—the ingénue's tears when she learns through Carlotta Vance of the suicide of her lover, and the Mrs. Jordan's breakdown when she is told that her husband is doomed by heart disease. These are additions to the story that do not annoy me in the slightest. In fact, I accept them as useful strokes in rounding out the story for the cinema audience.

Hollywood Stars vs. Broadway Types.

So far as the acting is concerned, however, I am strongly in favor of the original dramatic cast. The mass-meeting of stars in the photoplay does not dazzle me, and if I wanted to be cantakerous I could offer objections to many of the characterizations. These people, however, are the subjects of Mae Tinée, and I am inclined to let them pass.

I will venture to point out, however, the rôles that in my opinion equal or surpass the original interpretations. They are the doctor, acted by Edmund Lowe; the doctor's wife, acted by Karen Morley; the brother-in-law, acted by Grant Mitchell; the doctor's nurse, acted by Phoebe Foster; and the hotel manager, acted by Edwin Maxwell. I will add, also, that the hit scored by Jean Harlow, as the tough little lady, is largely a matter of skill in stage management and photography.

THURSDAY NIGHT AT ORCHESTRA HALL



[Drawing by Ben Cohen.]

Here is a scene typical of Chicago's cultural life—the symphony concerts in Orchestra hall, where music lovers congregate devoutly on Thursday nights and Friday afternoons. The cartoonist happened to attend when a touch of influenza kept Frederick Stock, the veteran director, at his home; but he is shown hovering happily over the stage while Eric DeLamarter, associate conductor, waves the baton.

How to Become Playwright for Theater Guild

Career of S. N. Behrman, Author of 'Biography,' 'Second Man,' 'Meteor.'

S. N. BEHRMAN, whose play "Biography," with Ina Claire in the leading rôle, will open the Theater Guild's Chicago season Nov. 6, descended upon New York not only as a playwright but as an actor. That was several years ago, while Behrman was still a college student. Since then he has given up all his ambitions to be a star and is content to be known as a playwright.

The occasion of his first visit to New York was a vaudeville booking which took a sketch called "Only a Part" into one of the lesser theaters of Fourteenth street. Not content with merely having written the sketch, Behrman played one of its leading rôles. It had first been produced in his home town, Worcester, Mass.

Behrman enjoyed the experience and might have gone on acting had not his parents prevailed upon him to finish college first. He went back to Clark university and from there to Harvard, where he enrolled in the No. 47 workshop of George Pierce Baker.

Press Agent Apprenticeship.

When he next descended upon New York, however, he was looking for almost any kind of a job. Eventually he became assistant to Dr. Clifford Smythe, editor of the Times book review section. Later he became a press agent, drifting as far away as Texas in that capacity. He drifted back, however, because the oil man whose interests he had contracted to promote didn't seem any too business like to Behrman. His impression in that respect turned out to be correct, for the oil man wound up in a penitentiary.

Then Behrman became play-reader for Crosby Gaige, and through him met a bright young press agent, Jed Harris, who had decided he would become a producer. Behrman became his press agent and had the satisfaction of bringing "Broadway," one of the biggest hits in recent years, to public attention.

All this time he had been trying out Prof. Baker's theories and his own on paper. Finally one of his dramas reached the out of town boards. It was called "The Man Who Forgot," and no less a dramatist than Owen Davis was his collaborator. But it didn't reach New York.

Two Openings on Same Night.

Then things began to happen. The Theater Guild bought his "The Second Man," and Jones & Green bought "Love Is Like That," which he had written in collaboration with Kenyon Nicholson. They went into production almost simultaneously, and on the night "The Second Man" had its opening in New York "Love Is Like That" was unveiled in Washington.

"The Second Man," he found out the next morning, was a hit. Not long afterward the Theater Guild produced his "Meteor," which also was successful. Mr. Behrman was now an established playwright, with all the Hollywood offers that go with that position. He accepted one of them and since then has spent much of his time working for the cinema.

Then he took time out to write "Brief Moment," and last season he came back from California with the manuscript of "Biography," which the Theater Guild promptly placed in rehearsal.

Vaudeville Bills

AL KVALE, well known musician, will succeed Verne Buck as orchestra leader and master of ceremonies at the State-Lake theater today. The vaudeville program will contain: Joan Abbott, "torch" singer and successor to Ethel Merman in the "Take a Chance" company, for her first appearances in this branch of entertainment; Al Herman, blackface comedian; Sybil Bowan, the dancer who won a reputation in "Rose-Marie"; the Young Kam troupe of acrobats; Barney Grant, comedian; and Don Santo and Miss Exie in a song and dance skit.

Sally Rand came back to the Chicago theater last Friday for a final week in Chicago before departing for Hollywood. She promises to retire from fan dancing after she is established in the films. Other contributors to the vaudeville section of the Chicago's program are: James Melton, tenor; Stan Kavanaugh, comedy juggler; Nell Kelly, "blues" singer; the California Redheads, and the Evans ballet.

◆

Phil Baker continues as revue master and comedian at the Palace theater for a second week, with Harry McNaughton, Mabel Albertson and "Beetle" as his assistants. He is offering a new series of songs, sketches and wisecracks. Other vaudeville entertainers at the Palace are: Irene Beasley, the radio singer; Buck and Bubbles, Negro comedians; Ames and Arno, burlesque adagio dancers; and Mann, Robinson and Martin, singers and dancers.

SAYING GOOD-BY

[Maurice Seymour Photo.]

Vera Marshe, who has spent the World's Fair period in Chicago as a principal in "Take a Chance," is going away from here. So are her bosses, Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson. The show will leave the Erlanger theater for a tour after next Saturday night's performance.

'De Lawd's' Play Under Taboo on English Stage

Censor Bans Negro Play as Irreverent; British Critics Plead in Vain.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—In a mild way, theater history has been made in Great Britain through the production of a play in which both the Deity and the Savior appear on the stage and speak. For decades that has been impossible. The lord chancellor, the country's play censor, has resolutely held to the rule that such productions border on the profane and are, therefore, unsuited to the English stage.

For this reason various producers were refused license to put on Marc Connelly's brilliant play, "The Green Pastures." London critics protested over and over again in their columns.

But the lord chancellor had said no and kept on saying no.

Now there is a revival of hope that "Green Pastures" can be seen here after all. This is due to Sir Barry Jackson, founder of the Malvern festival.

fourth season at Malvern late this summer. It ran for three weeks, repeating the first week's répertoire during each of the successive two weeks.

Sir Barry dedicated the festival as a living memorial to George Bernard Shaw, and "The Apple Cart" was produced there. For the last three seasons the festival has attempted to portray four centuries of English drama, beginning with the old morality plays. It was in one of these that God and Christ appeared before a theater audience in Britain for the first time in ages.

The play was "The Conversion of St. Paul," written by an anonymous author some time in the sixteenth century. It was a poor spectacle, with a too literal interpretation of early technique.

Divine Figures in Miracle Play.

But, all the same, the distinguishing part of the play was that both Father and Son appeared in person. The event is received here with joyful anticipation that "Green Pastures" might be seen in England after all.

The English playgoers like to be preoccupied with the Negro anyhow. The color problem does not affect them this side India. For that reason, perhaps, Paul Robeson finds a sort of spiritual haven here. Duke Ellington, when he came here a few months ago, surprised producers by packing provincial theaters. It was then discovered that his sale of records in England approaches the dimensions of a scramble.

Another Negro performer with hosts of followers in Britain is Louis Armstrong. It might seem strange to an American that a whole lot of this interest is "intellectual," in the Bloomsbury "intellectual" of the type known in Chicago at the late Dill Pickle club. Bloomsbury, which is London's near north side, flocks to see and hear American Negro performers, and immediately discovers in them some vague hint of a liberal cause which they can support with a faintly revolutionary motive.

Negro Players Popular in London.

Robeson helped confirm the prevailing belief that the Negro is still a slave, and that all white Americans are barbarians, when he returned to England recently after making a film in the United States.

Robeson gave it out in the press that he will devote his energies hereafter to instilling in the American colored man intense racial pride, and to convincing him that the system of living in America today is the lowest and least cultural ever devised by man. Many Europeans believe this anyhow, and to hear a black artist of undoubted ability, who is furthermore a native American, tell them they are right no doubt adds some attraction to performances usually able to stand by themselves.

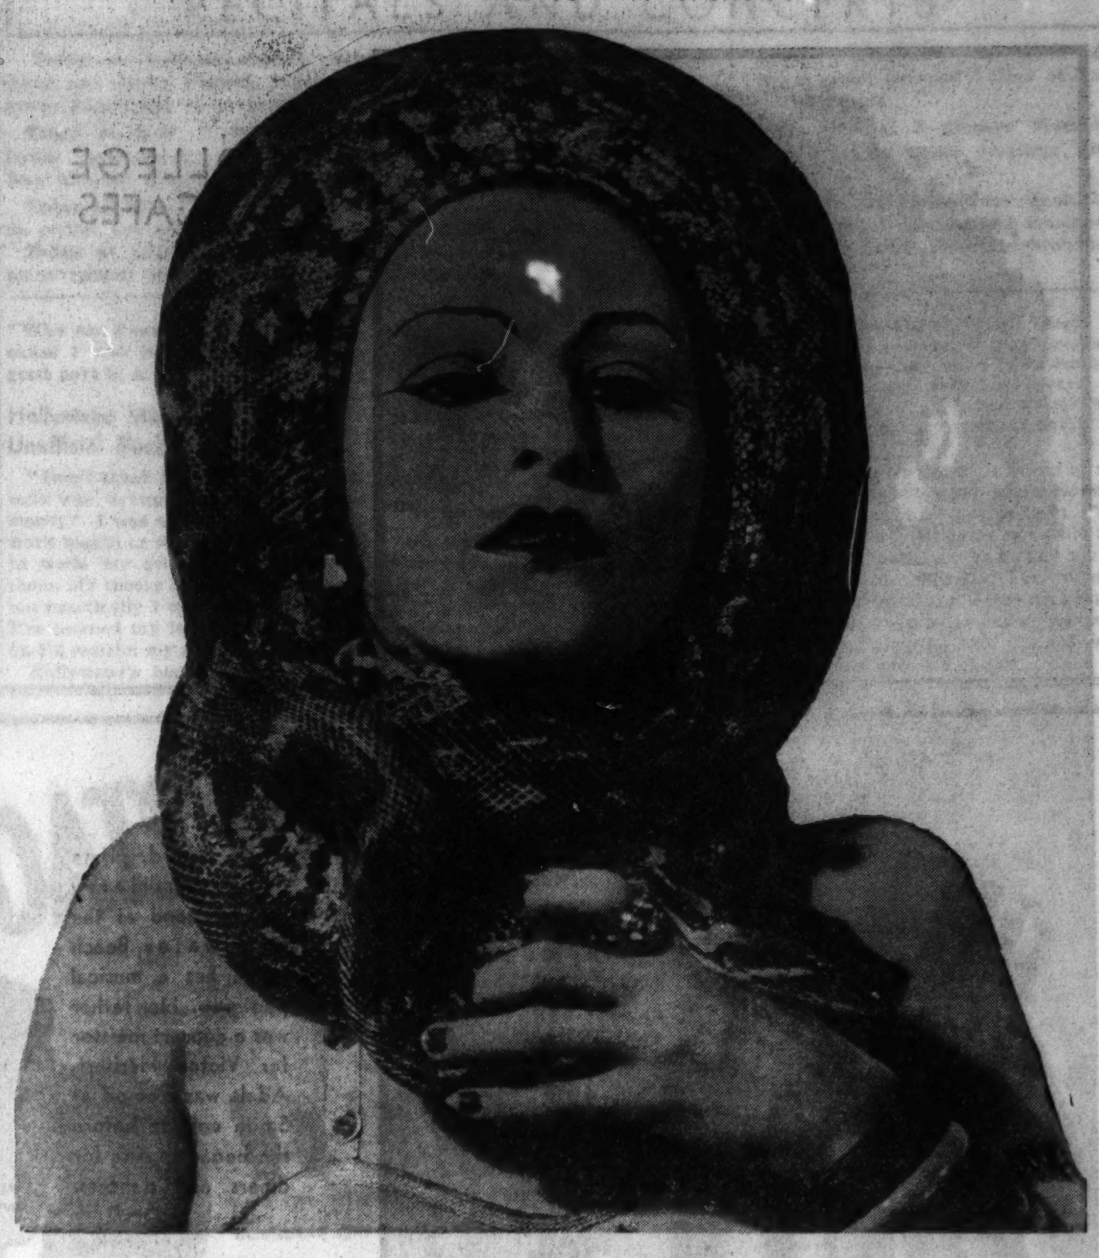
There is a considerable amount of cordial curiosity about colored American performers in addition to any other interest, but the English theater walks more warily where the natives of India are involved.

A production which most of the critics approved was taken off recently because of its treatment of a Sikh money lender. Most of the young officers in the Indian army are in debt, and many of them fearfully so.

But frequently subalterns in service on the northwest Indian frontier lack this convenience. They have their establishments to keep up, their polo ponies, and their dues at the clubs. Here they run up bills and soon find themselves hopelessly in debt. They then resort to native moneylenders, who bleed them to the bone.

This was made the theme of a play not so long ago, but irate Indians spat in the face of the actor who played the Sikh money lender so often, and wrote so many protests about the piece to anybody who would read them that the play was finally taken off.

SERPENT DANCER WITH PYTHON



This is Neryda, the interpretive dancer who has been one of the striking personalities of the cabaret programs at the Streets of Paris. A snake dance is among her numbers, and she uses a live Indian python, five feet long and Mu-mu by name. Note the decorative effect of the patterns on the snake's skin, forming a unique headdress. Neryda wears her python as a crown in her dancing.

Plays at Goodman

THE season of plays acted by students at the Goodman theater under Art institute auspices will begin next Tuesday night with Sierra's Spanish comedy, "The Romantic Young Lady." Performances will be given through the week with a matinée on Thursday.

The eighth season of the Children's theater at the Goodman began Saturday, Oct. 21, with "The Pied Piper of Hamelin." These performances are given every Saturday afternoon.

Chaplin Ready for His Third Altar Journey?

HOLLYWOOD. — Movieland has supplied a number of major romantic surprises lately, but the wedding Hollywood has been talking about most and actually hoping for probably won't be held—if it hasn't been already—until late next year.

It is that of Charlie Chaplin and the pretty and young Paulette Goddard, who might be a Hal Roach comedy star today if she only had made up her mind to get to work on time. Mr. Roach doesn't like to have delinquent people in his employ, so he got some other attractive blonde to play in the Charlie Chase and the Laurel & Hardy comedies.

Paulette, whether or not she is engaged to Charlie, has been engaged by him. She will be the other half of the romantic interest—such as it is—in Charlie's next picture.

A half dozen times the report that Charlie had taken Miss Goddard as his third wife has cropped up, but each time denials have been made forthwith. Alfred Reeves, genial and talkative Englishman who has retained his cockney accent despite 23 years in this country, is Charlie's business manager and chief denier.

He has said, many times, and continues to say that Charlie and Paulette are not married.

"She seems very fond of Charlie and he seems to like her a great deal," explains Reeves. "We [the Chaplin staff] expect to see them married after the picture is finished, some time late next year. Charlie doesn't go around very much, but when he does Miss Goddard accompanies him."

And so, if this prediction comes true, the town will lose another of its foremost bachelors. Since George O'Brien left the ranks of the "not-for-me" bunch to wed Marguerite Churchill, the club hasn't had an over-supply of prominent members. Richard Dix and William Powell, however, lately returned to its fold, both having obtained divorces.

"Chicago Night" on Cabaret Calendar

A NEW "night" has been added to the cabaret calendar by the management of the Walnut room of the Bismarck hotel. "Chicago night" is its title, and it happens every Tuesday until further notice. Café celebrities who have a habit of appearing at these functions to take their bows have already begun to rally at the Walnut room at the witching hour on Tuesdays.

- A new program went into performance on the Walnut room's floor recently. It contains Clifford and Wayne as ballroom dancers; Florence Kope as an interpretive dancer; and Jeanne Goodner as a tap dancer. Elmo Tanner cheers things up by a whistling act. Ted Weems leads the band, which contains a group of singers.

- The Club Royale, gayest spot in the Wabash avenue colony of cabarets, has arranged a new program which contains Clifford Winehill as master of ceremonies; Roy Rodda, dancing acrobat; Ethel Alice, soubrette; Rita and Annis, a European dancing team; and many elaborately costumed chorus numbers. Two bands supply music for public dancing—Sid Lang and his Royal Syncopaters and Nino Rinaldo's rhumba musicians.

- Harry Richman and Vincent Lopez still hold the floor at Chez Paree, with numerous assistants, including the gifted Sheila Barrett. Rosemary Deering is back at "the Chez" after a summer as premiere danseuse with the ballet of the St. Louis Municipal Operetta company. Before Mr. Richman became a celebrity of the entertainment world he was, by turn, a truck driver, a chauffeur, a life guard, a song plugger, and a clothing salesman. All this in early youth.

- The Empire room of the Palmer house continues its World's Fair cabaret programs, with a bill that contains Medrano and Donna, Argentine dancers; Vivian Vance, singer; Mason and Faye, eccentric dancers; Moore and Revel, comedy dancers; and the Abbott ballet girls. Performances are given at 7:30, 10, and 11:45.

- Boyd Raeburn, orchestra leader in the Fred Harvey restaurant in the Straus building, has selected Lorraine Anderson, an Evanston amateur, from a group of 500 applicants for a job as singer on his programs. He regards her as a 'discovery."

- The Paramount club, where the fan dancing vogue of the Fair period started, still offers Faith Bacon in her graceful treatment of this specialty. Faith is willing to admit that Cleopatra may have been the first dancer, but she insists upon her title as the originator of the current craze.

- The dance team of Curry and Joy have been added to the entertainment at the Edgewater Beach hotel, where Harry Sosnik's orchestra is resident. A reunion of members of the Black Cat club of 1916 was held last night.

- The Bal Tabarin, favored by Saturday night dancers for many years, began its season in the Hotel Sherman last night. . . . The Wheeler girls, two in number, are prominent on the program of Phil Harris' floor show at the College Inn. One is blonde, the other brunette; nevertheless, they insist that they are twins. A dancing trio, Gini, De Quincy, and Lewis, are competitors. Leah Ray and the Three Ambassadors are other auxiliaries to Harris' orchestra.

- Answer to frequent questions: The café named "L'Aiglon" can also be called "The Eaglet," for that is what the words mean. . . . Yes, there was a drama of that title, written by Edmond Rostand, author of "Cyrano de Bergerac." Yes, it refers to Napoleon's son. Maude Adams played the Eaglet in this country. So did Sarah Bernhardt, in French.

- Clyde McCoy's orchestra has returned to the Gold room of the Drake hotel. Don Carlo's marimba band remains. Thus the patrons get continuous dance music every evening except Sunday.

- Cherie and Tomasita, dancing sisters who go in for Arabian numbers, began an engagement in the Joseph Urban room of the Congress hotel last night. They come to Chicago from Havana, where they witnessed many of the events of the Cuban revolution.

- A new form of crime has been discovered by Husk O'Hare, Canton Tea garden maestro. Somebody stole both his microphones. This may have been the work of Phil Baker's "Beetle," who is always roaring, "Get off the air."

- Old Mexico, popular cabaret at the Fair, is making elaborate plans for the celebration of Halloween. Many other song and dance concessions are also arranging special programs.

Historical Drama.

"Mary of Scotland," which is expected to be one of the major events of the current theatrical season, will begin its Broadway engagement on or about Nov. 13. Maxwell Anderson is the author. The cast will feature Helen Hayes, Philip Merivale, and Helen Menken. Robert Edmund Jones has designed the settings and costumes. The production has been staged by Theresa Hepburn for the Theater Guild.

COLLEGE TO CAFES

Adele Girard, prima donna with Harry Sosnik's band at the Edgewater Beach hotel, has a musical pedigree. Her father was a concert meister for Victor Herbert. Adele was a co-ed at Smith college before she began to sing for diners and dancers.

Sequel to "Of Thee I Sing" Is Not Its Equal

Even So, Critic Calls "Let 'Em Eat Cake" Twice as Good as Average Revue

of all that he [the egocentric] had hoped to be.

Guardian Wins Over Veterinary Sweetheart.

When the lad reaches his twenty-third year he falls in love with a lady veterinarian. The thought disgusts the esthetic guardian. Yet he takes no violent steps to halt the affair. He refuses the boy an allowance, but permits him to go on his own and allows him every chance to establish an independence that will permit him to marry.

Returned to the home of his own father, a religious fanatic, three months are all the weakling can stand. He flies back to his precious guardian. When the test is narrowed to a fight between guardian and fiancée as to which he can do without more readily, the decadent wins. Then the religious father shoots the guardian and the boy takes over the fortune and the sins.

"The Green Bay Tree" is splendidly produced and played. James Dale, whom you may recall as the Jew of "Loyalties," is the precious egocentric. Laurence Olivier, who was with Noel Coward in "Private Lives," is the boy; Jill Esmond, the fiancée; O. P. Heggie, the father.

Murder Is Committed on the Stage.

In the play called "Ten Minute Alibi," which is also a favorite melodrama of the London theaters, the murder is committed before the audience's slightly startled gaze. And then repeated.

This double showing is rather cleverly brought about. Colin Derwent, knowing his boyhood's sweetheart, Betty Lindon, is planning to elope with Philip Sevilla, a thoroughly wicked person, threatens Sevilla with destruction unless he calls the affair off.

Sevilla thereupon hands Colin a drugged cigaret and puts him to sleep in an easy chair. While sleeping, Colin dreams the perfect crime. He sees just how it might be possible for him to shoot Sevilla with his own gun equipped with a Maxim silencer, dispose of the body in such a way as to suggest suicide, and, by turning the clock back ten minutes, establish a perfect alibi. All of which is acted out in perfect detail.

But Crime, After All, Isn't Perfect.

Colin comes out of the dream, gives Sevilla another chance, which the wicked one refuses, and proceeds to follow as closely as he can remember them the details of the perfect murder he had visioned.

In place of becoming a bore the duplication excites a sort of nervous comedy when the situations of the dream do not work with those of the actual murder and there is a constantly mounting interest in the success of the crime.

When Scotland Yard finds Sevilla's body and takes up the scent there is a half hour of feverish chasing of clews, but Colin's alibi sticks to the very end. At that moment the clock which has been set forward and then back again to establish the alibi strikes the hour. And though it is 6 o'clock on the dial it strikes seven. Fortunately nobody hears it but a student detective, and he, knowing the rotter who is dead, holds his peace.

They are English players mostly in "Ten Minute Alibi." A young fellow named Bramwell Fletcher does the Colin part excitingly. Daphne Warren Wilson plays the heroine and Stiano Braggiotti the wicked one.

Charlie Chan Reaches Stage.

Item three in the way of the week's melodramas is a native contribution. Valentine Davies has made a play from the last of the late Earl Derr Bigger's stories of the likable Charlie Chan, Honolulu's favorite policeman. "The Keeper of the Keys" it is called, and William Harrigan plays the Chan part.

This one is a straightforward and fairly interesting detective story worked out in terms of drama, but it lacks novelty. There is the familiar statement of plot. Dudley Ward has sent for his former wife, the prima donna Ellen Landini, and three of her other ex-husbands. He is trying to trace the whereabouts of a son he believes Landini has borne him. Chan is called in to conduct the investigation. That night Landini is shot in the balcony. Next morning one of the husbands is perforated in the portico.

Harrigan, Honest Irishman, Plays Chinman Deftly.

Suspicions point here, point there. In the end Chan fastens the crime on the very Dudley Ward who has hired him to investigate. The old boy had just lost his temper.

Harrigan, honest Irishman, makes no attempt, beyond the slant-eyed makeup, to imitate the oriental slavishly. His accent is agreeably soft, his reading of the ancient aphorisms pleasantly modulated. But he neither slinks nor squirms his way into or out of situations. Just a good workmanlike job. He is the first actor to bring the oriental Sherlock Holmes to the stage. Warner Oland has recreated him for the screen, and Walter Connelly has read him over the air.

Guiterman Rewrites Moliere in Rhymed Couplets.

Lawrence Langner, continuing his activities of the early season [besides being a director of the Theater Guild, he is co-author of "The Pursuit of Happiness" and "Champagne, Sec"], has now revealed a comedy in verse with which he has been threatening the town for a year or more.

This is Molière's "The School for Husbands," done over in rhymed couplets by Arthur Guiterman, the town's cleverest coupleteer. The Theater Guild has made the production at the old Empire, and it is a pretty picture. The first audience was quite delighted with it.

A stilted and fairly stupid comedy, "The School for Husbands" takes on new life as rewritten in Guiterman verse. The playing of Osgood Perkins as Sganarelle and June Walker as Isabelle, and notably the singing of Michael Bartlett as Valere, furnish entertainment such as revived period drama seldom provides.

Guild Play Coming

"BIOGRAPHY," S. N. Behrman's comedy with Ina Claire in the leading rôle, will be presented by the Theater Guild at the Erlanger theater Monday, Nov. 6, for an engagement of two weeks. There will be an election day matinée on Nov. 7. This play holds the record for long run dramatic attractions in New York last season.

Besides Miss Claire, the company includes Earle Larimore, Arnold Korff, Jay Fassett, Charles Richman, Gertrude Flynn, Norman Stuart, and Josephine Deffry. The stage direction is the work of Philip Moeller, veteran of many Guild successes. The setting was designed by Jo Mielziner.

Muni's Recorder Helps Him Learn Lines for Talkies

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Some stars read their dialogue over and over again until they know it. Others "catch on" during the rehearsals preceding shooting of the scene. A few listen to somebody else read the lines until they can say them. And then there's Paul Muni.

He uses a dictating machine, which reproduces his lines for him. Each night he studies the following day's dialogue, and when he knows it fairly well he speaks both his own lines and those assigned to other players into the machine.

Then he quits work. The following morning he takes the records with him to the studio, and while putting on his makeup plays them.

"How many times?" he repeats the question. "It depends on the complexity of the scene. If the dialogue is long and somewhat difficult I play the record six or seven times—or until I know the words so well that there is no possibility of 'going up' in a scene." ("Going up" is a stage term for forgetting.)

For two months now Muni has been living on a ranch—five acres of trees and vegetables, which surround a comfortable but not impressive (in the Hollywood sense) house. He likes what he terms his "hacienda life" so well that he may stay here all winter.

FEMININITY IS STRICTLY TABOO IN BOB'S HOUSE

HOLLYWOOD.—You never can tell, said Robert Armstrong [speaking more like a skeptical reporter than a movie actor] what a movie actor will do.

A correspondent and he were looking over the site for his new home, four acre "estate" in a canyon in Beverly Hills. Preliminary work on this unusual house—which will be entirely devoid of both feminine touches and the motion picture influence—had already started.

The house will be wholly Mexican in style and comforts, such as they are. Just why a Saginaw, Mich., boy should choose pure Mexican architecture, even Bob can't explain. He does believe that his resentment against Hollywood's pseudo Mexican and Spanish houses, a few of which he has lived in, had some part in his choice. And anyway, he's being different.

The walls of the Armstrong hacienda will be three feet thick. The doors of all rooms will lead directly into the patio, instead of opening in the conventional manner from one room to another. Fireplaces, tiling and even bathroom equipment will be copies of genuine Mexican fixtures. And the servants, already hired, are from below the border.

There'll be nothing feminine in the dining room, either, continued Armstrong, who has been married twice and divorced the same number of times. Nor will there be any draperies or curtains; all the windows will have inside shutters instead.

Comic Opera Tour.

The tour of Milton Aborn's Gilbert and Sullivan Repertory company will begin in New Haven, Conn., the week of Oct. 30. Thence it will go to Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and points south and west.

Chicago Loses Dynamic Figure in School Music

Late Dr. J. Lewis Browne Contributed Five Years of Vital Leadership.

By Edward Moore.

THE passing of Dr. J. Lewis Browne last Sunday night removes a notable figure from public school music in Chicago.

Appointed head of the musical department of the schools in 1928, he entered upon what was almost a fallow field, and in an incredibly short time he put it into bloom. Up to that time the grade and high schools had participated in music to only a limited extent. But because Dr. Browne was an organizer as well as a musician, it was not long before grade and high school music began to take a notable place in the city.

Choruses sprang up everywhere, with singers from kindergarten age up to that of high schools. There were bands in junior and senior high schools, complete symphony orchestras as well. Chicago high school bands were in several cases important factors in the national high school band contest in Evanston last summer. Large groups of school musicians, both choral and instrumental, took part in the music of A Century of Progress this summer and won high praise.

High School Students Assisted Symphony.

Perhaps one of the high spots in Dr. Browne's career as regards music in the schools took place two seasons ago when a large chorus selected from the singers of Lindblom, Schurz, and Roosevelt High schools, and a group of musicians from the all-Chicago High School Symphony orchestra were called to assist the Chicago Symphony orchestra in one of its regular concerts. Conducted in part of the program by Mr. Stock, in another by Dr. Browne, they took part in such works as the Beethoven Fantasie in C minor for orchestra and chorus, Constant Lambert's "The Rio Grande," and a group of a cappella songs. This was a signal recognition of definite accomplishment, for Mr. Stock is not in the habit of permitting any lowering of ideals in the symphony concerts.

At the time of his death Dr. Browne was facing the greatest problem of his entire period with the schools. He had brought together a highly efficient body of assistants, supervisors, conductors, and instructors, and he was watching their work with the keenest interest. Then came the economy program, as found necessary by the board of education, with its greatly lowered budget for school music.

Heifetz and Tibbett to Give Concerts.

His problem was to make music carry on with much less money to pay for it. Perhaps it was a happy fate for him that he was called away before he had to solve it. At any rate he leaves behind the memory of having been a great figure in the music of Chicago's growing citizens.

Two concert courses will be the occasion of presenting two famous figures of the musical stage within two days. Jascha Heifetz, violinist, will play at Orchestra hall this afternoon, presented by the Lemay-Vermett Concert service. Lawrence Tibbett, baritone of opera, concert, and the screen, will sing at the Auditorium tomorrow night under the management of Grace Denton as an item in the series of concerts for the benefit of the Girl Scouts of Chicago.

Heifetz to Make First Return to Russia.

Mr. Heifetz is in the beginning of a tour that will take him as far afield as his native Russia and as far south as South America. Having canceled a German tour of forty-five concerts, he will be in Copenhagen Feb. 22, then London, Paris, Milan, Florence, Rome, Prague, Budapest, and several cities in Holland. He will visit Russia for the first time since he left there in 1917, remaining there six weeks for at least twenty concerts, several of them being in Moscow and Leningrad with the orchestra directed by Albert Coates. June, July, and August of next year will see him in South America.

Mr. Tibbett's last appearances here were in the spring, when he renewed hopes for the future of opera in Chicago by playing before two capacity audiences in the Auditorium in "Emperor Jones." Returning to the same stage tomorrow night, he will sing a program made up chiefly of operatic excerpts for baritone voice.

News of Interest to Lovers of Music.

Mischa Mischakoff, concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, is appearing for the eighth time as its soloist on Thursday evening and Friday afternoon of this week. He will play the Sibelius Concerto in D minor. The symphony will be the sixth from the pen of the Russian Miaskowsky, and Mr. Stock will also include Liadow's "Kikimora" and a series of excerpts from "The Damnation of Faust," by Berlioz.

Though A Century of Progress will soon close its gates, the Austrian representative thereof will remain in Chicago. He is Paul Kerby, a British musician and conductor, for the last five years a resident of Vienna. He is the foreign adviser of the Salzburg festival and musical adviser of the international Olympic games.

Instead of having a building at the Fair, Austria sent him here as official representative in charge of its greatest export crop—music. He will conduct twice, once with the Chicago Symphony orchestra Nov. 18 at Orchestra hall, and once with the Woman's Symphony orchestra Dec. 3 at the Auditorium. Being desirous of illustrating some of the points of Austria's light as well as classical music, both programs will pay marked attention to the waltzes of Johann Strauss.

The program wherein the Woman's Symphony orchestra will play is a benefit event for the medical clinic of Northwestern university. The date is the seventy-fifth birthday of Sir Edward Elgar, and consequently the program will be divided between Elgar and Strauss.

The Cube Experimental Art theater, 218 South Wabash avenue, will present Oscar Wilde's play, "Salome," next Friday night. It will be acted by a cast of Negroes, directed by Bertha Lewis, and a musical score has been composed for it by Theodore Mossman, Chicago musician. There will be a ballet featuring the dancing of Lurlene Griffith and Nicholas Tsoukalas.

The dance will take considerable part in programs of the immediate future. A series of programs at the Punch and Judy theater will be opened this afternoon by Grace Cornell and Kurt Graff, who will also be joined by George Seaberg. One of the important items in the series is the engagement of Angna Enters for a week beginning Nov. 11. Dancing of another type will be seen at Orchestra hall next Saturday and Sunday, when Uday Shan-Kar will come with his group of Hindu dancers and musicians.

He is said to have added several numbers to his répertoire since he was here last winter.

The Society of American Musicians will hold contests for recital appearances this fall and winter under the direction of Bertha Ott. Children's contests are now under way and will have their finals in November. They are subdivided into the primary section for pianists under ten years old; junior section for pianists and violinists between the ages of ten and thirteen; and senior section for pianists, violinists and cellists between thirteen and seventeen.

The young artist contests will begin in January. They include pianists, violinists and cellists between seventeen and twenty-seven; singers, men and women without age limit, and organists under thirty-five.

TIBBETT IN CONCERT

Star of opera, screen and concert stage, Lawrence Tibbett will appear in the last named capacity at Orchestra hall tomorrow night, though his program will be chiefly of operatic numbers. This is the first of a series of concerts to aid in the fund for Girl Scout work in Chicago.

Conway Tearle Says He's Glad Films Want Him

Blames Himself for Early Mistakes When Movies Turned Thumbs Down.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—The movies want Conway Tearle again, and at the moment they have him.

For four years Tearle couldn't get a job in Hollywood. Finally, on money he borrowed, he went to New York and got the rôle of the "washed up" movie actor in "Dinner at Eight," a courageous thing for any actor, but more so for Tearle.

"I am no better actor than I was four years ago, when my name went on every blacklist in town," he says. "Why am I accepted now? Just because I was lucky enough to get a good part in a hit show, I suppose.

Hollywood Maintains Unofficial Blacklist.

"Don't think I'm beefing. My attitude was wrong when I was 'in the money.' I was arrogant. I refused to work nights or on Sundays. I wanted to write my own stories and direct them. My theory may have been right, but practically I was wrong. Anyway, I've learned my lesson and from now on I'll restrict my activities to acting."

Hollywood's blacklist is, of course, entirely unofficial. When word gets around that a certain player or director or writer is hard to handle, or that his demands are beyond reason, executive thumbs are thrust downward when his name is mentioned.

Getting Rid of Salary Was an Easy Task.

"Yes, sure, I was broke," Tearle readily admits. "My mind was broken too, but my body wasn't. Unlike the down-and-outer in the play, I didn't resort to drink, although I was on the verge of seeking relief in liquor several times. How does one get rid of a big movie salary? That's easy. I invested in property, paying part down, when the money was coming in. During my very lean years, in order to live at all, I had to sell my holdings for a fraction of my equity in them."

Tearle doesn't think he wants to remain long in Hollywood, where he now is playing one of the key parts in "The Vinegar Tree." He feels he should return to Broadway, where he has begun to reëstablish himself. For several years prior to 1922, when he first came here, Tearle was a Broadway matinee idol. Previously he had attained success in his native England.

Clark Gable Is Highly Talented Amateur Boxer

Stu Erwin, Walter Huston Also Are Taking Some Lessons in Pugilism.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Max Baer's trainer, Mike Cantwell, is making a hit out at MGM. Mike is a colorful guy, full of poetry and wisecracks. He plays the rôle of the trainer in "The Prize Fighter and the Lady." Mike has a lot of the movie fellows boxing. He says Clark Gable has all the earmarks of a born boxer and looks as if he'd give professionals lots of trouble once he's had a little training. Stu Erwin and Walter Huston are getting deep breathing, resistance training, and boxing, too.

Mike has something to say about diet in his own picturesque language. "Eat slowly; stick to vegetables and fruits, plenty apples, too. When our ancestors came out of a hole in a cave with teeth longer than their forehead, a club in their hand, and lookin' for a snake for breakfast, there was no trouble about figures and diets. They had to work for their food and it was scarce at that."

If you ask Mike how he feels today he says: "Always as good as heredity will permit." A lot of the girls ply him with questions.

● It's funny about how the sophisticated girls have gone ga-ga over little pigtails in their hair. Joan Crawford was the first to start it. She parted her hair on the side and braided the top hair into a tiny pigtail which hung back with her bob. Now Carole Lombard is doing it in a different way. She parts it in the middle and uses the sides and front hair to form two little pigtails which are pinned across the back of her head just above where the bob fluffs out on her neck. It gives a molded line to the head that is quite charming.

● What screen star was locked out on what writer's balcony one cold night this week in a thin evening dress because said writer was plenty burned at her?

● Clara Bow is moving into the house in which Marlene Dietrich lived last year, the house of Charley Mack of "Two Black Crows" fame. It is the famous house with the iron bars on the windows, put there by Marlene at the time she was frightened at kidnapers' threats. The bars have been removed since she left.

● Tullio Carminati and the Countess Dorothy Frasso are being seen places together.

● When Clara Bow finished "Hoopla" she gave a big party for all the folks who had worked on her picture, and was it a merry heyday? Clara danced with the electrician and all the rest of the boys with good nights being said at 4 a. m.

● It looks like a great break for love. Joel McCrea and Frances Dee are playing the young lovers in "Girl Meets Boy." Sadly reminiscent of Sue Carol and Dick Stuart in the days when they worked at making love before the cameras at Fox's. "And they pay us for this," said the two of them. Time changed that, for that pair have gone their ways this past year, although both remain crazy about the baby.

● Douglas Montgomery and Kay Johnson are having fun up at Arrowhead in their off hours from working before the camera in "Eight Girls in a Boat" by putting on a whole répertoire of plays they did in New York in the Little theater at Arrowhead for the rest of the cast, consisting of forty girls.

● The natives around Hillo have had a treat with the De Mille company of "Four Frightened People" working there, for they have seen a real Hollywood stunt man at work. The stunt consisted in taking a fall of forty feet from the limb of an enormous rubber tree. When the man was caught in the net provided for him the natives were a little disappointed but reflected that the movie folks were not so hard hearted after all.

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

This Fan Keeps Posted.

Dear Miss Tinée: It is interesting to note the different opinions of some movie fans in regard to your movie reviews. The contributions by A South Shore Fan and Ruth are a striking example of this. A South Shore Fan wants to know why you give a big sendoff to Janet Gaynor, no matter what her performance is like, and pick all the holes you can in the work of Joan Crawford; while Ruth says you think Joan Crawford and Greta Garbo are the only actresses there are.

Evidently A South Shore Fan didn't read your review of the picture "The Man Who Came Back," in which you waxed eloquent as you justly panned the work of Miss Gaynor and Charles Farrell. Neither did she read your reviews of "Dance Fools Dance" or "Our Dancing Daughters." In these reviews you put Joan Crawford's work on a pedestal.

If these fans who are always kicking would read your reviews, digest them, and tuck bits away in their memory for future reference, they wouldn't be making so many erroneous statements.

When A South Shore Fan says you judge a picture on the basis of whether you like a star or not, he doesn't know what he's talking about. I know of several instances when you praised the work of actors although you hadn't cared for them before. I refer in partcicular to your review of "The Devil's Brother." In this review you said that although you never cared for Laurel and Hardy before, you enjoyed their work in this picture.

Ofttimes I wonder if these sarcastic kickers had their own way, and made everybody like only the actor and actress they themselves like best, wouldn't they find the movies extremely dull with only one male and one female star?

I remember only one review in which you made an error of any consequence. I will save the discussion of it for another letter.

Sincerely yours, NICHOLAS ROTH.

Editor's Note: Methinks I have a champion! And what was the one fatal error?

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—[Special.] Three plays will be added to the Broadway stage catalog next week. They are announced as follows:

"Under Glass" — Opens Monday night at the Ambassador theater. This is a play by Eva Kay Flint and George Bradshaw. Ross Alexander and Ethel Barrymore Colt are the two leading players. Robert Keith, Boyd Irwin, and Harry Shannon are also in the cast.

"Thunder on the Left"—Opens Tuesday night at Maxine Elliott's theater. A dramatization of Christopher Morley's novel, by Jean Ferguson Black. Hortense Alden, James Bell, Louis Jean Heydt, Otto Hulett, and Katharine Warren are in the cast.

"It Pays to Sin"—Opens Wednesday night at the Morosco theater. The authorship of this play is accredited to Johann Vaszary of Budapest. The adaptation is by Louis O. MacLoon and George Redmond. Jane Starr heads the cast, and among her associates are Leon Waycoff, Martin Burton, Ginger Pearson, and Frances Woodbury.

'Ann Vickers,' as a Movie, Should Appeal to All

Irene Dunne's Forceful, Intuitive Interpretation Makes Film Effective.

"ANN VICKERS."

THE CAST.

Ann Vickers	Irene Dunne
Barney Dolphin	Walter Huston
Lindsey Atwell	Conrad Nagel
Captain Resnick	Bruce Cabot
Malvina Wormser	Edna May Oliver
Russell Spaulding	Sam Hardy
Dr. Slenk	Murray Kinnell
Feldermans	Rafaela Ottiano

Kitty Cognac	Helen Eby-Rock
Mona Dolphin	Gertrude Michael

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD Morning!

If you liked "Ann Vickers," the book, you'll enjoy its picture adaptation. If you didn't care for Mr. Lewis' novel—you will for the film. That is, I think you will, judging you by myself—for I belong to the latter category.

I gave the story a most cursory reading for the very good reason (to me) that I couldn't get interested in it. But because—PRINCIPALLY because of Irene Dunne's forceful and intuitive interpretation of the author's central character the picture intrigued me.

Movie Eliminates Story of Ann's Early Life.

Ann Vickers is a beautiful, passionate girl, fired with the idea of doing good—and, still, yearning to live life completely.

The movie eliminates her early life and picks her up during the world war, at which time she is engaged in settlement work.

Ann meets a handsome and ingratiating Capt. Resnick and, to be colloquial, falls for him. Her affair with Resnick teaches her a lot about men and, after her friend, Dr. Malvina Wormser, brings her safely through an experience related in the book but not much more than suggested on the screen, she devotes her energies to the cause of woman, becoming immensely successful in prison work. . . .

It is as the head of a woman's prison that she meets and loves the married Judge Dolphin. Stormy times then—for Ann is to have a baby and the judge is to go to prison. In case you don't know the story I won't spoil the film for you by going into detail.

Censors Raise Cain Which Strikes Critic as Odd.

You can't fail to be charmed and impressed by Miss Dunne. Bruce Cabot, homely but fascinating, makes the heroine's first chastical divergence understandable. Edna May Oliver is aces as the good standby, Dr. Wormser, and Walter Huston as Judge Dolphin gets across excellently—though not with his usual force. Other rôles are well portrayed and the picture has been intelligently directed.

The censors have been raising Cain over issuing a permit for "Ann Vickers." Which is the last word in hollow humor when you consider how they let Mae West get by.

HISTORIETTE

FAY WRAY was born on a farm in Alberta, Canada. When her older brother landed a job in Hollywood he took his family with him—mother, father, and Fay, the kid sister. Miss Wray attended school in Hollywood. One summer vacation her mother permitted her to work as an extra in one of the studios. The second day she was there they gave her a "bit," and the third day she had the lead in a slapstick comedy, "Gasoline Love."

For a while Miss Wray played in westerns and one thing and another, and then Eric Von Stroheim chose her as leading woman for the "Wedding March." Since then she has been in constant demand by the producers, especially for horror films, for Miss Wray can shriek and look scared like nobody's business. You will no doubt remember her portrayals in "Stowaway," "Dr. X.," "King Kong," "Beneath the Sea," "The Vampire Bat," and "Mystery of the Wax Museum."

This talented young woman, who is Mrs. John Monk Saunders in private life, is a clever pianist and has had verses published in magazines. Miss Wray is 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighs 105 pounds, and has dark hair and blue eyes. She names her fox terriers after A. A. Milne characters.

Hunt for Actors.

Marc Connelly and Robert E. Sherwood have sailed to arrange an English production of Mr. Sherwood's latest play, "Acropolis." Although the work is on Jed Harris' Broadway schedule for this season, casting difficulties have been encountered. If proper players can be found abroad the play will first be staged in London.

Actor's Career

WARREN ASHE, who is prominent in the cast of "Dangerous Corner," began his theatrical career at the age of 15 with the New Haven, Conn., stock company. Then he went to New York and was engaged for a rôle in "Abraham Lincoln." The success he scored in that play gained for him the part of Abie in Ann Nichols' "Abie's Irish Rose."

Then followed parts in various plays. Occasionally he deserted the legitimate stage to appear in the silent and later the talking pictures. He played supporting rôles in 20 shorts and 17 feature photoplays for Paramount. After 15 years behind the footlights he is still playing "juvenile" parts. His first appearance, however, was in the rôle of a 70 year old man.

Play for Hope Williams.

Hope Williams, last seen on Broadway in the revue, "Strike Me Pink," will have the star's rôle in "All Good Americans," a comedy by Laura and S. J. Perleman which Courtney Burr will produce soon.

Mercolized Wax

Keeps Skin Young

Absorb blemishes and discolorations using Mercolized Wax daily as directed. Invisible particles of aged skin are freed and all defects such as blackheads, tan, freckles and large pores disappear. Skin is then beautifully clear, velvety and so soft—face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out your hidden beauty. At all leading druggists.

—Powdered Saxolite—

Reduces wrinkles and other age-signs. Simply dissolve one ounce Saxolite in half-pint witch hazel and use daily as face lotion.

If you want to GET RID of Constipation worries

Science says Today use a LIQUID Laxative

1. Control intestinal action exactly—no "purging"
2. Measure to suit your individual needs to the drop
3. Banish Bowel Fatigue and the laxative habit

Here's Why:

Any hospital offers evidence of the harm done by harsh laxatives that drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and in some cases even affect the liver and kidneys.

A doctor will tell you that the unwise choice of laxatives is a common cause of chronic constipation.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form.

What is the "Right" Laxative?

A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to take "a double dose" a day or two later.

In buying any laxative, read the label. Not the claims, but the contents. If it contains one doubtful drug, don't take it.

Try a LIQUID Laxative One Week

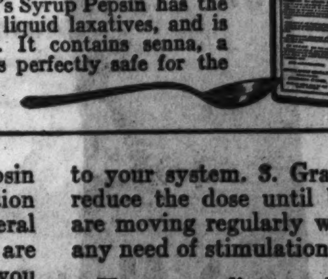
Testing a liquid laxative for only a week or ten days has proved to many men and women that their trouble was not weak bowels, but strong cathartics! Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the highest standing among liquid laxatives, and is the one generally used. It contains senna, a natural laxative which is perfectly safe for the youngest child.



Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescriptional preparation in which there are no mineral drugs. Its ingredients are on the label. By using it, you avoid danger of bowel strain. You can keep the bowels regular, and comfortable; you can make constipated spells as rare as colds.

Can Constipation be Corrected?

"Yes!" say the medical men—"Yes!" say thousands who have followed this sensible medical advice: 1. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Take the dose you find is suited to your system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving regularly without any need of stimulation.

How many dimes and quarters are spent on "popular" laxatives! How quickly they count up, as you use more and more of these habit-forming helps! A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin would save you money—and bring you real relief. The genuine syrup pepsin preparation bears this signature:

MOTHERS! FATHERS! FRIENDS! HELP A BOY OR GIRL WIN A Genuine $250 JUNIOR AUTO RACER FREE!

See the 3 Following Boston Store Pages for More Unusual Values

READ THESE RULES!

Beginning tomorrow, Monday, the Boston Store will issue mileage coupons with each purchase of 10c or more. These mileage coupons will be issued in the following denominations: 10 miles, 50 miles, 100 miles, 500 miles and 1,000 miles. For each 10c worth of merchandise purchased at the Boston Store during the week of October 30th to November 4th, inclusive, a ten mile coupon will be issued upon request, except in instances noted where EXTRA MILEAGE coupons are offered throughout the entire week in our advertisements.

All boys and girls have 6 full days to accumulate their mileage coupons. Begin tomorrow!

Any one who purchases merchandise at the Boston Store may turn their mileage coupons over to any boy or girl.

It is to the advantage of every boy or girl to have as many friends or relatives as possible saving coupons for them.

All mileage coupons must be turned in at the Boston Store by 6 o'clock, Saturday, November 4th, 1933. Booths for receiving coupons will be conveniently located throughout the store.

Children turning in coupons must have them properly separated: all 10 mile coupons together, all 50 mile coupons together, etc. They must be neatly wrapped and the total count must appear on the package. Winners will be announced Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 7th.

Employes of the Boston Store and their immediate families are not eligible to compete.

These National Junior Racer Automobiles are made by the National Sales and Mfg. Co. of Des Moines, Iowa.

These National Auto Racers are genuine automobiles equipped with one cylinder motors that have two speeds forward and one reverse. They are equipped complete with four wheels and a spare wheel all carrying balloon tires. They run approximately sixty miles to the gallon. Runs and operates just like dad's big car. They're real beauties! Let's go Chicago!

CARS will be awarded to the 6 children who turn in the highest total mileage for the week of October 30 to November 4.

Mileage Coupons Will Be Issued Upon Request with All Items, Whether Advertised or Not

Concerts Hold High Place on Chicago's Social Calendar

Writer Tells of John Alden Carpenters' Parties for Musicians; of William L. Phelps' Lecture on Books; of Mrs. Robert R. McCormick's Tea.

By COUSIN EVE.

MUSIC these last days of October, with fortunate auguries and the World's Fair. Mrs. Frederick Coolidge of Pittsfield, Mass., a sister of Albert A. Sprague, arrives. She brings, as did art patrons of old, her own music, a famous European quartet, the Pro Arte strings of Brussels from the royal court of Belgium. True music lovers maintain that chamber music is the only music, the exquisite essence of the art. The quartet gave three concerts at Orchestra hall Wednesday and Friday nights and Sunday afternoon, their crowded audiences being guests of Mrs. Coolidge. Each guest was a Friend of Music.

It was unique to see the small Belgian foursome carrying on at Orchestra hall in the vast spaces of our own great symphony orchestra. A new quartet by John Alden Carpenter and a theme by Roy Harris were played for the first time. Then the Boston Symphony Monday night, again at Orchestra hall. A much excited gathering of high fashion, rushing to its seats as if going to a fire. And Stravinsky's "Sacre du Printemps," a pagan Russian theme, was a fire, even a conflagration. A wildly enthusiastic crowd, and Dr. Serge Koussevitzky leading with temperament up to the mark. Said a musical man to me of the wilted orchestra, "Doesn't he work them, though?"

Stravinsky+Sibelius=Pandemonium.

Dr. Koussevitzky leads with his mouth—like a wild-eyed goldfish en profile! And never such a pandemonium of music as his Stravinsky plus Sibelius.

In the boxes many celebrities, the Belgian quartet, Mrs. Coolidge in black with a silvery jacket, Mrs. Glenn Frank in lustrous white satin, Joyce Borden Baklovic in white, Mrs. Carpenter's sister-in-law and guest, now married to a charming Czech violinist, also here. The Karl Kruegers, Potter Palmers, Albert Spragues, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hamill, Dr. and Mrs. Stock, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster, and many more music lovers filled the boxes.

Carpenters Give After-Concert Parties.

After the concert visiting celebrities along musical lines were invited by Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter to a late supper—the Carpenters had a similar party a few nights before for Mrs. Coolidge, when many came on from the Pro Arte concert. This was an animated and delightful reception where one met a great number of charming people in a most congenial atmosphere.

Mrs. Carpenter, in floating draperies of black tulle, received with her usual verve and entrain, and guests later were seated at small tables set here and there in the halls and reception and dining room of the Lake Shore drive house. A wide and beautifully appointed buffet was set out, with cold viands, salads, fruits, ices. Here the men foraged while the women sat and let themselves be provided for after the appealing mode of the last century. All these new clothes with ruffles and roses make us more definitely feminine.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Brewer, Henry and Mrs. Voegeli, Mr. and Mrs. Ganz, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hamill, Mr. and Mrs. Wormser, Mr. and Mrs. Meeker, Kellogg and Mrs. Fairbank with Mrs. Wallace Irwin, Arthur Bissell, Mr. and Mrs. George Lytton, Roy Harris, Seymour Blair, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Frost.

Tomorrow night another great musical interlude when Lawrence Tibbett sings at the Auditorium at the first of the five fashionable Monday night concerts. The concert is given by the Girl Scout board, of which Mrs. William S. Monroe is generalissima in Chicago, with direction of Miss Denton. These same concerts last year had much distinction; this year they include Lily Pons and the boy prodigy, Menuhin.

Did Morgan Confuse Midget with Senators?

Mr. and Mrs. Silas Strawn's large dinner Monday night was in honor of Nicholas Roosevelt, former minister to Hungary. It was a brilliant party, with very many important people and much stimulating talk among good Republicans. Mr. Roosevelt is related to the President but of another political credo. A handsome and attractive man with that manner, peculiar to all Roosevelts, of being utterly sure of himself.

Mrs. Moore Torlonia was another guest. Tall and distinguished, this former Roman duchess, still popular in Rome, now lives in New York. Her son, however, heir to an old title and empty palace on the Corso, also villas galore, will return later to Italy to take up his Roman titles and estates when he has finished a college course in this country. Rome and Roosevelt remind me of an amusing Rooseveltian story. In August Theodore Jr. and Mrs. Roosevelt were the objects of a large and gay party at the American embassy in Rome. Just come out of Turkestan, everything was new to them and they were convulsed over Pierpont Morgan and the midget and what Alice Roosevelt Longworth had said about it. This was the story:

A man had been telling Mrs. Longworth about Mr. Morgan and the midget. He said, "And Mr. Morgan was very nice to the midget." Said Mrs. Longworth, "Naturally Mr. Morgan would be nice to the midget. How could he know that it wasn't a senator?"

Mrs. Robert R. McCormick Has Tea for Celebrities.

And so it goes. Next week we have a dashing theatrical first night, Ina Claire with the Theater Guild in "Biography." I should hate to miss it. Of teas one very large and interesting, when Mrs. Robert R. McCormick was "at home" in the Astor street house last week for pretty Mme. Taschereau of Quebec and some political visitors of note. There were lines and relays of men, among them Harold F. McCormick, George Langhorne, Dr. Arthur Small, Howard Gillette; also Mr. and Mrs. Eames MacVeagh, Mrs. James W. Thorne, Mrs. Fowler McCormick, Mrs. Arthur Small, Mrs. Francis Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hooper, Chester Johnson, Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney.

Autumn flowers everywhere en masse, pretty women at silver urns. And an outstanding gate crasher. Yes, in alluring costume of gray fur, with sparkling green eyes and graceful

FARM FETE A SOCIAL NOTE IN FAR WEST

SANTA BARBARA, Cal.—(Special)—Attracting much interest of Chicagoans here was the harvest dance given by the Strollers club. Many novel farm costumes being seen during the evening.

Chrysanthemums grown on the estates of Stanley McCormick and the Misses Cudahy of Chicago took a lion's share of the honors in the annual fall flower show staged during the week.

Baron Maximillian von Romberg of Montecito returned this week from a hunting trip to the Kaibab forest in Arizona, where he bagged a fine buck. He made the trip in his new airplane and was joined on the expedition by Clark Gable of screen fame.

Dr. and Mrs. Nathaniel H. Brush of Montecito, accompanied by Mrs. Brush's son, John C. Cochrane, will leave in December for the east to spend the Christmas holidays. They will sail afterward from New York on the steamship Empress of Britain for a world cruise, to be concluded in San Francisco in April.

Mrs. Henry C. Olcott of Chicago is passing the autumn months at the home of her sister, Mrs. Robert J. Jenckes, on Hot Springs road. Mrs. Jenckes has returned to her home in East Haddan, Conn., after a short visit in Montecito. Mrs. Olcott's daughter, Miss Marion Olcott, is in Los Angeles for a short stay.

Princess from Russia Has Distinctive Beauty

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

BECAUSE her distinctive beauty is seen against a background etched with adventure, Princess Aleka Rostislav presents the rôle of glamour. Her name calls up a picture of the splendors of the Russian court and its subsequent tragic ending, a tragedy which Princess Rostislav shared with her husband's kinsmen. Exiled from her country, she chose Chicago for her home and for the last six or seven years has been a much liked member of the social set known as the "young marrieds."

● Tall and slim as a reed, with dark wavy hair and green eyes, Princess Rostislav is a striking figure. She is 5 feet 7 "in her stocking feet," as she says in her delightfully accented voice, and although she leads an incredibly active existence she takes violent setting up exercises every morning. "I nearly break myself in two," she says.

Her eyes have a certain wistfulness, belied by the gayety of her spirit. With her creamy white skin she uses no rouge—but plenty of very bright lipstick, the brightest she can find. The care of her complexion is a simple ritual—good scrubbing daily with a soap made in Chicago and cold water rinse.

● Black is her favorite color for day or evening. Her street costumes usually have touches of white, but her evening gowns are often unrelieved black, cut on the simplest lines. If she wears any jewelry, it is a necklace or bracelet distinguished for its unusualness of design.

Her home is a simple apartment, filled with keepsakes of that other world in which she lived as Princess Aleka Galitzine. Here she entertains very informally, cooking with her own fine hands the Russian dishes her friends enjoy. But the life of Princess Rostislav is far from a round of gayety. She has a job and she does it with no favors asked and none granted. Her hours in the big State street store where she manages a dress department are the same as those of any other worker there. Proving, is it not true, that luxury and leisure are no longer deemed necessary equipment for a glamorous princess—and woman.

WHEN the SOCIAL Spiral SPINS

By GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 28.—[Special.]—The blue prints for the coming social season were drawn up this week.

Mrs. Roosevelt had the wives of the cabinet members over for a conference and she outlined the plans. Simple plans. But nothing revolutionary. Heretofore the wife of the President has had the cabinet wives (it is a funny title, isn't it?) over for a huddle once a week. Mrs. Roosevelt frowns on such a procedure. She'll have them once or twice to get things started. After that the social spiral can go spinning its own way.

The cabinet wives—some of them, at least—haven't dared call their souls their own until this first conference. They're all new at the job, and frightfully fearful of making a misstep. One of them was even afraid to be interviewed out of turn and said she'd be glad to talk—after the newspaper woman had first interviewed all the gals who ranked her. Another was afraid to step up to her seat on a platform the other week until Mrs. Hull, who, as spouse of the secretary of state, ranks the crowd, had gone onto the dais.

Still another said she could hardly wait until Mrs. Roosevelt should summon them all for a seminar on social procedure. She's had no mentor, she admits, except her chauffeur to tell her where to leave cards.

● You think it would be grand to be the wife of the President of the United States? And do anything you want? Perhaps you, in your Berwyn bungalow, really are more independent.

The other day a scribe asked Mrs. Roosevelt if she were going to give a dinner for a visiting celebrity—let's not mention the name.

"I really don't know," she answered frankly. "When the time comes I imagine I'll be told."

Of course, the people who do the telling—about official visitors, that is—are the protocol boys over at the state department.

● The dust is beginning to shiver down from the expensive paneling in the sixty room mansion that Mrs. George Pullman built for her son-in-law, Frank Lowden, when he thought he'd run for the senate.

For that huge house, with its marvelous mantles, its doors costing $750 apiece, is now the property of the Russian government. Lowden didn't try for the senate; the house was sold; came finally into the possession of John Hays Hammond, who sold it to the Russians. But since the fall of the Kerensky régime the house proper has been vacant. Only the chancery has been occupied by a caretaker and his family.

If the Russians return? Well, that hole in the roof which a recent storm wrought will have to be repaired. And those royal ghosts that neighbors insist they hear of nights may be merely the rats who will have to be sent scurrying.

● The cabinet ladies have also started their luncheons for the wife of the President. Suppose it is convenient for Mrs. Wallace to have her luncheon around Thanksgiving time and not convenient for Mrs. Woodin to have hers until Christmas. Can the good ladies do it that way? They cannot. Mrs. Hull must give the first luncheon. Then on down the line in direct relation to the year which the office the hostess' husband holds was established. That ranks Mrs. Woodin of the treasury ahead of Mrs. Wallace of agriculture, and that is the end of free will.

THEY MODELED JEWELS AT ONE OF THE FASHION SHOWS

BUSY BUDS AT THE FORTNIGHTLY CLUB

Miss Virginia Ashcraft and Miss Jean Hyman, two of the most piquant of this season's crop of debutantes, going into the Fortnightly club on Bellevue place for a meeting or luncheon or one of the hundred and one other things that are keeping the buds so busy. Miss Ashcraft is a daughter of the junior Edwin M. Ashcrafts, and Miss Hyman is the Robert M. Hymans' only child.

Concerts, Plus Toscanini, Stir Paris Society

James Roosevelts Attend Wagner Festival with Countess Costantini.

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Toscanini's appearances here with the Straram orchestra at the Théatre des Champs-Elysées have been these days a mundane as well as a musical event. For the second Wagner festival concert, which had to be repeated owing to the imperative demand, James Roosevelt, the President's son, and his wife and the latter's sister, Mary Cushing, were guests of Countess Constanini, and Mrs. Walter Dillingham of Honolulu was also in the group.

Other well known Americans seen at these three concerts, of which the first consisted of modern French and Italian music, were J. Ridgely Carter, Mrs. Herman Harjes, Miss Belle Baruch, Comtesse de Vallombrosa, Princess Christian of Hesse, formerly Elizabeth Reid Rogers; Princess Thurn, Mr. and Mrs. Williamson Howell of the embassy, and the former Mrs. Elise Stern, who recently became the bride of Señor Souza-Dantas, the Brazilian ambassador in Paris.

Ganna Walska Will Open New York Residence.

Mme. Ganna Walska, owner of the Théatre des Champs-Elysées, who had a number of guests in her box for each concert, and who is arranging an important series of orchestral, ballet, and lyric performances at this theater, is sailing soon for a stay of several weeks in New York, and will open her house there. Serge Lifar, the leading male dancer of the Paris opera and master of choregraphy, and Mme. Misia Sert, the first wife of the Jose-Maria Sert who recently executed panels for the Rockefeller Center, are also sailing on the Ile de France Oct. 25 for New York. Toscanini's daughter Wanda, who is engaged to Vladimir Horowitz, is with her fiancé in Paris, where she was seen the other day at Schiaparelli's arranging her trousseau.

Mrs. Walter Dillingham is the recipient of much hospitality these days. Recently Mrs. A. B. Spreckels of San Francisco gave a luncheon for her. Until the first of January Mrs. Dillingham will reside with a French family to perfect herself in the language, and then proceed to Switzerland for the winter sports, returning to Paris in the spring. Her aunt, Mrs. Arthur Acton of Florence, the former Hortense Mitchell of Chicago, is sailing for America with her brother, John J. Mitchell, and will pass through the Panama canal.

Prince Mdivani and Bride Return to Paris.

Prince Alexis Mdivani and his bride, Barbara Hutton, are just back in Paris after their wedding, which created a sensation here last June, and their honeymoon, which took them to Lake Como, the Lido, Biarritz, and Morocco. It so happens that Mdivani's first wife, Louise Van Alen, is in town, and the other evening she was in a party given by Dorothy Spreckels at Ciro's.

Dorothy's mother, Mrs. A. B. Spreckels, created the Palace of the Legion of Honor in San Francisco, and has recently enriched it with a number of important casts from the great Rodin's studio. This type of work by the master is difficult to pick up and it forms an important addition to the hundred pieces of sculpture from his chisel which already adorn the California Legion of Honor museum.

walk, she made her way among the many admiring guests to the tea table, where she asked to be served. She was a neighbor's pet maltese cat who had found the open door. Mrs. McCormick, who had stopped for a minute in Paris this fall, wore a plain black dress with a cravat of black sequines and a small hat of the same. Very nouveau and restrained.

Many Saddened by Death of Louise Fox.

Sad news on Tuesday when the death of Louise Fox at Wheaton became known to the great number of people who were her devoted friends. For many years Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fox have been hosts at their Wheaton house to an always widening circle. As a hostess Mrs. Fox had no equal. Charming to look at, slight, with smiling blue eyes, a fair bright skin, she was of New York ancestry, with traditions as to the art of friendship and good living. A living room full of sunshine, a high piled wood fire, a half dozen dogs and furry cats, and a circle of happy people. That was the scene each Sunday at Blue Fox manor, where last Sunday one was a bidden guest.

Things run in cycles. Last week the high plane of books and libraries. One heard more of books in a few days than for the past year. A convention of librarians was in session, and a large luncheon at the Congress in honor of givers and friends of libraries was held Thursday in the Joseph Urban room. A beautiful room, its pale peach walls artfully paneled in black à la Japonaise.

These, highly enameled and flecked with patterns in dull gold, with the same treatment of the high ceiling, make a night club of serene allurement, as well as a stimulating place to lunch.

Queen Victoria, British Literati Aided Our Library.

Many small tables were full of librarians, and a long line of speakers to the left included foreign delegates, Chairman James Weber Linn, Mrs. Charles Deering, Mrs. William R. Harper, Mrs. Westover Channon, Mrs. Daniel Burnham, Edward A. Cudahy, Dr. Archibald Church, and two long bushy beards, one worn by the Vatican delegate, the other by the Louvain cleric. Most of those named were givers of libraries; indeed, Chicagoans are outstanding in that manner of memorial.

The Chicago Public library was reopened after the fire of 1871 by a gift of 8,000 volumes from England. Among the givers were Queen Victoria, Gladstone, Disraeli, Carlyle, Ruskin, Tennyson, Browning, and many other notables of that day.

Names of prominent Chicagoans who have given entire libraries or parts were assembled and one read them on the program. There was John Crerar's great bequest, and Judge Gary's law library to Northwestern. Mrs. Simon Reid's gift to Lake Forest college, and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Kimball's endowment to the Art institute.

Local Promoters of Erudition Honored.

Then George A. Coe gave a fund for a music collection in Evanston, while Mrs. Channon has established two libraries, one in memory of Pasteur at Strasbourg, and the French library of the Alliance, Chicago. Mrs. Charles Deering and Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, also Mrs. Richard Danielson gave the Charles Deering library to Northwestern. Mr. and Mrs. William J. Chalmers established a book room at Schofield barracks, Honolulu, in memory of their only son, the gallant Maj. Tom Chalmers.

And Mrs. Robert B. Gregory, Miss Cornelia Lunt, Joy Morton, Mrs. John G. Shedd, her daughters, Mrs. Schweppe and Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Joseph Schaffner, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Stern, Mrs. Martin O. Ryerson, Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson, and Col. Robert W. Stewart have all contributed book collections to various cities. James Weber Linn was a witty chairman and one would have chosen to stay for the speeches, which included Horace Bridges also, and a dozen others, only the program overlapped St. Luke's fashion show, which after all is a charitable event wherein one's best friends have worked these many months.

Book of Madame Pompadour Is Displayed at Meeting.

Among the many groups were leading women of Chicago—Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Mrs. Laird Bell, Mrs. Charles Hamill, Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Mrs. Paul Welling, Mrs. Martin Schutze, Dr. and Mrs. Woodward, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. J. W. Linn.

At the Friday club the season opens with a talk on books by Alfred Hamill, a noted architect as well as a book collector. Worthy of a conferencier of the 18th century, it was an absolutely ideal way to spend a bright October morning. Disposed on tables on the platform were a score of magnificent volumes, a few of them historic, one with the book plate of Mme. de Pompadour. Satin sheen, wonderfully tooled leather, a book already old when it fell into the Pompadours' hands.

A book of Greek anthologies, richly illustrated, lay open at this quaint menu for Lent: Cours Demetrius achetes á la Halle ches Amynthos, 3 perches de mer, dix sardines, deux douzaines de crevettes."

Mrs. William Nitze, president of the Friday club, introduced Mr. Hamill, who began with a very amusing thought. His talk on books, he said, should be called "why dollars leave home." It was further garnished with much humor and given in such a casual manner that it seemed like the most fascinating dinner table conversation.

Gertrude Stein Is Pet Horror of "Billy" Phelps.

Mr. Hamill's library in Lake Forest, unique setting for treasures of the past and early editions, is a room his neighbors speak of as of a shrine—one of the loveliest rooms in the country.

It seemed to me we were fairly well along on our return to normalcy when a storm of applause greeted this morning talk on old books. It was followed by a buffet luncheon for at least a hundred members and guests. On Saturday it was contemporary books of which William Lyon Phelps spoke at Town Hall lecture in the Drake ballroom. Absolutely charming talk, and scores of Yale men present, some being former pupils. Prof. Phelps said to begin, "I don't mind people leaving early; I envy them."

Gertrude Stein is one of his pet horrors, writer of pure balderdash. And, with a detestably infantile style of naive repetition, he said. Saying, for example, "I went to Wabash avenue and met a policeman, yes, a policeman on Wabash avenue," and so on for pages.

Reminding him of the little boy kept in school to write 1,000 words on cats. This he did thus: "I went to the yard, and there sat a cat on the fence, and I said, 'Kitty, kitty, kitty, kitty. . . .'"

But Dr. Phelps confessed he had fallen in love with Gertrude's autobiography, that it was a charming and dazzling narrative supposed to be by her secretary in which she made the most fiendish statements, including an unflattering speech about Ernest Hemingway and others.

"The Book of Talbot," edited by Violet Clifton, is the diary of an English superman descended in a straight line from before the Norman Conquest—with her remarks. He had estates, wealth, position, friends, but was at heart a frontiersman, had to travel alone.

THEY'RE NOT AFRAID OF THE BIG BAD WOLF

"We're not afraid of the big bad wolf," Eleanor Janney, Jean O'Brien, and Katherine Weary might be singing, and, although it is not nice to compare them with "Three Little Pigs," it's nice to wish them the success in real life the little pigs have had in reel life.

Hockey Women Have a Disastrous European Trip

Correspondent Can Offer No Theories on English Victory Over America.

By Ann Whittingham.

LONDON.—[Special.]—Really, the inability of the visiting American women's hockey team to stand up to the English women hockey players is most interesting.

The Americans lost nearly all of the games on their recent tour.

Their biggest defeat was at Dulwich, when they faced "the English touring team of 1928." They lost that match, 11 goals to one, but that was not so bad when you recall that this team of English women visited the United States in 1928 and won all their matches, with total goals of 230 to two!

Game Comes Natural to English Women.

I have no theories, no settled theories, to account for English feminine success in this field except that hockey seems to be a game profoundly congenial to them. Every English girl I know either plays hockey or has played it at school, but every one of them seems to take it casually. There is, at least on the surface, nothing like the absorption in it, the concentration upon it, which I seem to remember at Vassar. And yet the English playing fields turn out all-conquering teams of women players.

The chief comment on the American playing in the English papers was that it was "erratic," but that is such an easy comment to make on any game in which a swift moving ball is involved that I lay no stress on it. Apparently the real trouble was that the English women's teamwork was far superior to ours.

Headmaster Promotes "Stupid" Pupil.

Dr. W. J. Skinner, headmaster of a secondary school at Bury St. Edmunds, has given the English educational authorities a hard nut to crack.

One of his boys, apparently a hopeless dunce who could never pass an examination, had been the subject of innumerable teachers' conferences. Dr. Skinner, who dislikes examinations as a pedagogical method, says that he solved the problem by ignoring the examination results and jumping the boy straightway into the highest class, or, as they say here, the top form.

There the youngster, slightly bewildered at first, got his teeth into the work and did extraordinarily well!

"Systems, standardizations, and false conceptions, propounded with diabolical fervor," says Dr. Skinner, "are crushing the most precious thing, the individual self."

But I often think the English stress on examinations is due much less to English teachers than it is to the English business man.

Business Men Insist on "Matric."

The latter stubbornly insists that any boy who applies for a "white collar" job must have "passed his matric," meaning an examination practically covering the entrance requirements of a university.

I knew one youth who had done poorly at school and had tried vainly to get a job. Nobody would have him because he hadn't passed his "matric."

Finally his mother got a tutor for him and the boy reviewed his past school work and finally succeeded in getting the coveted certificate and a job.

Even the "progressive" schools, which go in for "self-expression" and general lawlessness in the case of young pupils, all look rather seriously at that dreaded "matric" and drill their students during the last two years so they can pass it.

The reason is purely economic. Progressive education can make little headway in England until it converts the British business man.

Bank Clerks Are Urged to Organize.

British bank clerks have opened a country-wide campaign to bring some 70,000 bank clerks into their somewhat militant organization, the Bank Officers' guild.

They now have 21,000 members and the paying teller at my branch bank tells me he will be speaking at meetings about three nights a week until Christmas.

Their journal, the Bank Officer, of which he gave me a copy, is certainly a saucy little paper, mincing no words about the salary reductions which the rank and file have suffered.

They want their former salaries restored and they want to be consulted about any further installations of those marvelous American bookkeeping machines which add and subtract and ring a bell when a customer's account is overdrawn. Those machines, according to the little journal, are making robots of young men and women who ought to be learning the profession of banking.

All in all, a surprising little paper when you consider how conventional the British bank clerk is supposed to be. One of the best articles is an amusing one on "Are Bank Clerks Mutts?" The author proves conclusively that they are not.

Small Buttonholes Embarrass Gentlemen.

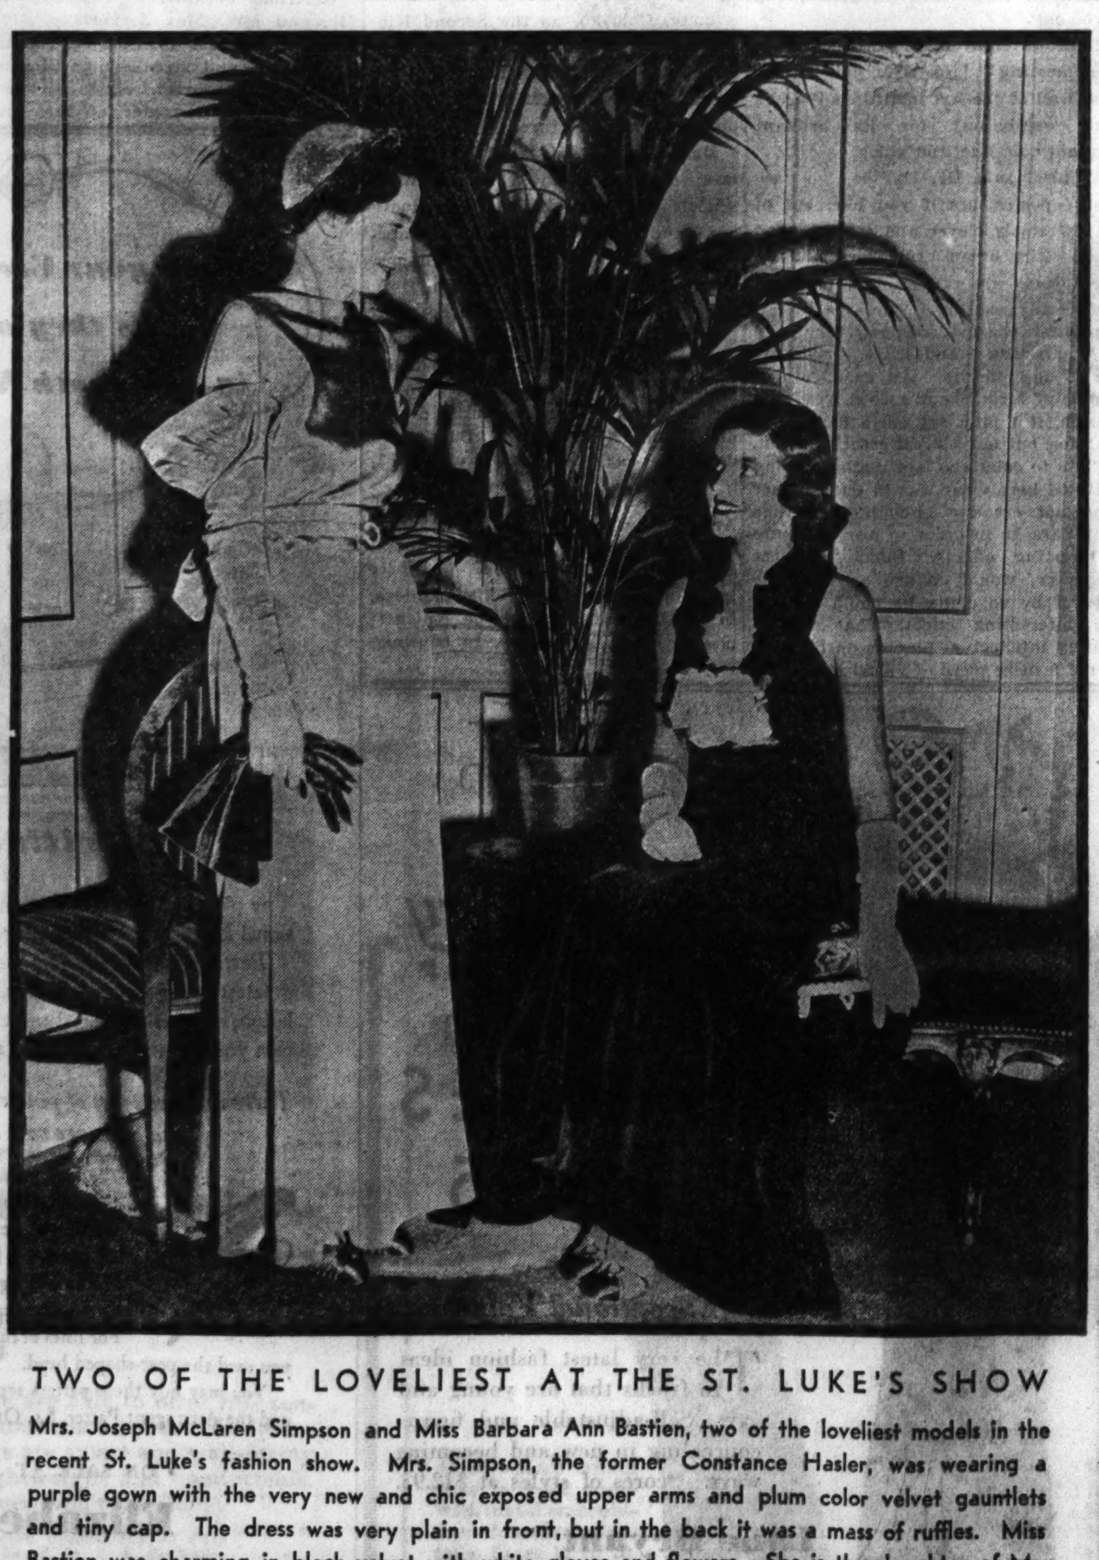
For once in its ancient history Savile row has been caught napping.

This autumn King George has unexpectedly set the fashion of wearing a large "white pearl" carnation which sets snugly into his buttonhole. But the "white pearl" is a large flower and it requires a buttonhole at least an inch and a quarter wide. Unfortunately Savile row, which has seen no buttonhole bouquets for years and years, has been making only nominal buttonholes, none of them more than three-quarters of an inch in width. When milord, the London clubman, dives into a florist's and buys a large carnation and finds, to his exasperation, that it won't go in, he raises a row with his tailor.

There has been a lot of heart burning over this and frantic resewing of buttonholes.

War Discussion Concerns London.

But I don't deny that our main preoccupation these days is with war. It is discussed incessantly, much as it was last May before Mr. Roosevelt and Herr Hitler temporarily quieted things. Everybody seems to feel that another emotional crisis is creeping upon us. The Sunday Referee, a newspaper widely read in the middle class, has an alarming three column article on current German preparations for gas warfare, with apparently full and specific details about the factories. It is a nightmarish year, even though the theaters have full houses and the night clubs, reopened for the season, seem to thrive.



TWO OF THE LOVELIEST AT THE ST. LUKE'S SHOW

Mrs. Joseph McLaren Simpson and Miss Barbara Ann Bastien, two of the loveliest models in the recent St. Luke's fashion show. Mrs. Simpson, the former Constance Hasler, was wearing a purple gown with the very new and chic exposed upper arms and plum color velvet gauntlets and tiny cap. The dress was very plain in front, but in the back it was a mass of ruffles. Miss Bastien was charming in black velvet with white gloves and flowers. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin E. Bastien of Glencoe, who have taken an apartment at 1448 Lake Shore drive.

Engagement Is Event of Week in N. Y. Society

Margaret Lanier Lawrence and Drayton Cochran Are to Be Married.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The news of the week, speaking socially, is undoubtedly the engagement of Margaret Lanier Lawrence, daughter of the Charles Lanier Lawrences, to Drayton Cochran, son of the late Gifford Cochran and the Princess Chlodwig Hohenlohe-Schillingfurst.

Margaret is one of the loveliest of the post debs. She made her debut some two winters ago at a supper dance at Pierre's on the same night that Nancy Morgan and Cecilia Belmont made their bows. She is a very close friend of the equally lovely Whitney Bourne, daughter of Mrs. Harvey Dow Gibson. Once upon a time Margaret had dramatic ambition, as well. But now Whitney is a full fledged actress, and Margaret has decided to shelve a possible career for Drayton Cochran.

Her daddy is the noted builder of airplane motors, but back in the early days of the century Charlie Lanier was a rival of Willie K. Vanderbilt II, as an amateur automobile racer.

Families Represent Young Marrieds in All Phases.

Drayton Cochran is the younger brother of Gifford Cochran Jr., who is perhaps best known to most of America as the young man who brought "Maedchen in Uniform" to this country. Giff and his friend, John [Icky] Krimsky are head over heels in the theatrical and movie matters, and thus differ from Brother Drayton, who goes in for yachting.

Drayton attended St. Paul's and Yale. Through his mother he is a grandson of Mrs. James Madison Taylor of Philadelphia. An aunt is Mrs. Albert Mansfield Patterson. His sister, Jean, eloped with George J. Atwell Jr., which latter fact brings Drayton into touch with the Krimskys, since Johnny Krimsky married George Atwell's sister, Angela.

Incidentally, Mary Atwell is Mrs. Francis Hitchcock, of the equine loving clan, and thus the Cochrans and Atwells and Lawrences will certainly represent the younger marrieds in all their phases, from horse racing and yachting to the theater.

No date has been set, as yet, for the wedding.

National Horse Show to Have Golden Jubilee.

With town brighter than in ages, and every theater and café jammed nightly, society is looking forward to Nov. 8, when the national horse show golden jubilee opens at the Garden, to continue until Nov. 14.

While this is only the 47th exhibition, it has been decided to honor it with the name of golden jubilee, the more so because every one expects that it will be the best attended as well as the most brilliant show of recent years.

Among those who are aiding in the various activities of the show, including the annual ball to be given at the Waldorf on Nov. 13, are Charles F. Alexandre, Richard Van N. Gambril, William V. C. Ruxton, George B. St. George, Adrian Van Sinderen, David Wagstaff, John W. Cowdin, Amory L. Haskell, Alfred B. Maclay, H. Edward Manville, and Reginald W. Rives.

Mrs. George B. St. George is chairman of the ladies' entertainment committee and her assistants are Mrs. David Wagstaff, Mrs. L. Havemeyer Butt, Mrs. Lucius Boomer, Mrs. Charles Fellowes-Gordon, Mrs. Amory L. Haskell, Mrs. Edward A. Hurd, Mrs. Thomas Logan, Mrs. Reginald W. Rives, and Mrs. Adrian Van Sinderen.

Agenda for Deb Dances Makes Progress.

The confiscation of good dates for debutante dances goes on. As might be expected, the Devereux Milburns coralled a splendid one for Daughter Katharyn. The younger of the Milburn girls will make her bow on Thanksgiving eve, Nov. 29, at the Milburn country home in Westbury, L. I.

Kay is a granddaughter of Charles Steele and the late Mrs. Steele. She is a niece of Mrs. F. Skiddy von Stade and of Mrs. Hall Clovis. Her father, of course, is the one and only "Dev" Milburn still thought to be the greatest poloist of his time.

Another deb to get a good date is Ellen French, daughter of Mrs. Livingston French and of the noted "Frankie" French, Ellen will make her town bow at a dance at Pierre's on Dec. 1, given in her honor by Mrs. Edward L. Burrill.

SHE GOT MORE THAN HER QUOTA OF SALES

With such a winning smile Miss Jane Lawrence hardly could have failed to get more than her quota of silver and bills for the programs she was selling at a recent society benefit performance.

3 More World Fair Paintings Printed Today

One by Renoir, French Modernist, the Other Two by Americans.

For my part, I have a predilection for painting that lends joyousness to a wall. People are always telling you that Rembrandt is greater than Watteau. Good Lord, I know that, but the pleasure a picture gives you can't be measured. When I'm looking at one picture I simply forget all others.

Why do people always look for ideas in painting? When I look at a masterpiece I am satisfied simply to enjoy it. It takes a professor to find defects in the masters. The very defects may be necessary. Raphael's "Saint Michael" in the Louvre has a thigh half a mile long! But it might not be so fine otherwise. AUGUSTE RENOIR.

(Painter of "The Bather"—gallery 45, east wall—which is one of the gems of the Art institute's $75,000,000 World's Fair art show closing next Wednesday night.)

By James O'Donnell Bennett.

(Three pictures in rotogravure section)

THE foregoing words of Renoir chosen for our motto this morning are the joyous essence of Renoir.

That delightful man, gone now these fourteen years but still one of the most vibrant influences and one of the most charming personalities in the annals of painting, never canted, never attitudinized, and never berated the honest likings of people, however erroneous he thought those likings might be.

RENOIR AT 78.

He was for joy — unaffected and spontaneous—and that quality he got onto canvas in a manner seemingly so facile, so rapturous that, to those who had no knowledge of his methods it gave no token of the pious conscience he brought to his work.

"Always on a Holiday," Said the Serious Man.

To Ambroise Vollard, Paris picture dealer who wrote an entrancing book—largely records of his conversation—about him, Renoir once said:

"There is a mot of Joyant's that gave me a lot of pleasure. Some one was looking at my picture called 'The Spring.'

"'Ah, that man Renoir!' said he—'he's never serious. Always on a holiday.'

"'Right you are,' said Joyant—'painting a woman excites him more than embracing her.'"

Of that holiday spirit of Renoir's and of his honest pagan delight in the beauty of the flesh—which, when all is said, is the beauty which chiefly preoccupies mankind and which keeps the world peopled—"The Bather" is a signal example.

It is No. 338 in the institute's mighty gallery 45 which contains eleven Manets, seventeen Renoirs, Fantin-Latour's portrait of Manet, Albert Andre's portrait of pathetic but still valiant Renoir at the age of seventy-three, and naught else save Berthe Morisot's "Woman at Her Toilet."

Be Warned and Delay Not Your Pilgrimage.

That gallery does not have to contain anything but the Manets and the Renoirs to be one of the most illustrious rooms in the world today. Nowhere outside Paris can you see anything like it. Pity it is that the collection hanging in it will remain a collection only four more days—including this day.

Be warned, therefore, and give two of your best hours to it before the opportunity slips by forever. On Wednesday night the packers will begin taking down the pictures and shipping back to their owners the ten of the twenty-eight Manets and Renoirs that are loans. Happily eighteen of these treasures are owned by the institute.

Here Is a Rare Word for Your Vocabulary.

The nacreous—a painter's word for flesh that has an iridescent luster resembling mother of pearl—"Bather" of Renoir is one of the pictures that will depart.

Renoir painted it in 1885, when he was forty-four years old, and it belongs in what critics agree was his most beautiful period, a period of nearly two decades, or, to be more exact, from 1878 to 1895. The earliest Renoir in this gallery is his "Diana" of 1867 and the latest his "Flower on the Hat" of 1893. The seventeen paintings by him in the room include portraits, nudes, flower pieces—which he dearly loved to paint—landscapes and genre pictures.

And Maybe You Won't Be Here Then.

Therefore you can see what an opportunity, both as to dates and subjects, this is to study Renoir—an opportunity not likely to be duplicated here until Chicago celebrates forty-three years hence the two hundredth anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

Renoir rejoiced in light, and he succeeded in transferring its witcheries to canvas. People speak of his "sun bathed foliage." Miss Eleanor Jewett once called him "the painter of light," and around his "Les Pecheuses" she wove this lovely phrase:

"The light that here falls on the sky and the sea is the golden gleam sought by Merlin." And she added, "Renoir caresses."

"Skin That Takes the Light" Was His Quest.

Over and over again in Vollard's vivid book about vivid Renoir you find the painter talking of—almost praying for—"skin that takes the light." "You know," he said to his Boswell, "how I hate to paint skin that does not take the light. . . . I had just as lief paint any old crock that comes along, just so long as she has a skin that takes the light. . . . It was in this garden that I made the various portraits of Mademoiselle Samary. She was a charming girl. And what a beautiful skin she had! She positively radiated light from within!"

Caillebotte, connoisseur of food as well as of pictures, used to say, "All that Renoir asks of a cook is that she have 'a skin that takes the light.'"

To that pleasantry Renoir would reply:

"Some of our servants have had admirable figures and have posed like angels. I don't see how artists can paint those overbred females they call society women! Have you ever seen a society women whose hands were worth painting? A woman's hands are lovely—if they are accustomed to housework. . . . What surprises one gets when the model first takes off her clothes! Some seem to be well formed but look like nothing at all, whereas others, quite hopeless at first sight, are veritable goddesses, once they are nude."

What "Skin That Takes the Light" Means.

We stood—Dr. Harshe, director of the Art institute, and I—before "The Bather," on the east wall of gallery 45, which is a signal example of Renoir's painting of skin that takes the light.

"He was prolific," mused the director—"and how facile! This picture was done without apparent effort. There are no labored passages in it. Seemingly, Renoir painted as easily as other people write."

The director, if a look could wither, would have drooped where he stood. But my look was lost upon him, for he had eyes only for the mother of pearl iridescence shining from the body of the bather. . . . "as easily as other people write." O, well, what matter? If it reads easily 'tis good writing. But how most of us have to sweat to make it read easily—and then so often we fail! However—

"What is the attribute of human skin, director, that makes it take the light? Is it the color or the texture?"

Both Color and Texture Work the Magic.

"Both. Some skin is opaque and possesses a translucent quality that seems to drink in as well as to diffuse light."

"Would it be skin of light or a dark complexion?"

"It would not necessarily be either a light or a dark person possessing such a skin, although, generally speaking, it goes with light hair. But in Renoir's 'Bather' the hair is dark.

"Renoir had a love for the nude, just as he had for flowers. It was a healthy love. The mere fact that his models were very often peasant girls meant a healthy type. His women are rather thickset, short and strong. I think you get all of that in this picture. Here the model may have been one of the sturdy girls he painted at Guernsey, where even the English women bathers lost their prudery. Here is a healthy, firm body. The flesh is glowing and it is painted with a frank, pagan delight in its beauty. Nothing ethereal about it, nothing impersonal. It is there.

Following Delicacies in Renoir's Technique.

"There is an especially interesting thing about this picture: There is only one note of dark in it. It's keyed very high. All the passages are light except the hair.

"Now look at those children in No. 348 on this wall—the picture called 'On the Terrace'—and mark how Renoir overaccented the eyes. He loved to do that in order to draw your instant attention to the faces. Always he had a reason.

"Nothing seems to have caused him much grief or striving. In that respect contrast him with his friend Manet on yonder west wall. Manet must have pondered deeply over his linear passages, and we know that Degas did. But with Renoir all that seems to have been a sort of intuition."

Before you turn away from the Renoir wall, do linger before the portrait of him in old age by his pupil, Albert Andre. There you behold a man both piteous and valiant. His fingers were then terribly crippled by rheumatism and he had to paint with a movement that began at the wrist. When he was carried to his easel a servant or a member of the family would tie the brush to his fingers. He would not be conquered. He painted—and painted beautifully—to the end.

When it became impossible for him to pay visits or to do anything that required vigorous movement he uttered these glorious words:

"Really I am a lucky man. Now I can do nothing but paint."

His conversation was full of whimsicalities, but they were not those of a merely cantankerous invalid. They were directed against outworn conventionalities and bogus sentiment.

Bored once by clamor about alleged German vandalism, he said dryly, "Yes, as soon as a picture has suffered at the hands of the Bosches they at once make it out to be a masterpiece."

He detested the younger Dumas' "Camille," saying, "I have always had a horror of sentimental harlotry."

"The clergy," he said, "wear a definite costume. When you see them coming you can take to your heels. But your damned Socialists dress just like every one else. They get hold of you before you know what's coming, and then they bore you to death."

And this treasure: "You come to Nature with your theories [of painting] and she knocks them all flat."

Where Impressionists Failed to Copy.

And of pseudo impressionists:

"The first impressionists worked away without ever even thinking of a sale! It is the only thing our imitators have forgotten to copy."

Vollard says:

"Only once did I ever hear him speak ill of any one—he said of Mme. de Sévigné, 'She's the most terrible bore I know of.'"

Well, madam having been dead two centuries, nobody's feelings were hurt—save possibly those of her adorer Thornton Wilder.

John Sargent's Only Remembered Nude.

Our second nude on the color page of this morning's rotogravure section is interesting for its lithe beauty of line and for the fact that it is the only remembered nude from the brush of John Singer Sargent, painter to society in England and America—and a man who would have gone much further in his art if he had never seen the inside of a London drawing room.

This "Egyptian Girl" [No. 477, gallery 25, east wall] he painted in Egypt in 1891 when he was making archæological studies for his murals in Boston's public library and museum.

"I remember," said Dr. Harshe, "no other nude by Sargent. To me it is a very remarkable thing in the litheness, the twisting of the body, and the tawny skin is very rich and beautiful."

The Grand Old Lady Of American Painting.

Miss Cecilia Beaux, 70 years old now and walking with a crutch, but still painting and writing with much charm and tenderness, is the grand old lady of American art. The latest of many honors conferred upon her at home and abroad was the National Achievement award, a gold medal bestowed by Chi Omega, a women's organization which annually honors with its medal an American woman who has made an outstanding contribution to culture. This honor was conferred April 17 last and Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt flew from Washington to New York to attend the ceremony.

Painters enjoy Miss Beaux's "After the Meeting" [No. 430, gallery 25, east wall of the Art institute's World's Fair exhibition] for its brilliant piquancy of line and color.

"This," said Dr. Harshe, "is 'society' portraiture if you like, but of an extremely clever and sophisticated kind. The broad brushwork and direct attack are rather outstanding in American painting. There is no attempt at characterization. The lady is chattering—and it's a brilliantly chattering picture. An excellent example of Miss Beaux's style, yes—and she is, if I may say so, a darn good painter, but not a great creative artist.

"As to color she is a realist, having painted here what was in front of her and not creative enough to change any passage in order to produce more interesting effects. Renoir, on the contrary, would change anything he saw if by so doing he could achieve an interesting effect. That was a purely intellectual process on his part—not a mere piece of visual notation."

Original of Whistler's "Mother" Is Most Talked Of Canvas in A Century of Progress Fine Arts Exhibition

Lent by Louvre for American Tour

By Eleanor Jewett.

ONLY three more days! After Nov. 1 that magnificent collection of art housed in the Chicago Art institute, the official Century of Progress fine arts exhibition, will be dismantled and as soon as it is humanly possible scattered to the four quarters of the United States from which it was assembled last spring. Two hundred private owners and forty-two museums made this exhibit possible through their generous spirit in willing that the Chicago exhibit should be the finest the world has yet been privileged to see. If there are still Chicagoans who have not seen the paintings, this message is an earnest summons to go at once.

Probably of all the works of art included in the exhibition the one which has been the most talked of and the one which may be the longest remembered is the severe, simple, classical composition, the portrait of his mother by Whistler. The Museum of Modern Art in New York first borrowed this famous canvas from the Louvre in October, 1932, and arranged a coast to coast itinerary for it. The same museum writes that since it was first borrowed more than two million people have seen it.

Upturned Noses Greeted "Mother" Forty Years Ago.

It has been shown in New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles, St. Louis, Columbus, and Chicago. During November it will be exhibited at the Cleveland Museum of Art. Then it will travel to Kansas City, Toledo, Dayton, and Boston before its present scheduled return to Paris in June, 1934. Other cities are begging for the opportunity of seeing it, so the Museum of Modern Art has decided to petition the Louvre for an extension of time.

It is ironical to reflect that forty years ago, when the celebrated portrait was shown at the first Chicago World's Fair, a number of cities now so eager to borrow it had the chance to buy it for a thousand dollars—and refused.

Extreme caution is taken to guard the Whistler painting as it passes from city to city and while it is on display. It is shown only in buildings that are absolutely fireproof. It is protected not only by a guard on constant duty and an iron rail, but by a concealed mechanism so delicate that if the painting is moved in the slightest degree a loud alarm sounds.

For further protection, a detailed photograph of the painting is made by each museum on the day of its arrival and departure. The genuineness of the photograph is vouched for by the affidavit of museum officials. The final detail of authenticity is assured by photographing with the painting a local newspaper published the day it arrives and the day it leaves the city.

Besides the Whistler portrait there are many brilliant and beautiful pictures in the exhibit, the memory of which will linger long after the originals are safely back in their respective homes. It is easily among the probabilities that our 1933 Fair will be remembered forty years from now for this exhibit, the Science building and—Sally Rand.

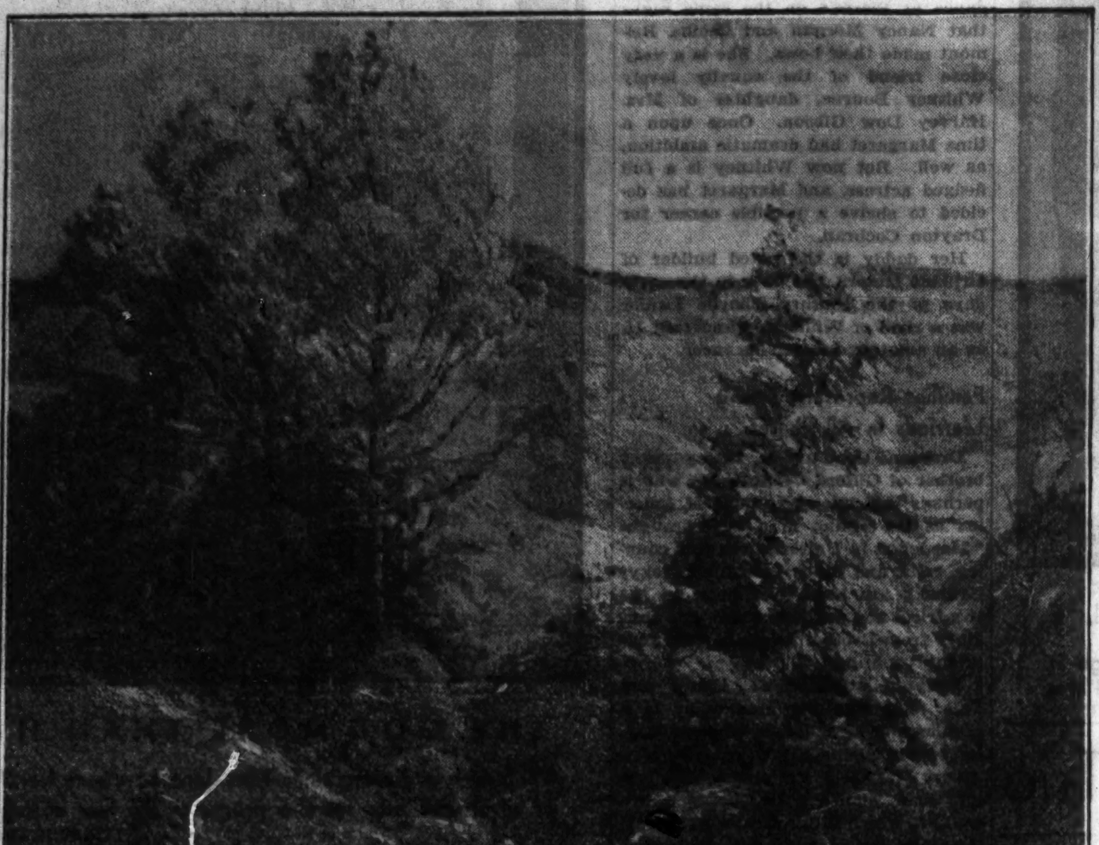
The first word of a new exhibit after the close of the official exhibition is that we may look forward to bringing the children to a showing of "Mickey Mouse" cartoons in one of the Art institute galleries. Thus will a rapid descent be achieved from Rembrandt to Walt Disney, but the world wags on and we must wag with it. The cartoons should be amusing if they live up at all to their animated brothers. One hundred examples of them will be shown, fifty of which will be original black and white cartoons of "Mickey Mouse" and fifty water colors of the "Silly Symphonies" [including, we hope, the Three Little Pigs and the Big, Bad Wolf] which today are taking audiences by storm all over the country.



"Bright Hillside," by L. O. Griffith, to be seen in the current exhibition of Brown county landscapes by members of the Brown County Art association in the Hoosier Art gallery, Chicago.

ART NOTES

The Arts club will open its exhibition season on Friday afternoon, Nov. 10, with two shows. One is a loan display of modern paintings, comprising the private collection of George Gershwin and lent by him; the other is a one man show of paintings by Jacques Villon.

◆

Bertha Lum and her daughter, Peter Boy Lum, are showing woodcuts in the Japanese manner in the O'Brien gallery, 673 North Michigan avenue, during November. They are charming and one must particularly stress the beauty of the color Mrs. Lum is now achieving. She works in a secret process whose secret is worth learning. Many of the prints are most fascinating.

◆

The Allerton gallery announces an exhibition of recent portraits and orientals by Salvatore Salla to open Nov. 10.

Chicago painters are staging a gay review of the summer just past in the Increase Robinson gallery, Diana Court building. The Belgian Village, the Fan Dance, points about town and various incidents and places for which Chicago and the Exposition are jointly or individually responsible, make up the context of the show. Among the artists represented are many of the members of the group that has become definitely associated with this gallery. You will find Macena Barton, Laura Van Pappelendam, Hubert Ropp, Romolo Roberti, George Melville Smith, and Josephine L. Reichmann contributing to the gaiety and excellence of the exhibit.

Twenty water colors by Dufy and recent drawing by Elisabeth Telling will be seen in the Roullier gallery, Fine Arts building, during November. Miss Telling's exhibit opens Wednesday, Nov. 1.

The Renaissance society of the University of Chicago is showing to Nov. 20 in 205 Wieboldt hall facsimile reproductions in color of recent paintings by ten distinguished contemporary painters. Six originals lent by John Becker are also in the show. The artists are Frenchmen with whom we are well acquainted. They are nearly slipping into a past which makes the word "contemporary" no longer applicable to them. They are Matisse, Braque, Derain, Dufy, Gris, Leger, Lurcat, Masson, Ricasso, and Rouault.

Frederick Grant has opened his special Saturday afternoon classes at the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, 18 South Michigan avenue. Rudolph Weisenborn has a special class meeting Sundays from 10 to 3:30.

The Kate Neal Kinley Memorial Fellowship committee of the University of Illinois has appointed Mr. Arthur Bassin of 4613 North Kedzie avenue, Chicago, as the Second Kinley Fellow. This award makes possible study abroad for one year for students in music, art or the esthetic phases of architecture.

Mr. Bassin, who is 23 years old, was educated in the Chicago public schools and took his undergraduate and graduate instruction in architecture at the University of Illinois, where he received the degrees of B. S. in 1931 and M. S. in 1932.

He has been the recipient of various awards in the Beaux Arts Institute of Design, and has done exceptionally strong work in architectural design and freehand drawing. Mr. Bassin will depart for his field of study on Dec. 1.

The All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts announces the first Milwaukee showing of paintings of historical spots by Lane K. Newberry, one of its most interesting and prolific painters, in the Colonial room of the Knickerbocker hotel, Milwaukee, to continue to Nov. 15.

Apply your Creams and Lotions as they are applied in Elizabeth Arden's Salons...

DEMEYER

...with a Patter!

The patter's the thing that enables you to give yourself a professional Elizabeth Arden face treatment, at home.

Patting your creams and lotions into your skin, you derive the greatest benefit from their use. For the patter stimulates the circulation, exercises the facial muscles, banishes lines at the same time that your skin is receiving the nourishment it requires.

There are two types of patters used in Miss Arden's Salons... and these are now available for home use

The new Ardena Cream Patter gives you an expert and tireless touch. It is flexible... yet easy to control. With light, yet purposeful taps, it pats the cream into the pores.

The Astringent Patter is a double-header. For the throat, forehead and cheeks you use the round head. For lines at the side of the mouth or around the eyes, you used the pear-shaped head.

You may buy these patters separately... the Cream Patter is $3.00 and the Astringent Patter, $4. Or you may buy the set for $6.50.

China Has Lost Half Its Area in Fifty Years

Other Powers Now Control Two and a Half Million Square Miles There.

By John Powell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI.—Since 1883 China has lost about 2,000,000 square miles of territory to more powerful and not always friendly neighbors, but not one square foot of it to the United States of America.

It is impossible to forecast how American trade and interests will figure in the new Japanese protected state of Manchukuo, but in many of these extensive territories which have been lopped off the Chinese giant, citizens of the United States have been more or less frozen out. In one section, Indo-China for example, Americans are often put to a lot of trouble even to ship their goods through the French zone into the Chinese province of Yunnan where we do, theoretically at least, still have equal rights under the "open door."

A few months ago the state department was compelled to intercede diplomatically at Paris in order for an American firm to ship a half dozen commercial airplanes which had been ordered by the governor of Yunnan. The planes remained on the docks at Haiphong for several weeks before the permit to ship over the French railway to Yunnanfu could be obtained.

May Handicap American Trade.

The incident is mentioned because if the process of carving up the dragon empire is to continue indefinitely and Americans are to be barred from participating in the distribution of oriental pie, citizens of the United States are likely to be seriously handicapped in the sale of their products to the teeming millions of Asia.

It was in 1883, following a brief military campaign, that the former kingdom of Annam, a Chinese dependency, was annexed to France. Cochin-China already had been ceded previously in the hope of keeping Annam. The enforced real estate transaction cost the Chinese emperor 114,000 square miles of domain.

Then came Burma, a territory of 237,000 square miles, which, including Upper Burma, went to Britain in 1886. By a curious arrangement Burma continued to pay tribute in the form of certain revenues to the Chinese empire until 1895 when the British government in India put a stop to it. In 1890 Great Britain completed the expulsion of Chinese official emissaries from the principalities of Nepal, Bhutan and Sikkim. These territories had been conquered and annexed to China by Kubilai Khan in the 13th century. With Britain's expulsion of Chinese influence went Chinese control over some 74,000 additional square miles of territory.

Lose Control of Korea and Tibet.

In 1898, through the war with Japan, China lost control over Korea, 85,000 square miles; Formosa, 14,000 square miles; and the immensely strategic Pescadore islands amounting to some 50 square miles.

Then followed Tibet, the date of China's eclipse in that area not being entirely clear, but China's loss is definite nevertheless. Great Britain sent an expedition to Lhasa, capital of Tibet in 1903 and some 10 years later a British protectorate was established. In 1912 the Chinese conceded the paramountcy of British India in Tibet, meaning the loss of an additional 700,000 square miles. Chinese authority in inner Tibet bordering on Szechuen has been greatly weakened in the last few years and a Tibetan army is making serious inroads into Kokonor or western Szechuen and also into Yunnan province.

Outer Mongolia, embracing some 900,000 square miles of territory, declared its independence of Chinese rule in 1912 and in 1923 with the help of soviet Russian troops made the secession complete. Today it is a definite part of the U. S. S. R.

Partitioning Process Is Speeded Up.

The process of partitioning China has been greatly speeded up since Sept. 18, 1931, when the Japanese sent their imperial army into Manchuria. The Japanese inspired state of Manchukuo was created in March, 1932, which, with the Sino-Mongolian state of Barga, meant a further loss of some 380,000 square miles. Then followed Jehol with 60,000 square miles additional lost to Chinese control after an administration by Chinese emperors for many centuries. And the process is continuing, for Japanese troops are now well south of the Great Wall and they have occupied some 10,000 square miles of what was formerly Chihli, or as it is now known, Hopei province. Japanese occupation of Chahar province to the west of Jehol, now nearly completed, means an additional loss of 1,000 square miles.

The total of these losses runs well above ',500,000 square miles of territory, all of which has gone to Britain, France, Japan, and the soviets. And while on the subject it should not be overlooked that important and strategic points along the coast and navigable rivers have gone the same way. Hongkong to Britain, Macao to Portugal with British concessions at Newchwang, Tientsin, Shameen and Amoy; French concessions at Tientsin, Shanghai, Hankow, and Shameen, and the French "leased territory" at Kwangchowan off the southern Kwangtung coast.

Lost Area Nearly as Large as United States.

Finally there is the so-called International Settlement, adjoining the French concession at Shanghai, which is controlled by a group of powers, including a slight voice by the American consul general.

The total area which China has lost is more than four times the areas of the British isles, France, and Germany combined. It is slightly less than the land area of continental United States, listed at 2,973,776 square miles. But with all the lopping off, China still has some 2,000,000 square miles. However, one wonders how long that will remain intact, for Sinkiang, or Chinese Turkestan, now has a Mohammedan rebellion in progress which may mean the loss of a further 400,000 square miles of rich territory. According to Chinese reports, the Mohammedans obtained their arms and munitions from outside interests in Afghanistan, Kashmir, and Persia, hence Sinkiang apparently is to follow the usual process.

In the face of these facts, America's so-called doctrine of the "open door," and treaty guarantee of the integrity of China become more or less a farce. And since Americans are barred from participating in the distribution of oriental pie, citizens of the United States, particularly those interested in Asiatic trade, present and future, are beginning to speculate on their future status.

A MODEL IN A GOWN OF SILVER METAL CLOTH

The silver metal cloth gown worn by Miss Jean Hyman in a recent fashion show was lovely, but not nearly so becoming as her own clothes are. She is such a piquant small person and her clothes are chosen with such good taste that they always suit her to perfection. The brown fur that trimmed this gorgeous creation was no darker in color than Miss Hyman's beautiful tan.

IN THE THICK OF THE DEBUTANTE PARTIES

Miss Winifred Wheeler, who was a debutante herself just a couple of years ago, will be hostess at a buffet dinner for one of this season's buds, Miss Jean O'Brien, on Saturday, Nov. 18. The dinner will be at the residence of Miss Wheeler's mother, Mrs. Robert C. Wheeler, of 1447 Astor street, after which the hostess and Miss O'Brien and the other guests will go to the junior William Waller's residence at 45 Banks street to dance as the guests of Miss Virginia Waller. Miss Wheeler and Miss Waller are cousins, their mothers being sisters, and Miss Waller and Miss O'Brien are cousins, Mr. Waller and Mrs. Howard V. O'Brien being brother and sister.

When Chicago Was Young

THROUGH TEN DECADES WITH THE MARTHAS

The Tragic Teens

By Herma Clark

A letter from Martha Esmond MacLeod to Julia Boyd of New York. (Note — Herma Clark interrupts her story of the Eighties to review Chicago's century of social life. Martha Esmond MacLeod, daughter of Martha Freeman Esmond, writes to Julia Boyd, the "Dear Julia" of the letter usually found in this column.)

Mrs. Ira Couch Wood. Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen. Mrs. Lynden Evans.

THREE WOMEN ACTIVE IN PUBLIC AFFAIRS IN "THE TRAGIC TEENS."

Chicago, December 31, 1919.

DEAR AUNT JULIA: Mother asks me to write you today. She thinks perhaps she will add a line in her own hand. She rarely attempts this now, as her eyes are so dim. Most of her letters she is glad to dictate to her excellent secretary, but when it comes to you, she likes me to act as her amanuensis.

She tells me she has made it a practice to write you at the close of the year, summing up events in our family and telling you how fares her Chicago, and she wants such a letter to go to you before the old year dies, even though that letter be a proxy.

Mother is now in her mid-eighties, as you know, but she is still quite wonderful. Father's passing has somewhat quenched her gay spirits, but she is still the "head of the tribe," as her grandchildren phrase it. She is always sweet and loving, but one of her grandchildren had a reproof from her the other day. And what do you think roused this fighting spirit? Nothing less than a word of criticism about Chicago!

"Please don't abuse my beloved city," she said, and the offender was dumb, as mother drew herself up in her chair with flashing eyes. She misses our Esmond so, it is quite pitiful. I think Sandy and I bear his loss better than she does. Her memory sometimes fails a bit and she confuses Esmond, her grandson, with my father and thinks "Will" was killed in the war. When I set her right she assents and says she just "misspoke." She has Esmond's photograph, taken in his uniform of major in the world war, on her bedside table, in a double frame, which also encloses a picture of my father, in quaint civil war uniform. "My two soldier boys," she murmurs fondly, gazing on the pictures.

O Aunt Julia, I can't be reconciled to Esmond's death . . . so unnecessary . . . the day before the armistice!

"'And what good came of it, at last?'" quoth little Peterkin,
'Why, that I cannot tell,' said he,
'But 'twas a famous victory.'"

But when I see other mothers who have suffered and are bravely bearing their burdens, I am silent. Many dear Chicago boys, sons of our friends, died in France . . . Edward Hines, Alexander McKinlock, Courtney Campbell, Henry Keep-Otis, and so many others.

But I mustn't dwell on so sad a topic. Let me see what mother has to tell you. . . .

I am smiling as I begin her contribution, for—of all things—she says she wants you to know that real estate, which, in residential sections, has been "flat on its back" for many a year has suddenly begun to "look up," on the near north side. Mother always has been interested in real estate. She says she grew up hearing talk about land values, and she supposes when she gets to heaven she will compare the golden streets with Michigan avenue! Isn't she a pet?

To return to real estate . . . it is quite true that many houses over here on the north side are being sold and Sandy and I hope we may dispose of our home and go into an apartment, where housekeeping will be easier for me. It is hard to get help these days, and wages are so high. Indeed, the high cost of living (H. C. L., as every one abbreviates it) is terrifying. Eggs at over a dollar a dozen! The women of Chicago, under the leadership of Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mrs. Ira Couch Wood, Mrs. Lynden Evans, and others, have combined to refuse to buy fresh eggs until prices come down. They tumbled from their proud height to sixty-five cents a dozen in a week's time—evidence of the power of concerted action. Women are certainly coming into their own now. I glory in seeing a national committeewoman at a political gathering!

I think mother was moved to speak of real estate because the Charles J. Barneses have just sold their home on East Ontario street. We hate to see them go. Theirs is a lovely old house. Mrs. C. M. Ely was an early occupant of it. At the time she moved in the Henry Fields lived next door, while Judge and Mrs. Lambert Tree occupied their great mansion to the south. Descanting on the fine location, Mrs. Ely wrote to an out-of-town friend that the Fields were next door and the Trees across the street. Her friend replied: "I didn't know you lived in the country."

My children are at the opera tonight. I go seldom, but did attend the première of John Alden Carpenter's lovely ballet, "The Birthday of the Infanta." You may recall that Oscar Wilde wrote this story, which has made an excellent foundation for Mr. Carpenter's music. It is interesting to see the Carpenter musical talent flowering so splendidly in John. We are all proud of him. After the performance some of his friends gave him a supper at the Casino. My youngest—your namesake, Julie—was present and says it was a lovely party. The Casino is one of our most fashionable clubs, started by Mrs. Howard Linn, that brilliant and charming young creature, who always has some new idea in the back of her head. Julie is interested with her and Gladys High in a Junior league affair, to come off next month, for charity.

I was interrupted just there by a telephone message from Mrs. Arthur Meeker, who wanted to tell me how well tickets are going for the benefit she's promoting for Russian relief. The women and children of that unhappy land have suffered much in the last few months. All Mrs. Meeker does is well done and I know this will be a great success.

Now I'll close and see if mother can write a line. Happy New Year!

Your loving adopted niece,
MARTHA ESMOND MACLEOD.

Dear Julia—Just a line to say I commend you to the Power that has blessed our lives. Another year is coming. Who can say what it holds for us? May God watch over our land and our city and our homes.
Lovingly,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Note—Our adjective "Tragic" is suggested by Anita Bassett, Chicago.

Climate and Beautiful Scenery Make Bahamas Favored Resort

NASSAU, The Bahamas.—Among the multitude of attractions that make Nassau, capital of the island of New Providence, a premier pleasure resort, two seem to steadily stand out—the salubrity of the climate and the beauty of the scenery.

With the inevitable march of progress many changes have taken place in this little city, which is now well into its third century, yet it retains much of its old world charm and in its name places, old walls, streets, gateways, churches, and tombs linger many reminders of the romantic past.

One's chief impressions of Nassau today are furnished by its quaint streets with pink walls overhung with bougainvillea and colored creepers, and the gardens of bright shrubs and flowers. The hibiscus is always in bloom.

Nassau is a city of flowers of brilliant coloring, and when the eye has feasted on beautiful blossoms it turns with never failing appreciation to the glorious blues and greens of the harbor and the sea beyond.

The name, New Providence, owes its origin to the fact that Capt. William Sayle, an English navigator, while on a voyage to Carolina, was driven here and preserved from shipwreck. The name then was applied to distinguish it from the little island of Old Providence. The island is 21 miles long and seven miles wide. It is mostly flat, covered with brushwood and has several extensive lagoons. A range of rocky hills runs along part of the island at a short distance from the sea. Another ridge, called the Blue hills, lie two and a half miles inland.

Frequent attempts were made by the Spaniards to exterminate the settlement of Nassau, and for many years it was the scene of exploits by the pirates of the eigtheenth century. They found the harbor of great convenience as a base for supplies and refitting. Here they squandered their ill-earned wealth for liquor and the sirens' smiles.

The reputed watch tower of the famous Blackbeard, the king of pirates, may still be seen at the eastern end of the island.

The island has a lake called Killarney. It is believed to rival its namesake in the County Kerry, Ireland. Duck shooting may be enjoyed on this lake as well as on Lake Cunningham and Burnside's pond.

To End a Cough In a Hurry, Mix This at Home

Saves Big Dollars! No Cooking!

Millions of housewives have found that, by mixing their own cough medicine, they get a purer, more effective remedy. They use a recipe which costs only one-fourth as much as ready-made medicine, but which really has no equal for breaking up obstinate coughs.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. The syrup is easily made with 2 cups sugar and one cup water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and makes the most effective remedy that money could buy. Keeps perfectly, and children love its taste.

Its quick action in loosening the phlegm, clearing the air passages, and soothing away the inflammation, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its healing effect on throat membranes. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

PONCE DE LEON SOUGHT IT; DE SOTO FOUND IT

Tradition has it that this is the fountain of youth which Ponce de Leon sought and De Soto found. One of 47 thermal springs that daily gush a million gallons of curative waters in Hot Springs, National park, Ark. The park, with its bridle paths and three 18 hole golf courses, is getting a big play.

DETOURS

By Frederic Babcock.

MEMORIES of Madeira usually center on the taxis, which slide along on runners and are propelled by slow moving oxen.

Up and down the hills the oxen plod through narrow, cobbled streets, walled solidly with houses of spotless white. Occasionally they encounter a Madeira milkman, carrying a pole with a five gallon can at each end, and stopping long enough for the Mediterranean tourists to snap a picture. Flat topped sleds, piled with furniture, brushwood, groceries, wine casks, weave in and out of the picture.

The tourists leave Funchal, capital of the islands, and come across stone walled, thatched roofed huts dotting the countryside. The roads become trails, where the only means of locomotion is a hammock borne by a couple of natives.

Chicago is showing a century of progress in transportation; Madeira is showing centuries of stagnation, and letting the visitor make his comparisons and draw his conclusions.

● Memories of rural England:

Wordsworth's Dove cottage, a toy house to which the poet brought his bride, and back of which a dream garden tries to climb a hill. . . . You sit under the apple trees and watch the smoke curling over the cottage, and look beyond and see Grasmere, which doesn't seem to be much bigger than a good sized swimming pool. . . . Stone fences twist up the hills in crisscross patterns. They are black lines on a sheet of green. . . . Waterfall threads lose themselves in the waters of the Lilliputian lakes. . . . Black faced sheep, forever cropping, fuse themselves into the landscape, until you wonder which are sheep and which are boulders. . . . Gray walled villages and, everywhere, tranquillity.

● Devonshire, where the eternal fog adds to the mystery of the grim moors. . . . High banked lanes, woodland paths, forests of ferns, roses blooming in hedge rows, poppies flaming by roadsides, gorse and furze shimmering against the background of grayish green, and dark woods hanging over black water. . . . A gate where Alan-a-Dale must have kept tryst with Maid Marian. . . . The Dartmoor bogs, turf looking like patches of rug. . . . A shiver passes over the top of the wire grass—and down your back. . . . Clutching quicksand, utter loneliness, desolation.

● On a country lane beyond Hampstead Heath station you come across a plain house where, in the space of eighteen months, Keats became engaged to Fanny Brawne, did the "Ode to the Nightingale," and suffered the outbreak of the lung disease that was to end his writing. That's where he loved most and sang best and in prospect sang no more.

You see his small, bare study and wonder where he got his inspiration. On either side of the fireplace is a grained cupboard, virtually empty. That's about all there is to the inside of the house. But the garden is almost the same as it was when Keats heard the nightingale and sat under the plum tree while he put the words on paper. The birds still frequent the place, and it is still circled by the evergreen laurels that supplied the crown for the brow of genius.

● Back to earth again:

The travel news of the week brings the information that, A Century of Progress having been extended twelve days, the special rail rates to and from Chicago will remain in effect till Nov. 13; that, with the return of comparative normalcy in Cuba, the steamship lines are planning a heavy schedule of winter cruises to Havana; that many of the dude ranches in Wyoming and Montana have had such a big season that they are planning to keep going throughout the winter; that the 1934 Passion Play at Oberammergau will open May 27 and close Sept. 12—and that visitors to the Swiss Alps have found that wild mountain goats are being successfully repatriated there.

Spanish Crime Wave Causing Police Worry

MADRID.—[U. P.]—The crime wave in Spain continues unabated while police and civil guards are trying to figure out how to check bomb outrages, murder, and theft.

Statistics of crimes of social or political character during the first six months of 1933 reveal 102 deaths and 140 woundings. Bomb explosions are said to exceed 150, while police confiscated over 500 bombs and large quantities of small arms.

The violence of the crime has aroused the department of public safety to action. In the south of Spain, a small group of citizens appealed to police for action against banditry.

The building, which is about the same size as the palace of Versailles, will be ready for occupancy in August, 1935, at which time the secretariat will be moved from its present cramped home in the Hotel National.

Roman Architecture with Modern Trend.

Over 300,000 sacks of cement, 700,000 bricks, and 4,700 tons of steel girders have been used in the construction of the league palace. It measures 572,000 cubic yards in volume and contains 36,400 cubic yards of French, Italian, and Swiss masonry placed against 500,000 tons of reinforced concrete.

The general lines of the league palace represent an extreme simplification of classical Roman architecture inspired by modern architectural tendencies.

Space Provided for Photographers.

Around the assembly hall, like boxes at an opera and only just above the heads of diplomats, are a series of rooms exclusively for the use of movie men and press photographers. Behind the presidential chair of the assembly a tall screen will probably be built with letters "SDN" in gold with blue background.

Pressmen have been well provided for in the new palace. They have three bars, 50 telephone boxes, 676 seats in the assembly and council halls, two big writing rooms, two telegraph offices, radio office, broadcasting studio, and 55 information offices.

American architecture has influenced the construction of the new league palace, according to Julian Fiegenheimer, Geneva architect and first prize winner with Ninot, Paris, for a design of the new league home.

Nazis Erect Pillory.

WERNIGERODE, Germany.—(AP)—In the shadow of this Harz town's 500 year old "rathus," local Nazis erected a pillory and announced it was for persons "found guilty of spreading lies about the chancellor or about the Nazi policy."

TRAVELERS' GUIDE

What's your travel problem? Queries regarding costs, accommodations, etc., of travel by land, air and sea, and places to go and how to get there, both in this country and abroad, will be answered by this department. Answers of public interest will be published. Address your questions to Travelers' Guide, The Chicago Tribune, enclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

What is considered the height of season travel from Europe, and can actual reservations be made on this side?—D. V.

Travel from Europe is at its height during August and September. Actual bookings can be arranged through any steamship agency for return sailings.

What is the length of the Gota canal in Sweden and is it an artificial canal?—C. C. B.

The famed Gota canal is 347 miles long and one-third of the distance is

Do the trains running by Niagara falls stop to give passengers an opportunity to view the falls?—M. G.

The trains stop for about five minutes and passengers can view the falls from platform built for this purpose. An entire day can be well spent visiting the falls.

Can immigrants enter Canada and later enter the United States?—J. J. O'C.

According to immigration law, immigrants cannot use Canada as a stepping stone to the United States, and entry into Canada from foreign countries is limited at this time.

On a first class ticket to Manila, could I stop over at the different ports of call in Japan and China?—L. L. M.

Stopovers are allowed within time limit of ticket, which is usually eleven months from time of embarkation.

Prussian City Will Celebrate 1,000th Birthday

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TANGERMUENDE, Prussia.—Tangermuende on the Elbe, in bygone centuries the residence of German emperors, is about to observe its 1,000th anniversary. To celebrate the occasion a new bridge spanning the Riber Elbe will be inaugurated. The bridge will cut the distance from the Ruhr district, Germany's most important industrial center, to the north seaport of Bremen by sixty miles.

Because its proud and wealthy beer brewers would dare the German kaiser, way back in the 14th century, the city of Tangermuende is not Germany's capital today. In those days Emperor Charles IV. of Germany had chosen the prosperous and flourishing city as his residence. The wealth of Tangermuende was mainly derived from its excellent beer produced within its wall. For its delicious taste and flavor it was famed throughout the reich and beyond its borders. The wealth accumulated with its beer exports, the city expanded in rich and splendid buildings. The Gothic town hall is one of the finest medieval structures in north Germany. The city walls, rising to a height of twenty feet, are still well preserved.

Emperor Charles, seeing all this wealth accumulating under his nose, hit on the idea of exacting a special beer tax from the prosperous brewers. The brewers dared defy the kaiser and refused to pay the tax. Emperor Charles and his court left the city in a huff, never to return there again. Tangermuende had missed its chance of becoming the German capital.

Sweden Probes Aviation.

STOCKHOLM.—(AP)—As a result of accidents in which two Swedish army pilots were killed, the government has started a thorough investigation of Sweden's airplane manufacturing. Experts are to recommend whether planes should be based on foreign designs or be strictly Swedish.

To the man I marry
I make this Pledge of Beauty

"I will keep that schoolgirl complexion"

This much olive oil goes into the making of every cake of Palmolive.

FOR your sake, as well as his, you must strive to hold on to the youth, the freshness he finds so enchanting. You must resolve to do all you can to keep that schoolgirl complexion. Decide, right now, to use Palmolive—the soap of youth—every day.

Nature's own oils

Let Palmolive's blend of gentle olive and palm oils cast a veil of loveliness over your skin. It can, you know. For these precious oils, so skilfully blended in the making of Palmolive Soap, give beauty results treasured by lovely women, the world over.

Olive oil—nothing else—gives Palmolive its soft, natural olive-green color. Olive oil, too, gives it a wonderfully rich lather that gently penetrates the tiny pores, freeing them of accumulations easily . . . leaving skin soft, smooth, gloriously clear and fresh.

Do this, please

Buy three cakes today. Then, start this 2-minute beauty treatment recommended by over twenty thousand beauty specialists: every morning and evening, massage a rich lather of Palmolive Soap and warm water gently into the skin with your hands; rinse with warm water, then with cold. Thus—with Palmolive's help—make your own beauty pledge today . . . to keep that treasured Schoolgirl Complexion.

P. S. To keep that Schoolgirl Complexion all over, use Palmolive for the bath, too.

WOULD YOU BELIEVE I HAD A SPLITTING HEADACHE 5 MINUTES AGO?

MY HEADACHE WENT Like MAGIC When

. . . . I Took HEXIN

..."My head was throbbing and I had a thrilling date in 10 minutes. I was so anxious to look and feel my best.

..."Most things won't stop my headaches quickly so I always take a couple of HEXIN tablets with water. It's advertised as the 10-minute pain-relief but it usually works quicker than that for me.

..."And—HEXIN never upsets my stomach the way some other pain-relievers do. My dear, I really don't know what I'd do without it."

● HEXIN was originally developed for children. Its action had to be gentle and safe.

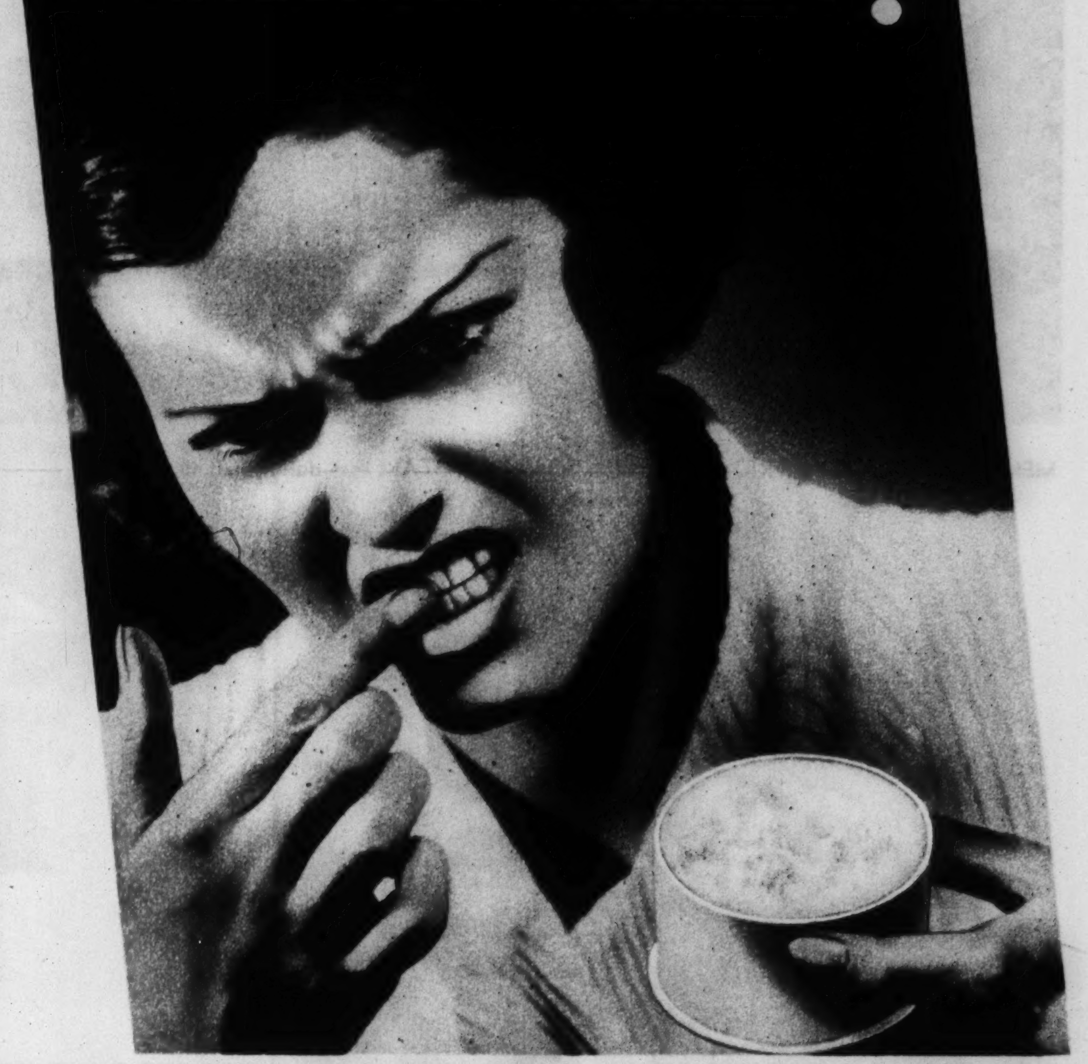
THE TEST THAT SHOCKED A MILLION WOMEN!



Sensational "Bite-Test" Exposes GRITTY FACE POWDERS!

"I Dropped the Box, I was so Horrified," Writes One Woman!

BEHIND many a case of sore and irritated skin, behind many a case of dry and coarse skin, lies gritty face powder!

That face powder that looks so smooth to your eye and feels so smooth to your skin, it may be full of grit—tiny, sharp particles that are invisible to the eye but instantly detectable to the teeth.

You can't go on rubbing a gritty face powder into your skin without paying for it in some way. Maybe some of the blemishes with which you are wrestling now are due to nothing less than a gritty face powder. Find out! Ascertain whether the powder you are now using is grit-free or not.

Make This Telling Test!

Take a pinch of your powder and place it between your front teeth. Bring your teeth down on it and grind firmly. If there is any trace of grit in the powder it will be as instantly detectable as sand in spinach.

More than a million women have made this test in the past year as advised by Lady Esther. And thousands of them have written in in righteous indignation over their findings. One woman was so horrified she dropped the powder, box and all, on the floor!

There is one face powder you can be sure contains no grit. That is Lady Esther Face Powder. But satisfy yourself as to that—and at Lady Esther's expense! Your name and address will bring you a liberal supply of all five shades of Lady Esther Face Powder. Put it to the "bite-test". Let your teeth convince you that it is absolutely grit-free, the smoothest powder ever touched to cheek.

Make Shade Test, Too!

When you receive the five shades of Lady Esther Face Powder try them all for shade, too. Did you know that the wrong shade of face powder can make you look five to ten years older?

Ask any stage director. He will tell you that one type of woman has to have one light while another has to have another or else each will look years older. The same holds for face powder shades. One of five shades is the perfect shade for every woman. Lady Esther offers you the five shades for you to find out which is the one for you!

Mail the coupon now for the five shades of Lady Esther Face Powder. Lady Esther, Evanston, Ill.

MEET MR. HUGH SAMUEL JOHNSON, THE DUCE OF THE NRA!

By John Boettiger

HUGH SAMUEL JOHNSON—a headstrong, blustering, bossy man of action ever since his career began.

A searching study of the life of the taskmaster of American industry shows an astonishing chain of events through which Johnson runs true to form every inch of the way.

From his childhood, when he was rebellious against parental rule, through all of a turbulent life, Hugh Johnson has wanted to boss things, and to boss them absolutely, as he figured in his own mind they ought to be bossed.

Thus has he come to essay the bossing of American industrial and commercial life.

The story of Johnson's life is the clearcut cameo of Johnson today. A runaway boy. The untamed West Pointer standing at the very bottom of his class in deportment. The bullying lieutenant of cavalry, savagely training rookies in the Philippines. He smashed the jaw of a soldier who had a supreme insult on his lips. Boss over the draft regulations in the world war, he sneered at his ranking officers, demanded dictatorial powers, and got them. He raged over failing to get to France; in all his soldiering he never faced an enemy.

Belligerent, unyielding, egotistical, he showed in all his earlier days those traits which the other day, when coal operators defied his efforts to force an NRA code upon them and served their letter of protest upon him, made him rise in a livid rage from his chair in a crowded public restaurant and shout: "Why those —— —— —— revolting —— —— —— —— ——!" and then to storm on, despite the pleadings of his young woman secretary: "This is an insult to the President of the United States!" And then, making them give in, but with the aid of the President.

The stories of his youth give parallel for his impotent struggle to "crack down" on Henry Ford. It is an amazing tale in its revelations, but why paint the lily? Here is the story:

Hugh Samuel Johnson was the son of a country lawyer, a man with a great wanderlust, and that trait in the parent gave the boy an adventurous, somewhat wild youth.

It should be recorded that the family name originally was "Johnston." Before Hugh was born, while Samuel Johnston was struggling for an existence, the latter settled in the town of Pontiac, Ill. He hung out his law shingle and when a bit of business trickled to his office, he was chagrined to discover that there was another Samuel Johnston in Pontiac who was also a lawyer, and this one was a Negro.

For a time there was much confusion, as the mail of the two counselors was misdirected, and their clients became befuddled; and so finally the white Samuel Johnston, Hugh's

A SERIES OF FAMOUS CARTOONS BY JOHN T. McCUTCHEON, IN COLORS, SUITABLE FOR FRAMING, WILL APPEAR ON THIS PAGE

TYPE OLDER THAN GUTENBERG'S

This tiny character from a font of ancient Corean type is said to be older than the first movable type of the German printer Gutenberg. According to Dr. Judson Daland of the University of Pennsylvania, this piece of type was in use as early as 1434.

THOUGH Johann Gutenberg, a German printer famous for his early Bibles, is generally credited with having invented the first movable type about the year 1450, there is an abundance of evidence to show that the Chinese and other people of the orient were using type before that time. Now there has come to light a piece of Corean type said to have been in use as early as 1434. This character, with others dating back to 1455, 1700, and 1795, recently was presented to the Franklin institute in Philadelphia by Dr. Judson Daland, professor of medicine of the University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Daland is the authority for the dates associated with each of the pieces of type. The accompanying pictures show the ancient type of the Coreans to be similar in many respects to the most modern type. Just how the early Corean printers used this type has not been determined definitely, though it is supposed that they had some sort of a simple hand press not vastly different from that employed by Gutenberg. The characters on the Corean type are not unlike those of Chinese printing, the alphabet of the modern educated Coreans being similar to that of the Chinese.

A Modern Diana Ready for Jungle Adventures

WHILE the little girls who were her schoolmates were dressing dolls and playing at housekeeping, Marian Pettis of San Francisco was thinking and dreaming about the wild animals of Africa. Natural history interested her more than any other subject, so she made a profound study of it, and when she grew up she qualified for the position of secretary to George Bistany, director of the San Francisco zoo. Mr. Bistany will leave shortly for Africa to trap giraffes, rhinoceroses, and other beasts for his zoo, and Miss Pettis will be a member of his party. She is shown here under a tropical sun helmet and wearing a belt of cartridges. These are a part of the outfit she will wear in the jungles, for she expects to have spare time from her secretarial work to do a little hunting on her own. In this modern day big game hunting in Africa no longer is outside the realm of feminine endeavor. No small number of women have followed the spoor of the elephant and buffalo to fatal consequences for the giant beasts, and have brought down the charging lion with a well-directed shot, without even fainting afterwards.

OF LONDON'S many attractions, the one which is least likely to grow stale is Madame Tussaud's waxworks. Within the halls of this celebrated museum of wax figures there are always new exhibits. Let a man or woman grow famous for some important achievement or notorious for some evil deed and that man or woman immediately appears in wax in Madame Tussaud's galleries. The figures in the waxworks are kept spick and span by an army of cleaners. Each morning the faces of the models are washed, the hair combed, and the clothing brushed. The accompanying illustration shows two heads on the way to their respective bodies after the usual morning scrubbing. It is the custom, as the picture reveals, to take the models apart for their regular daily washing and dusting.

For Discouraging Thugs

AMONG the numerous strange gadgets shown at the recent inventors' congress at Cleveland was the wrist gas gun shown in the above illustration. The weapon, which is concealed by the wearer's sleeve, is loaded with a tear gas cartridge. The gun is discharged by pulling the wire at one end of which is a button held in the hand. Thus, a drop of the wrist is sufficient to let loose the charge of blinding tear gas. The gun is recommended for bank messengers or others likely to be preyed upon by highwaymen. The tear gas charge would discourage almost any robber.

Pictured here is a member of the traffic squad of the eastern metropolis wearing the helmet which has been adopted for his branch of the department. It will be issued as regulation next summer

Ceylon's Black 'White Wings'

IN Ceylon, that beautiful island where much of the world's tea supply is grown, the work of cleaning the streets of the cities is done by girls. This picture shows two pretty street cleaners of Kaney, a famous tourist resort of Ceylon. The girls receive only six cents a day for their work, but all of them wear a large assortment of jewelry, including earrings, bracelets, anklets, nose rings, and finger rings. From the facial expressions of the two pictured here it is apparent that cleaning streets in Ceylon is not an unhappy occupation. The island of Ceylon is a part of the British empire.

A Gipsy Caravan in Rural England

THERE is something almost theatrical about this picture of a gipsy caravan on the brink of the water in the little village of Middleton-on-the-Wolds, Yorkshire, England. The gaily painted gipsy wagons appear to be on a stage and the ancient church and wooded land in the background have the appearance of stage scenery. It is a real photograph, however, of a real scene in rural England. The colorful nomads of the caravan have paused beside the village pond to give their ponies a drink and a rest. Gipsies are the same the world over, with the exception that in England and continental Europe they still travel in brightly colored horse drawn wagons. In the United States the gipsies have discarded their old wagons for motor cars and trucks and have lost, thereby, much of their former gay carefree appearance. It has been noticed in this country, too, that many of the gipsy tribes which formerly roamed the country far and wide have settled down in permanent camps, usually located in or near large cities. They still wear bright colored clothing, however, and carry on the customs of the older generations of gipsy wanderers, even though wandering is going out of style among the American tribes

SCIENCE GOES TO FRONT IN WAR ON FIRE

Masks, Torches, Rams and Smoke Ejectors Among Modern Weapons

By Joseph U. Dugan

FIVE-ELEVEN ALARM. Screech and wail of sirens mingled with the clamor of fire gongs and the roar of motors opened wide. Street car, truck and automobile traffic held back as the big, red fire trucks go thundering by, careening dangerously around corners, weaving recklessly through narrow lanes of traffic. Throughout the city from all directions the pumper engines, hook and ladder trucks, hose trucks, ambulances and trucks bearing the many pieces of modern, special equipment are moving toward the fire. The companies whose stations are nearest the blaze are speeding directly to the scene, the others are moving up to take the place of the companies at the fire and to be ready to join them if special alarms for additional equipment are sounded. In spite of seeming confusion, a big city fire department in action, from the time an alarm is turned in until the last spark at the fire has been extinguished, is one of the finest examples of organization, co-ordination, discipline and efficiency.

In the last twenty years fighting fire has become highly technical. The scientific achievements of the machine age have been applied to the warfare against this common enemy in full measure. First came complete motorization of the fire trucks. Then, gradually, new and more efficient apparatus was developed. The equipment of a modern fire department is today comparable to that of an army.

Some of the latest additions to modern fire fighting equipment, in use by the Chicago fire department, are pictured on this page. Many of the devices illustrated here were developed to meet changing conditions of building construction. It is often necessary, for example, for firemen to break through heavy steel beams. Squads equipped with high pressure acetylene torches accomplish this work quickly. In the old days tearing a hole in a wall was accomplished, slowly and inefficiently, with axes and pikes. Today a hole of any size is smashed through brick or wood in a few minutes with a power battering ram, operated by compressed air.

At night fires, firemen of today are aided by batteries of huge flood and searchlights operated with electric current generated at the scene by compact power plants on trucks. No longer must firemen face probable death when going into gas and smoke filled buildings. They are provided with efficient gas masks. If the fire is in a smoke filled basement, or other comparatively small enclosed area, the smoke ejector truck is brought into action. Its powerful suction engine quickly clears the smoke out through a huge, detachable suction pipe. Higher water pressure has greatly increased fire fighting efficiency. In a matter of seconds tons of water can be poured into a blazing building, from below by hose lines and from above by use of the water tower, a high pressure standpipe which can be raised to a height of eighty feet and which throws 1,200 gallons of water a minute. Firemen are protected today by fire resisting clothing. They wear coats of rubberized and chemically treated fabric. Firemen overcome by smoke are given immediate treatment by trained squads operating oxygen machines.

It often is necessary to cut through heavy steel beams quickly in modern fire fighting. The high pressure acetylene torch, shown here, makes short work of a girder.

When dense smoke hampers firemen inside a building, this strange looking equipment is brought into action. It is the smoke ejector, a giant suction engine, which quickly clears a basement or other enclosed area of smoke.

One of the most powerful of the newest weapons against fire is the water tower. From a height of 80 feet it throws 1,200 gallons a minute.

A battery of 1,000 watt flood lights helps in fighting night fires.

Before the world war fire departments were experimenting with gas masks. Capt. William Maloney is shown wearing the newest type, especially designed for firemen. It is quite similar to the military gas mask and has saved the lives of many firemen.

These firemen are using the power battering ram to tear a hole through a brick wall in a hurry. Compressed air supplies the driving force.

Interior of a fire department ambulance showing a victim receiving first aid from the trained attendant.

Oil and grease fires are quickly extinguished by this new gas spray method. One short blast from the gas hose, pictured above, was sufficient to quell a large bonfire of gasoline and grease soaked waste. The gas tanks can be seen on the truck.

A fire resisting coat of rubberized fabric is the newest thing in protective clothing for firemen.

STORY OF HIS LIFE EXPLAINS JOHNSON TODAY

father, dropped the "t" from his name. He never readopted his proper name even after resuming his wanderings, and his children grew up as Johnsons.

But the clan is now to revert to the old patronym, it appears, for the general's son, Kilbourne, upon entry at West Point, at his father's suggestion, adopted the old name of Johnston, and is so listed now on the army roster.

Samuel Johnson branched out for the pioneer west, went to Fort Scott, Kas., where Hugh was born on Aug. 5, 1881, and later the family moved to Wichita. Still the lawyer felt the urge to be a-moving, and in 1893, shortly after the Democrat, Grover Cleveland, wrested back the presidency from the Republican, Benjamin Harrison, Samuel Johnson angled for an appointment and was made postmaster at the town of Alva, Okla.

To call the Alva of those days a town is ennobling it, for it was a sprawling, ugly frontier settlement, so lacking in supplies that it was necessary to send to Kansas to obtain lumber for the new postoffice over which Lawyer Johnson was to preside.

Taking his wife along to help organize a home, Johnson left young Hugh, then 11 years old, in care of two deacons at Wichita, with the understanding that the boy would be sent for later.

Finally the family homestead had been prepared, and Hugh started out from Wichita with the two deacons in a covered wagon, to travel the hundred odd miles over rough country to Alva. The lad noticed that a large pine box, nailed securely, and almost the size of a coffin, had been loaded into the wagon at Wichita. The deacons had handled it carefully, but told none of the curious folks around what was in it.

and his lawyer, Hugh S. Johnson.

When the trail had led them several hours' drive out of the town, one of the deacons, a carpenter, pulled up the horses and, swinging his legs over the seat, dropped into the wagon rear. Hugh turned to watch him, saw him ruffle around in the stuff packed willy-nilly about, and was surprised to see him pick up a hammer and chisel.

The deacon-carpenter cleared off the top of the pine box and plying his tools, he soon laid back the covering planks. Hugh craned his neck a bit and there, neatly mortised and held fast, were three great demijohns.

The churchman unfastened one of the jugs, smacking his lips the while, and, heaving a bit with the weight of it, hoisted it to the seat. Emptying a goodly portion into a couple of cups, the two deacons drank cheerily to their respite from the strait-lacedness of Wichita.

Finally they whipped the horses to a start again, but the jug stayed on the wagon seat and before long the deacons were gloriously drunk.

Hugh was a hot tempered lad, even then, and an altercation arose between him and the besotted deacons, which Hugh topped off by running away from the wagon. He found his way to a railroad town and after inquiry boarded a train bound for Alva.

He hadn't a penny of money, and no ticket. The conductor came by, asked the bedraggled youngster for his fare.

"I haven't any ticket, but you can have this," Hugh responded, and held forth a lemon. From another railroad man this might have produced a slap in the face and a booting off the train, but this one laughed and ended up by letting the boy ride free.

He landed in Alva without further incident, days ahead of the deacons, who drove in at length with their wagon barely holding together, and most of the goods they had carried missing. They did have three empty jugs.

It is next recorded that Hugh felt the military urge, and lying about his age—he was then only 15—he enlisted in the Oklahoma national guard.

After he'd had a year of this casual training, the Maine was blown up in Havana harbor and Teddy Roosevelt, organizing his Rough Riders, called for volunteers from the national guard contingents of the states. The Oklahoma company at Alva was given 12 places, but the captain of the company, beset by cowardice, wrote out his resignation, laid it on his desk and blew out of town.

West Point, where Johnson won the doubtful distinction of being the academy's bad boy—"the absolute tail end of his class of 93 members."

He had told no one of the invitation from "T. R.," but the youngsters in the guard, Hugh among them, learned about it and determined among themselves to make their way to the mobilization point at Oklahoma City.

Unbeknownst to his parents, Hugh, then 16, and several other lads flipped a freight train bound for Guthrie. But the elder Johnson learned from lads who had stayed behind where Hugh was going, and when the youth climbed stiffly from the rods of a freight car, at Guthrie, he was collared by his father and hauled back to Alva.

He was taciturn and rebellious over this frustration, but was finally appeased by his father's promise to get him into West Point. The elder Johnson appealed to J. Y. (Eat-a-Mule) Callahan, lame duck Populist congressman from Oklahoma, but the best Callahan would do was to name Hugh as an alternate candidate.

Hugh looked up the regular candidate's application, and discovered he had falsified his age. He went to see the applicant, challenged him on the point, and whatever other artifices Hugh used, the regular candidate did not show up for the examination and Hugh won the appointment.

His days at West Point, beginning Aug. 30, 1899, were turbulent ones. He was the academy's bad boy and his defiance of rules was so flagrant that when the final reckoning was made, and the demerits of all the graduates of the class of '03 were added up, Hugh Johnson's rating in "soldierly deportment and discipline" was at the absolute tail end of his class of 93 members. Cadet Johnson even outpointed a Venezuelan admitted to the college by special act of congress, and the record lists the present taskmaster of American industry at 94th in this art of soldierly deportment and discipline.

His scholastic achievements at West Point were good, bad and indifferent. His "order of general merit" in the class of 93 men was 53d. His standing with his classmates in the various classifications was as follows:

Civil and military engineering	32
Law	18
History	24
Ordnance and gunnery	34
Drill regulations	10
Military efficiency	74
Soldierly deportment and discipline	94
Practical military engineering	85

Among his classmates was Gen. Douglas MacArthur, now chief of staff of the army, who stood first with a general merit of 2,424.12, and Col. U. S. Grant III., who was sixth in the class with 2,362.55.

After his graduation on June 11, 1903, Johnson became a second lieutenant of cavalry and for sixteen years he stayed in the army.

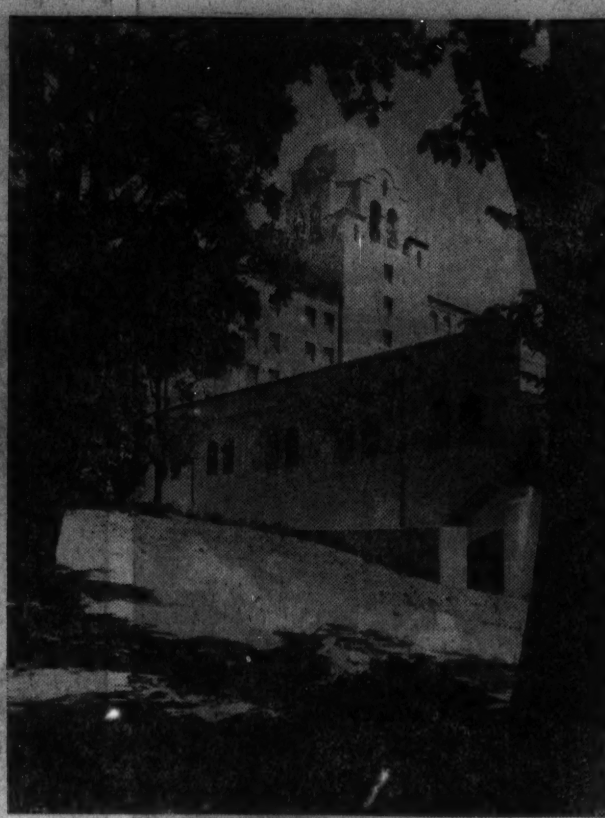
During all that time he never fired a shot in battle, nor did ever a shell deafen his ears, nor a sniper's bullet whistle by. That this was not through the fault of Hugh Johnson seems apparent, as will be told ere long.

The first years of his service with the First cavalry at Fort Clark and Fort Sam Houston, Texas, from Sept. 8, 1903, to May 2, 1906, were uneventful. Then he was dispatched to the shambles of brick and stone and twisted girders that was San Francisco after the fire of 1906, and he served as quartermaster of refugees in a relief camp there.

He was returned to Fort Clark and in November of the same year he was ordered to the Philippines and put in command of a company at Camp Hay, near Baguio, in Luzon. One Saturday night he and another officer, Capt. Robert Knox of the Knox hatters family, rode over to nearby Baguio, which is now the summer resort for the military and governmental aristocracy of the islands, but was then a rough mountain mining town.

The toughest place in town was the bar of the old Pines hotel, and it was there that Captain Knox and Lieutenant Johnson, both in civilian clothes, tarried this Saturday night.

A buck private, a husky six-footer, rummed up to the eyes, was breathing trouble. Brandishing a toy revolver fitted with a rubber sack and loaded with rank perfume, he had pulled a certain burlesque with several men in the saloon, while Johnson watched him in the mirror behind the bar.



University of California, where he barged through a complete course in law, finishing with honors after 18 months of study.

The soldier went up to one after another.

"Where you from?" he would ask, and, getting an answer, he would say, "What's your name?" When this was likewise answered the soldier would shout: "You're a son of a ——! Take a smell of this!" and he would squirt the perfume upon his victim.

Chesty over several such victories in insolence, he lumbered up to Johnson, who was leaning quietly with one arm on the bar.

MacArthur, smartest of Johnson's class.

Assigned to the task of bossing Yosemite National park, Johnson failed to impress the bears.

"Where you from?" the buck asked.

"Oklahoma," Johnson murmured.

"What's your name?"

"Johnson," the lieutenant clipped out ominously.

"You're a son——"

But Johnson's right arm had left the bar and his fist caught the soldier squarely on the jaw. The buck fell in a corner, blissfully unconscious, and he knew nothing more until he woke up in a hospital, his jaw shattered in several places.

He suspected it was an officer who had hit him, and at first named Captain Knox, but when the latter was brought to his bedside he said Knox was not the man. Johnson was not suspected.

A year later Johnson encountered the man in Manila, and the soldier, sporting sergeant's chevrons now, recognized him. The soldier had a silver plate in his jaw, and his face was a bit awry, but he held no ill will.

In many other ways Johnson in the Philippine service showed himself a hard-boiled military taskmaster. His men behind his back all called him "Toughy," a nickname the general is proud of even in this day, for he has bestowed it in the modified form of "Tuffy" on one of his two pet terriers, the second being named "Tottie." In training cavalrymen 'tis said "Toughy" Johnson forced the rookies to ride bareback for sixty days before he gave any of them the comfort of a saddle.

Leaving the Philippines in January, 1909, still a shavetail lieutenant, Johnson was assigned to be superintendent, first of Yosemite and then of Sequoia National park, and the five years he spent in this duty, seeing that tourists didn't get too chummy with the tame bears and establishing fire lookouts, must have been the dullest of his whole life.

One of Johnson's instructors at West Point, having noted his aptitude for the law and desirous of having lawyers in the army who were army trained, arranged for Johnson and several other West Pointers to be sent at army expense to various law schools in the country. Johnson was enrolled at the University of California on Oct. 4, 1914, and in eighteen months had finished the law course, graduating with honors.

His first major duties in the judge advocate general's office of the army were to serve as law officer for John J. Pershing in what is listed on the war department's records as "a punitive expedition into Mexico," but which was really a ludicrous and wholly unsuccessful game of hide-and-seek with the Mexican bandit Pancho Villa.

On Oct. 1, 1916, Johnson, then a captain, went to Washington and joined the staff of the judge advocate general, Enoch Crowder. It was while Johnson was a veritable neophyte there that the first rough outline of the selective draft law was drawn in December of 1916. Congress was about to adjourn, and, with the nation being pushed inescapably toward entry into the World war, President Wilson wanted authority during the recess of congress to conscript an army of 500,000 men as a preparedness measure.

General Johnson today takes great pride in his part in drawing up part of this act, but there is some diversity of information on the subject.

General Pershing, in his war memoirs as first printed serially in the New York Times, had given credit to the war college for the preparation of details of the draft, but when General Johnson read the account he dispatched a letter to the Times on Feb. 2, 1931, as follows:

"Some time in December, 1916, the President requested the secretary of war to prepare a bill authorizing the raising of an army of 500,000 men during the approaching recess of congress. Twenty-four hours were allotted in which to make the draft.

"The task was allotted by the secretary of war to General Crowder. The undersigned was then a captain on General Crowder's staff. The request came late in the afternoon, and only four officers were available to do the work.

"General Crowder therefore allotted to these four the task of drafting various components of that bill. There were no studies of the war college or any other war department bureau to guide.

"That evening, after about five minutes' consideration, the undersigned drafted the first section of the selective service law of May 18, 1917, which in its essential words reads, viz.:

'The President is hereby authorized . . . to raise by draft as herein provided . . . an additional force of 500,000 enlisted men,' etc.

"Political advisers prevailed on the President not to present this draft at that time, but on the declaration of war it was revised, and, while much of an administrative nature was added, the revision was passed by congress with no substantial change in the effective verbiage just recited.

and another upon whom Johnson has failed to "crack down." Henry Ford, a stand-out of the National Recovery program.

"Also in March, 1917, General Crowder requested the undersigned to prepare a memorandum outlining a method for executing such a draft as was provided for by the foregoing language of the law. In doing this—which was accomplished in less than a week—the undersigned neither saw nor was informed of any study by the war college or the general staff until close to the end of the preparation of the memorandum called for.

"In those days it was customary in the office of the judge advocate general to prepare first what was called a "rough draft"—double-spaced foolscap, typewritten manuscript—which, after correction, was recopied on letter-sized paper, single-spaced, and prepared for the signature of the judge advocate general. In this case no such final form was ever prepared. The original memorandum was submitted to the secretary of war bearing General Crowder's initials and a few unimportant penciled interlineations, some by General Crowder and some by the undersigned.

"Secretary Baker sent this back to our office, marked 'approved,' with his signature. In effect it proposed the plan on which the draft was finally executed, the essentials of which were use of existing electoral machinery for registration, decentralization of the draft among state agencies, utter removal of the aspect of military administration from execution of the law and substitution of civilian agencies therefor, determination of exemptions by neighbors and acquaintances of registrants, and the element of selection of the fittest rather than conscription of the unwilling.

"'Now, as to the general staff or war college memorandum which came to my attention about this time. It covered some 250 typewritten pages, and my understanding is that it was rejected by Mr. Baker as being wholly unworkable and certainly unwieldy. It proposed registration by postmasters through a postcard system.

"Anyone who had any experience with the actual enrollment of registrants and determination of exemption claims knows the impracticability of this. Instead of using state agencies, it erected a completely new federal administrative system, paralleling or replacing state agencies somewhat on the pattern of the civil war draft, which latter was about as complete a failure as anything our government ever attempted.

"About the only instruction I received from General Crowder in preparing the plan and erecting the mechanism of the 1917-1918 draft was to avoid every principal element of the civil war system.

"The rest of the story is pretty well known history, and the sole object of this letter is to demonstrate that the draft, like nearly every other logical organizational and administrative action of this country in the World war, was not the result of Von Moltke-like preparation, but was an improvisation begun either after war had been declared or had become imminent.'"

General Pershing corrected his memoirs, and when they came out in book form he had given credit to the judge advocate general's office, but he did not mention General Johnson personally.

General Johnson, upon winning his law degree at the University of California, had delivered a commencement address on the topic, "The Conscription of Armies in Time of War." The general says that this address was philosophical instead of detailed, but that in general idea the same plan was followed in the actual World war draft as had been discussed by the embryo lawyer in his collegiate speech.

The old-timers who served in the judge advocate general's office during the war don't remember the Johnson draft, but undoubtedly it was used, as General Johnson says, in the preparation of the final draft.

The bill as it went to congress was drawn, according to the attaches of the office, by the then Maj. James J. Mays, who died five or six years ago, a colonel, in the Walter Reed hospital. During the preparation of the act Mays worked in close co-operation with Brig. Gen. Samuel T. Ansell, who later became acting judge advocate general, and with United States Senator George W. Chamberlain of Oregon, who was chairman of the military affairs committee and was to carry the administration's fight for the bill on the floor of the senate.

The first section of the act fell short in some phases of meeting the requirements of the army, and amendments to it were written, after the bill was before congress, by Maj. Charles Warren.

There is some question as to why General Johnson should boast of his authorship of the draft law when his real accomplishment, which everybody concerned concedes he bossed completely, was the actual work of putting the draft into effect.

The reason undoubtedly is found in Johnson's boyish pride in his vocabulary and his fascination for seeing his brain children in print. He loves to use big words, has a naive penchant for adjectives, color, and drama in whatever he writes. As a lawyer he has filled his briefs with dashing splashes of drama, confounding his associate barristers and the courts, who were accustomed to the fine, dry, and dignified verbiage of Blackstone.

Newspaper men catching a colleague reading his own story are wont to gibe him for "reading your favorite author, eh?"

Hugh Johnson's favorite author is Hugh Johnson. He lists himself in "Who's Who" as the creator of "Williams of West Point," published in 1907 and still selling, and "Williams on Service," 1909, but long ago out of print. Both are books for boys, the former being a stirring tale of a West Pointer ostracized for cowardice because he refused to fight a bully, and not until he had dashed across the goal line for a great winning touchdown was it disclosed that Williams had promised his dear, dead mother, after injuring a man in a fist fight, that he would never fight again. Johnson probably got his text from his own smashing of the buck's jaw in the barroom at Baguio.

For his work in organizing the draft, registering 24,237,325 Americans and getting 2,952,927 into service, ferreting out slackers, General Johnson on July 9, 1918, was awarded a D. S. M., the citation being "for especially meritorious and conspicuous service in the provost marshal general's office in connection with the planning and execution of the draft laws."

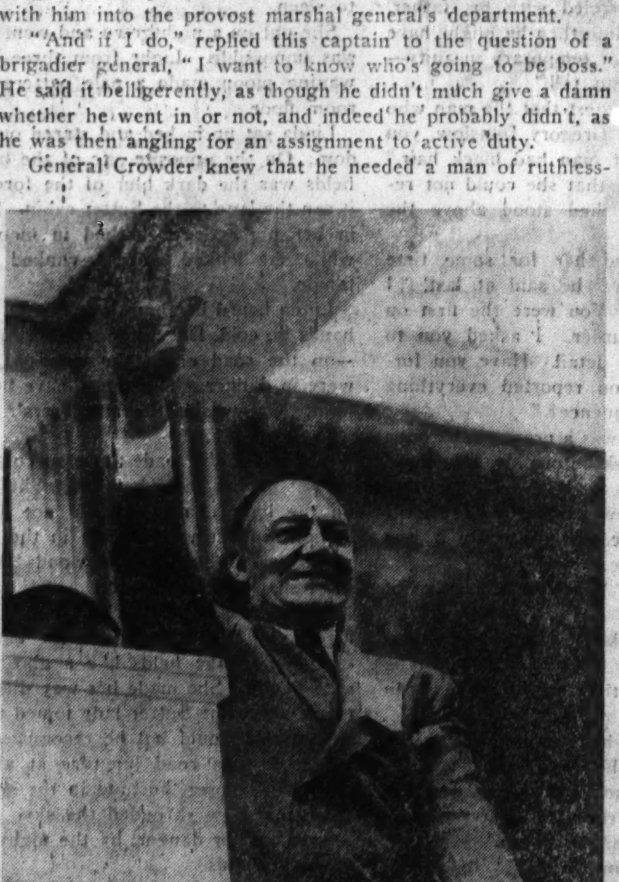
The story has been told many times how Johnson had 30,000,000 draft blanks already printed and mailed to 80,000 sheriffs and mayors in the country while "the little group of willful men," as Wilson called them, were fighting the passage of the act in congress. Secretary Baker and General Crowder didn't know of Johnson's unauthorized action; at first Crowder worried, but not after Baker had applauded.

The blunt truth of the matter is, as those in the department have said privately many times, that General Crowder was just a figurehead in organizing the draft and that Johnson has not spread these facts, while others have.
dominated him completely. It should be noted that Johnson

The story is told that when Crowder was given the assignment to put the draft over he asked Johnson to come with him into the provost marshal general's department.

"And if I do," replied this captain to the question of a brigadier general, "I want to know who's going to be boss." He said it belligerently, as though he didn't much give a damn whether he went in or not, and indeed he probably didn't, as he was then angling for an assignment to active duty.

General Crowder knew that he needed a man of ruthlessness, ability, and authority to bully through the draft arrangements, and while he must have shrunk from the bellicosity of this still "Toughy" Johnson, who wanted to be boss and no doubts about it, he finally agreed, as delicately as he could put it, to let Johnson run the show.



Hugh Samuel, with an arm and a hand like Mussolini's, reviewing the New York parade.

Johnson did run the show. He drew up regulations, organized boards, ran roughshod over individuals who got in his way, blustered at them if they'd stand for it, was contemptuous of people's rights.

He was swiftly promoted during the course of these duties from captain to major, then lieutenant colonel and colonel, and on April 15, 1918, he had the distinction of being the youngest brigadier general appointed since the civil war. Later younger men, including Pelham D. Glassford, won that rank.

Johnson had completed the work on the draft organization and had served simultaneously as chairman of the war department committee on education and special training.

President Wilson then put him on the war industries board, headed by Bernard M. Baruch, who from that time on through all these years has been Johnson's mentor and closest friend. General Johnson was in charge of purchases and supplies, and in that capacity had much to do with the fastening of a war grip on American industry.

It was then that Johnson saw the ruthless power which government could exert over industry, dictating absolutely its supply, its production, its shipping, its sources of raw materials. He may not have reckoned deeply and philosophically that the war spirit of the people provided most of that power, and not the laws of congress or the war industries board.

But during all this time Johnson had been chafing to get to France. Pershing, with whom he had served in the Mexican bandit chase, had asked for Johnson when he took command of the A. E. F., and when Crowder refused to release his fire eater, Pershing promised Johnson he would send for him later.

The other duties which had crowded upon Johnson kept him in Washington despite his bellows that he wanted to fight, but at length he got his friend, Barney Baruch, to intercede for him, and in August of 1918 he was sent to Camp Fremont, California, to command the 15th infantry brigade on its way to France. He didn't know it, but he was too late.

He brought the outfit to Camp Mills, New York, and five times he saw the men and himself loaded on transports, and five times, owing to the confusion over the impending cessation of hostilities, he was loaded off again. When the armistice was signed he disgustedly took his outfit to Camp Lee, Virginia.

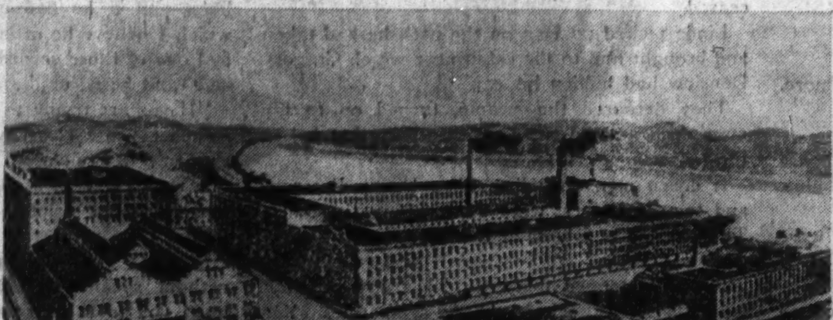
Going back to the judge advocate general's office in Washington, he stuck out the annoyances of undoing the army only a month and on Feb. 25, 1919, he resigned from the service with the rank of brigadier general in the national army, major in the regular army.

He had received an offer from George N. Peek, who had served with him on the war industries board and who is now the taskmaster over the administration's agricultural experimenting.

Peek had been selected by John Willys as the man to save the Moline Plow company, Moline, Ill., from the postwar collapse which threatened it. It was a $37,000,000 corporation, tottering at the time, according to the present story as it is told by Chicago bankers.

Peek and Johnson failed as the "miracle men" in this task, however, and through three successive reorganizations the whole structure fell apart. Chicago bankers, headed by the late Frank O. Wetmore, dropped Peek out of the picture and had made arrangements to liquidate the company.

Johnson, according to the tales now unearthed in Chicago, as well as according to his own account, urged that the liquidation as planned would not bring the maximum realization out of the assets, and he pleaded for a chance to do the job of selling various plants and other assets.



The Moline Plow company, which two "miracle men," one of them Johnson, were unable to save from postwar collapse.

Bankers in charge of the company's affairs gave him the opportunity, and they say he did a good job with high pressure salesmanship methods. At the end he asked for the privilege to purchase the plow works at Moline, sole remaining unsold asset, and, rewarding him for his job, or so it is now told, the bankers' committee permitted Johnson to raise the capital, which he did. Johnson says he raised $1,500,000 for the venture, put the company on a paying basis, and in 1929 sold out for cash and securities which he valued at $5,000,000.

But, according to records, the company was merged into the Minneapolis-Moline company, and owners of the old Moline company, of which Johnson was chairman of the board, received 120,000 shares of common stock in the new corporation and $500,000 in cash. The price range for this stock in 1929 was from 22⅞ to 12⅛, indicating a consideration far below the $5,000,000 mark.

The general himself says that "Peek and I went out as sort of a wrecking crew," and says that he caused the true financial status of the company to be first disclosed to the bankers holding a large part of its paper.

That is the story as it is told by the Chicago bankers. In Moline some of the thousands whose savings were lost in the crash say that they have never been told, if such is the case, that the company was tottering when Peek and Johnson arrived. They are inclined to blame the two men for wrecking the company, and to regard the proceeds of the liquidation fund given to them, which Johnson says had first been reckoned at 15 cents on the dollar, but that he had managed to squeeze 55 per cent out of it, as not adequate.

While engaged in the plow business General Johnson, on the side, cleaned up $43,350 as a special attorney for the state of Illinois in the sanitary district lake levels case, and even here his characteristic bullheadedness manifested itself.

The sanitary district under the late convicted president, Tim Crowe, had been vastly lavish in doling out hundreds of thousands of dollars for attorney fees, especially to members of the Illinois legislature, who later were to vote on bond issues for the district. Most of them did not work at all.

General Johnson, however, was retained as a hard-working counsel by his close friend, Cy Dietz, who had been appointed by former Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom to represent the state in the case. Dietz, once a Northwestern football star, who later was elected to the Illinois Supreme court and died after a short time in office, drew $107,000 in fees from the sanitary district, paying Johnson out of this amount. Both lawyers were paid at the rate of $150 a day while in Washington and $100 daily while in Illinois.

Although Carlstrom and Dietz were Republicans, their selection of Johnson was in no sense political, it is maintained by both Carlstrom and Johnson. Some doubt as to the general's true politics has been raised since his ascent to the commissariat, but he dispelled that with an announcement that he was a lifelong Democrat, as were his father and grandfather before him.

Johnson applied himself industriously to the case, according to the former attorney general and other lawyers in the famous suit.

At one stage in the proceedings days had been spent in presenting evidence before Charles Evans Hughes, now chief justice of the Supreme court, but then a special master appointed to hear the sanitary district case. When the evidence was all in a conference was held on the length of time to be consumed in oral argument. It was agreed that Edmund D. Adcock, who concededly knew more concerning the facts of the case than any other living man, would open the defense for the district; that General Johnson would then argue on behalf of the state, and that the masterful James M. Beck, noted constitutional lawyer, was to draw the entire woof of the case together in a comprehensive close. Both sides of the case were allowed a specified number of hours for argument, and the defense agreed to allot definite time to the three arguments.

Mr. Adcock argued up to the time limit given him and gave way to General Johnson. The latter drew a 400-page written brief from his portfolio and began to read it, a procedure which in itself was not customary, the usual delivery being spontaneous.

The general read on and on, finally exceeding the time he had agreed upon with the others. Mr. Hughes declared a recess, and the defense colleagues sought to prevail upon General Johnson to give way to Mr. Beck. The general grunted his refusal, and when the hearing was resumed he determinedly continued in his transgression upon Mr. Beck's time. Johnson's was concededly a meritorious presentation, although some of the long discussion concerned matters which were not in controversy.

When at last Johnson had read the last sentence on the last page of his brief he had taken a full two hours of the time allotted to Mr. Beck, who was forced to curtail much of his own argument as a result.

After Johnson had withdrawn from the Moline Plow company's affairs he went to New York, and from that time, in 1929, until he was summoned to assume the role of industrial dictator, he was associated with Barney Baruch.

Acting as the Baruch "chief of staff" in plotting the financier's market campaigns, Johnson searched in the world of statistics and obtained data on the condition of the many companies in which Baruch "invested" or "gambled," the choice of word depending upon the point of view.

Johnson toiled with his chief in analyzing the earnings and the assets of corporations, gauged the abilities of their officers, studied the general trends of the market and the economic welfare of the nation itself. He went into the field interviewing business men, listened for tips that might bring millions in market profits.

How much Baruch made is Baruch's business, and he doesn't tell it. How much Johnson made out of it is likewise a secret. There is little doubt in Wall street that Baruch rode the market downward in the long toboggan, for he and Johnson were aware in 1928 that the crash was coming.

Over this long route, then, has come our present taskmaster of industry.

The Golden Hoard

By Edwin Balmer and Philip Wylie

SYNOPSIS

Linda Telfair, young and beautiful, has been living in obscurity on what remains to her family of their Georgia plantation. Now, because Horace Denslow, New York multimillionaire, brings quantities of gold to hoard in the hunting lodge he has bought from the Telfairs, and is murdered there, Linda comes into national prominence. It is Linda who, in response to a phone call from Prescott, New York manager for Denslow, rushes to the lodge and there finds Denslow dead. Linda also finds, to her horror, scraps of paper that, pieced together, form a letter that may be incriminating to Gregory Denslow, estranged son of the murdered man. A Savannah reporter tells Linda that three millions in gold are missing from the Denslow coffers, that Gregory is nowhere to be found, and that Allan, pilot of the plane which bore Denslow and his hoarded gold to Georgia, is also undiscovered. Linda is silent. She does not speak of the masked man who locked her into a gun closet at the lodge, of her rescue by her brother, Daniel, of the scraps of paper, nor of the fear of old Lucius, the family retainer, who saw by moonlight the previous night, men digging in a nearby swamp . . . men digging possibly for hoarded gold. Linda later walks out to an abandoned cottage near the spot where old Lucius saw the men digging and there she finds . . . Gregory!

INSTALLMENT III.

HE WORE city clothes. His felt hat was in his hand. The sun glittered on his reddish hair.

"O!" she said. "O!"

"I'm sorry I frightened you." He stood under the shade of a wide tree. She moved toward him.

"It's you."

"And you're you. Good Lord, Linda, the years have given you a lot of pretty presents."

She blushed. "This is no time to talk about me. What are you doing here?"

"I was going to go up to dad's place by the back way."

There was silence. "I'm sorry about—your father," Linda said at last.

He looked at her. "You found him."

"Yes."

"And now you're out here trying to find out where—whoever killed him came from?"

"More or less. The sheriff is so inefficient. My brother, Dan, is farther up the road."

"You were the first person there?" he said slowly.

She knew what he meant. He must be wondering about that letter which he had left with his father and which had been discovered—or which was sure to be discovered—by someone.

"Why didn't you go to the house by the front way?" she asked.

He looked at her more earnestly than before, as if he were weighing some inward elements of thought. "I'll tell you, Linda, but you mustn't tell anyone else."

Her heart contracted. Now he would either lie to her or tell the truth—and if he told the truth to the end she would defend him; "I won't tell," she said.

He paused a moment. "Look. You were there this morning. You mustn't mind my having been—estranged from my father. You don't know what he did, and about my mother. But that's away from the point. The point is, I was there last night, Linda—before he was killed."

SHE was breathing again and her heart was racing in her excitement. She wanted to seize his hands, to hold him, but he stood straight before her, looking down at her.

"I knew it, Gregg," she told him now.

He started. "You knew it? How?"

"Only I knew it, Gregg!" she cried. "Nobody else, not even Dan."

"How did you know?"

"Tell me first what you did; then I'll tell."

"All right. I came up to see dad on a personal matter at nine last night and I left at nine-thirty. I delivered a letter from mother, for she didn't want me to come. She did not agree with what I was trying to do. She wanted to tell father so."

"I know," said Linda. "I have the letter. I read it."

"You have the letter?"

"Go on, please."

"Father and I had an argument—but no more. You believe that, don't you?"

"Of course. He was alone, then."

"We talked alone, but Allan was in the house with him. I left, I say, about half-past nine. Father was as usual—perfectly well—then."

"Did he tear up the letter while you were there?"

"Mother's letter? No. Was it torn up?"

"When Dan and I entered the room where your father was there were scraps of a letter all over the floor. I don't think Dan noticed, in his excitement; I did. I saw handwriting—and your name. I picked up all the scraps in sight when Dan wasn't looking."

"Linda!"

"I pieced them together and read them, and hid them, and never told a soul."

"Why not?"

"Why didn't you tell you were there, Gregory?"

"Because it would be sure to turn them on me, and I didn't do it. Of course, I knew I didn't do it."

"I knew, too, Gregg!"

"You dear!"

"Linda, I got the news first on the radio this morning. I'd driven half the night and stopped in one of those tourists' camps to sleep. There was a radio there. Then, in the first town, I got the newspaper. I thought first I'd come back here and tell everything; I started with that idea. Then I saw they'd take me and not do anything against anyone else until too late. But I had to come back. So I came here. I don't know what I thought I could do—something, perhaps. Anyway, I came; and the first soul I set eyes on is you. How were you here, Linda?"

She recollected her errand, which, before she sighted him, had absorbed her. "I came here looking for the gold."

"The gold?"

"Old Lucius—one of our servants—saw men digging back beyond here in the light of the moon last night, Gregg!"

"Digging?"

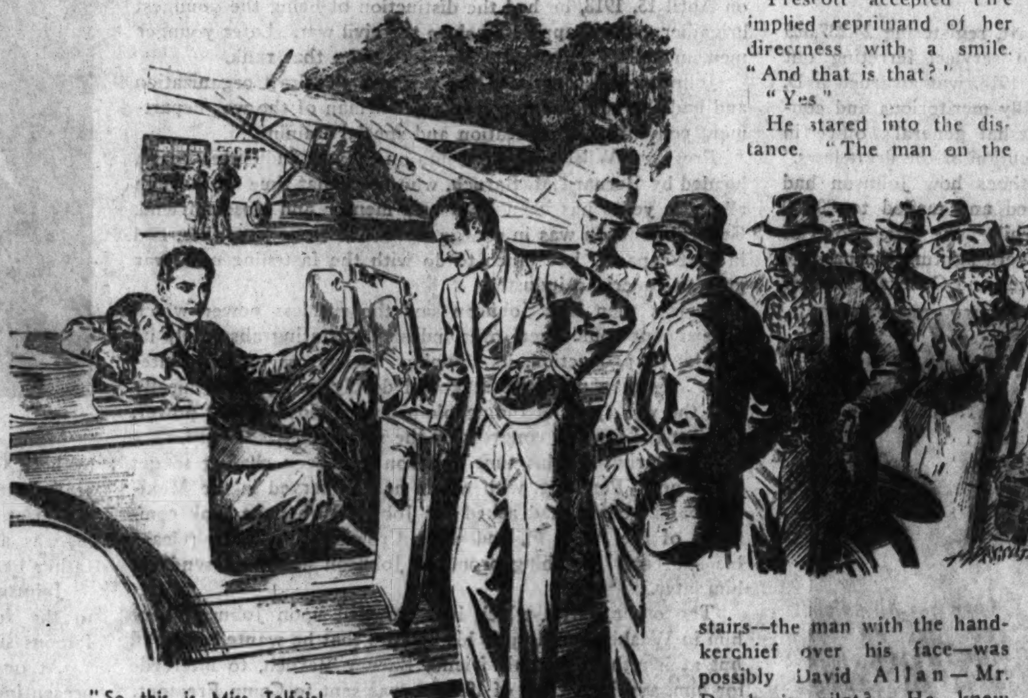
"He was so scared he ran away, but Dan got some sense out of him today. Last night—it must have been after your father was killed—men came here digging with spades."

"Where did you say?"

"Back beyond here. I'll go on now and look."

"I'm going with you, of course." He stepped toward her. He took her arm in an abnormally tense grip. "Linda," he said softly, "I don't know you very well. I remember you as a terribly pretty kid who lived near dad's lodge. You don't know much of me, but you've done the whitest thing anybody on earth ever did for me.

Father didn't mean a lot to me when he was alive. He was someone who'd hurt my mother and had made her suffer and hadn't suffered himself; somebody who had everything all his own way, did whatever he liked and never paid for it. That's what father, alive, was to me. But my father, dead, is someone else altogether. It's funny, isn't it? He's—my father, you see. And somebody killed him, shot him down savagely, emptied a pistol into him without mercy, just after I'd left him. And last night, do you know, though I expected more of an argument than usual on my hands, he was almost friendly with me. But that makes no difference. Somebody murdered my father. . . . What airplane is that, Linda?"



"So this is Miss Telfair! You're the girl I talked to this morning! I'm glad you came. I was on the point of sending for you."

A hum overhead was growing louder and through the treetops a great monoplane was visible in the sky.

"Mr Prescott, I guess," said Linda. "He said he was flying down with some New York detectives, and he ought to get here about now."

"O, yes. Prescott. Linda, shall we look in the woods now, or shall I report myself to the sheriff and the New York detectives? No danger in doing it now. More danger if I don't. Wherever I was, I must have heard the news and I ought to have come on. What'll it be, Linda?"

"I'll find Dan; he shouldn't search the woods alone. We'll all come back later. Now we'll go with you, Gregg, when you report to the police."

The airplane dropped to the landing field beyond the trees; its motor and propeller noises ceased.

Linda picked up Dan on the path he had taken and brought him to the cabin near which Gregory Denslow had hidden his car.

They detoured the swamp, turned on to the main road and up the long driveway that led to the lodge.

A dozen men, including Clay, Henry Prescott, and two detectives, were approaching the lodge. They turned in a body at the advent of the roadster.

Prescott stepped forward. "Denslow, old fellow! Terribly shocked. All my sympathies. You just arriving?"

GREGORY nodded to the lawyer. "Thanks. Yes. I've just come. I found Miss Telfair and her brother on the road."

"Where were you," asked the lawyer, "when you heard the news? I phoned your mother; couldn't get you."

"I was in an auto tourist camp. Was driving around till I got tired. The radio told me, Mr. Prescott."

And you were all day driving here?" said the lawyer, but, after suggesting this discrepancy in Gregory's account of himself, Prescott did not push it further. He turned to Linda.

"So this is Miss Telfair!" Prescott opened the door of the car. "You're the girl I talked to this morning? I'm glad you came. I was on the point of sending for you." He helped her to descend.

Gregory looked calmly at the cluster of men. Prescott turned to him. "You may or may not want to go inside. Things have been left more or less as they were found."

"I'll go in."

"Good enough. You've just come up from—where did you say?"

The young man glanced at Linda. "Half way between here and St. Augustine."

"Where's your mother now?"

"At Albemarle. In a hotel. She came by train."

"You said you met Miss Telfair on the way over here?"

"I offered her a lift."

The lawyer shook his head positively. "We'll want you at the inquest. You won't mind if we check up a bit? We'll be compelled to look into the movements of everyone connected with your father."

Gregory's eye was calm as it met the New Yorker's. "Not a bit." He turned and walked toward the house, followed by Clay, who walked and even breathed suspiciously.

Prescott reverted to Linda. "I'd like a little minute with you in private. Do you mind?"

"Of course not."

"Suppose we just stroll through the grounds, then?"

"Very well."

He began to speak casually. "You were certainly a marvel of coolness this morning."

"I wasn't—really. I was terrified."

"Suppose we get to the point. Suppose you tell me precisely what took place."

Linda decided to give him a lesson in brevity and taste. She collected herself and told her story in a rapid voice.

Prescott accepted the implied reprimand of her directness with a smile. "And that is that?"

"Yes."

He stared into the distance. "The man on the stairs—the man with the handkerchief over his face—was possibly David Allan—Mr. Denslow's pilot? He knew about the gold—killed his employer——"

"No."

"Eh?"

"I've seen Mr. Allan. He is a little man—comparatively."

"Yes, of course. You did not tell me this man was tall."

"He was."

"Well! The sheriff didn't mention that point. Perhaps he hadn't had time. I've been here only a few minutes."

She nodded. "I saw your plane come down."

"Remarkably fast flight. I left New York only this morning."

THEY walked a little distance. Prescott said presently, "How well do you know Denslow's son?"

"Very slightly."

"I see. The Denslows were supposed to have violent tempers, weren't they?"

"I never heard of it."

The lawyer laughed. "Anyway—he's a redhead. And red hair is usually the storm signal."

She controlled her uneasiness. "What does Mr Denslow's temper have to do with his father's murder?"

"Nothing. Only—if he had happened to be here—and if he had quarreled with his father, which I believe he often did—then he might have had one of those seizures of temporary insanity—and—and he is, unlike Allan, tall."

"If you are trying to suggest that the man who locked me in a closet was Gregory Denslow, you are sadly mistaken. That man had black hair." She realized, with a start, that she could not remember what color hair had stood above the mask.

Prescott again regarded her for some time without speaking. "Now," he said at last, "I want you to think hard. You were the first on the ground after the murder. I asked you to make note of every little detail. Have you forgotten anything—have you reported everything of however small consequence?"

She pondered. "There was a prayer book open and faced down on the desk before Mr. Denslow."

"Yes, I know of that."

"It was open at page seventy-nine. The sheriff shut it and flung it aside, but originally it was open at page seventy-nine."

Prescott studied her. "What do you make of that detail?"

"I don't know. You asked me to notice all details. That was one!"

"What was another that might have been missed—but for you?"

"There was a bullet hole in the door—the bullet fired from inside the room."

"Was there also," asked Prescott, "a bullet hole in the floor, or anything else on the floor that others might have missed?"

Linda's heart was beating fast. "Why should there have been anything special on the floor?"

"I meant," said Prescott, "the first observer has an especial advantage in inspecting the floor. Afterwards it is walked on; traces are obliterated. You did not, by any chance, see Gregory Denslow last night?"

"No, how could I?"

"He seems indefinite regarding his whereabouts. You and he were friends."

"I had not seen him for almost three years!"

"Indeed!"

They approached the men who stood outside the lodge. Gregory Denslow had been enormously sobered by the sight of the body of his father. He gazed at Linda mutely; to Prescott he said:

"Allan never would have done that. Dismiss the idea. I have private knowledge about Allan which would make it impossible for him to have slaughtered my father in such a fashion. If Allan was here——"

"He was," said Prescott.

"Then he is dead, too, or in the hands of the murderers."

CLAY thrust into the interchange. "I got men all over the countryside looking for Allan and looking for the gold, too. 'Look for gold,' I told them. 'Look for that pilot.' And I told them to arrest any suspicious or murderous looking individuals. I threw out a net, that's what I did."

One of Prescott's two New York detectives, a man whose name presently appeared as Yerkes, stepped forward and addressed the lawyer. "I've ordered a general alarm for Allan, the pilot."

"Good."

Gregory spoke to Linda. "May I drive you home? It must be nearly your supper time."

"Thank you."

They went to his car without actual hindrance from Prescott or from Clay. Neither approved, it was plain; but neither attempted to forbid.

Clear of the cordon of guards, Gregg slowed.

"Strange to see father—that way," he said. "And I was the last to see him as he was before they came—unless Davy Allan saw him again. Davy didn't do it, you remember that, if no one else does. Davy, I'm afraid, has been done himself. Father trusted him completely, and father wasn't a fool on picking men if he did sort of crack up about money this last year or two. Besides, there's something else about Davy Allan which I'm not free to tell you yet.

"For a year, I knew—and a few others in banks and other places also had to know—that father had been hoarding money.

"These last months he's given all his time to hoarding it and hiding it, with just Davy Allan helping him. No one else; they did it secretly together. . Maybe they had time to hide some of it in the woods back of that old cabin last night before father was killed. Maybe they were seen by your old Negro doing it."

"No," said Linda, "unless Lucius was entirely off on his reckoning of the time, your father was dead then."

"Yes, so maybe Lucius saw the men who killed father looking for the gold to dig it up."

"That's what I think."

"Then either they got it and the gold's gone, or they didn't get it—and they'll come back and try again tonight, Linda. . . . When I was in there with father I got to thinking maybe I could catch them there tonight."

"Not alone, Gregg!" said Linda. "You would not try it alone!"

"I certainly wouldn't look for any sensible help from Sheriff Clay, and I won't ask Prescott. But maybe you've a friend who would help me. Dan's too young."

"Dr. Ames might," said Linda.

At last, with night, a reaction to her fantastic day set in for Linda—not a relapse into fatigue, but a heightening of her nervousness. Her mother was in bed. Andy had been sent to a neighbor's. Lucius and his wife had finished the kitchen. There was nothing to do.

Finally, she went to her room and, after reassuring herself that the fragments of the letter that implicated Gregory were intact and in their place behind the light bracket, she decided to try to sleep.

She put on a nightgown and went to bed. Sleep was impossible. Light from three-quarters of a waning moon made a pale pattern on her bedroom floor.

Linda sat up in bed and stared out of her window. On the opposite site of the broad, moonlit fields was the dark blur of the forest. Through it ran the lane to the Sutter cabin. She sat there, in her night dress, bathed in moonlight. And, while she looked, a light winked in the black tangle.

Linda heard her breath drawn in. She felt her hands go cold. Dr. Ames and Gregory were there—on the road or in the woods. Perhaps they were in danger. That must have been Gregory's light. Or—was it the murderers'?"

WHILE she made those speculations she was rising from her bed. She put her hand on the light chain—and did not draw it down. A light suddenly appearing in the Telfair house might warn those in the woods that their own brief spark had been seen.

Linda dressed in the clothes she had worn that afternoon. She slipped out the back door. She went across the fields like a ghost—rapidly and soundlessly. She made her way diagonally to the place where the Sutter lane joined the highway—a spot that could not be recognized by a casual passerby as a road juncture at all. She came closer and closer, keeping in the shadows of the trees that now shrouded the sky. She was terrorized by her danger, by the night, by countless natural sounds.

The moon descended. It outlined the top branches of a gnarled and gigantic oak that grew still leafless a few yards inside the forested edge of the clearing. Its shape was grotesque and startling in the moonlight. Occasionally her gaze rose to it and she shivered. Through her mind flashed the thought that they hanged people from trees like that, and for several minutes she frantically fought back the resultant panic. She sweated coldly with the fear of the results of an imagination out of control. She decided not to look at the oak.

With that decision, her eyes were drawn to it again, unwillingly. She scanned it, telling herself that she was looking at the moon and not the tree—for the moon was now descending into the filigree of its upper branches. It glistened on the bark and silhouetted the crotches and thick elbows against its pale face.

Then, in its entirety, quite suddenly and as if she had expected it all the time, she saw the man.

He sat in a crotch of that oak tree.

His legs were straight down. His hands held one of the heavy limbs by reaching backward and encircling it. He was like a rider in a saddle, and he was quietly, motionlessly overlooking the clearing.

Her heart did not beat for so long that it very nearly failed altogether. Her throat drew itself shut. Her lips bared her teeth. She did not scream because that sudden apparition was too terrible for screaming.

The man in the tree must have seen her trespass of the glade. He was looking almost directly at the place where she crouched.

She had not taken her eyes from him. She stopped in the hideous shadows, frozen, paralyzed. Into that iciness trickled the glad thought that the man must be Dr. Ames or Gregory, and it was driven out at once by the moon-revealed fact that the tree sitter wore breeches and leather puttees.

With all her being she ached to scream and run. She could do neither. Before she lost control the necessity of not moving became apparent. Any motion might bring the ray of a flashlight and the quick crack of a gun.

She saw, with horrid clarity, that it would be a duel between herself and the man. She realized that he was doubtless as afraid of her as she was of him. He must be conscious of the target he made against the moon.

HE would have seen that she was a girl as she moved eerily along the glade's fringe of trees. But he would naturally assume that she was armed.

Why, then, had he not shot at her—or accosted her—at once? Perhaps because he realized how well camouflaged he was in the great oak. If it had not been for the accident of his body coming between herself and the moon, she would never have seen him.

She clenched her jaws because she was afraid the sound of her chattering teeth would carry to his ears.

He sat still, stiffly, with his back pressed close against the tree. He depended upon his rigidity for concealment.

Minutes had passed since she saw him.

He was now sharply defined against the moon. Linda stared. In her ears was the roar of her own blood. She was still convulsed. She found herself wondering with the petty insistences that inflict themselves even through sheer horror why he did not budge. It was impossible for a human being to remain so still. Sooner or later nature would compel him to turn his head an inch, or stir an arm, or swing one of his dangling, downthrust legs. But he did not.

His profile stood against the light. And Linda saw another thing about the man in the tree.

Then she knew.

He was dead.

She knew who it was in the same instant. The puttees and breeches told her. It was Denslow's pilot, David Allan.

She could bear no more. She screamed; she whirled around; she ran, wildly, blindly along the way she had come.

She stumbled and fell. She was not hurt; simply she lacked the strength to rise at once. She lay on the ground, listening.

There were footsteps near her. A man's voice. "Who are you?"

It was Dr. Ames' voice, and Linda tried to reply, but she lay helpless a moment longer.

"Where are you? . . . What's happened? Where are you?" This was Gregg's voice; yes, his beyond doubt.

"Gregg!" she called. "Gregg! Dr. Ames!"

"Linda! Good God, Linda. Where are you? . . . You hurt? . . . What is it?"

Linda sat up and rose to her feet; she could see them in the moonlight between the trees.

"Linda. Linda!" he held her to him, steadying her, kissing her. "Linda child, how did you get here? Who hurt you? Who——"

"Nobody hurt me, Gregg. I came here myself. I wanted to find you. O, Gregg, I found Allan. He's there—there!" she stabbed with a frantic finger. "He's in a tree—dead. You can see him!"

Not from that spot could they see him, but Linda did not move. The doctor remained with her and Gregg went into the woods; after a few minutes he returned.

"It's Davy Allan, doctor," he reported. "I left him just as he was. I'll take Linda back to her home, then we'll look over everything together."

Linda lay on the couch in the living room, a light burned beside her. She had to have a light now, though she had awakened no one else in the house. It was midnight.

Gregg and the doctor had promised to come to her before summoning the sheriff or communicating with Mr. Prescott. What were they finding or what were they doing which took them so long? Had something frightful and silent—something which might have involved no firing of revolver or gun—happened to them? Might it be that they would be found in the morning motionless like Davy Allan in the tree?

At last she saw lights leading out of the woods and approaching the house.

OCTOBER NIGHT

A Little Old House Hidden in Trees—Strange People Living in It, One a Student of Witchcraft—an Excellent Background for Weird and Fearful Happenings

A WILD, gray morning, with the rain dashing against the windows and the trees rocking in the wind.

"Nick won't come today," said Lou to herself. That was a good thing. It would be better if he never came, if she never saw him again. He was a young third officer on a passenger steamer, with no likelihood of immediate promotion and she was a girl with an expensive and useless education, left alone in the world now, with no money but her salary as Mr. Deal's private secretary. It was the first job she had ever had, and she was never likely to get another as good as this.

"We could manage," he was always telling her. "You could have practically all my pay. We could get a little flat."

And she was to stay in the little flat, and do the best she could with his pay, and he would be home with her three days every month.

"I'm sorry, Nick," she told him, "but I'm just not like that."

"You mean you don't care enough?"

"I'm afraid that's the way it is," she had said a little unsteadily. "Not quite enough, Nick."

Not enough to be poor and anxious and lonely. But she did care, more than he was going to know.

Mr. Deal was taking a long time over his breakfast this morning. Certainly she didn't much relish her work: the very thought of his precious book, "Some Aspects of Colonial Culture," filled her with boredom; but it was better to work than to think about other things. . . .

Millie, the nice little housemaid, came into the library with her duster.

"Good morning, Miss Craigie. Isn't it a mis'able day?"

"Better not disturb Mr. Deal's papers, Millie."

"I hate to go near 'em, Miss Craigie! Those pictures he's got of them witches . . ."

"But you don't believe in witches, Millie!"

"O, no, Miss, 'course I don't. Only, a old house like this—there's such queer noises at night . . . Look, Miss! The way that rug's going up and down . . . !"

"It's the wind coming under the door, Millie."

"I know, Miss. But it looks like something alive was under it, don't it, Miss?"

"Not to me."

"And Mrs. Craw . . . She's so kind of gloomy, Miss. Waiting all the time for a telegram that her brother-in-law's dead . . . if it wasn't for you, Miss Craigie, I don't think I could stand it here. It gets on my nerves like . . ."

MR. DEAL was coming now, and Millie hurried away. And Mr. Deal was strangely excited. A little elderly man he was, with plump cheeks like a chipmunk.

"A most interesting letter, Miss Craigie! You recall, perhaps, Professor Welcome's book on Witchcraft? An authority—the authority. He wishes to set me right on one or two minor points. He proposes to come over here this afternoon by the 4:40 train, and if I don't telephone him to the contrary, he will stop over Sunday."

Stupid to feel a sort of pity for Mr. Deal, because he was growing old, alone, in this old house. He had money; no doubt he got what he wanted from life . . .

"I believe you were to have a holiday this afternoon, Miss Craigie . . . But in the circumstances . . . A visit from a man of such distinction . . . If you would defer your holiday, I should greatly appreciate it . . ."

His appreciation wouldn't take the form of proposing any extra pay. Very careful of his inherited money, was Mr. Deal. There was no reason why she should give up the first holiday in a month just to oblige him.

"Very well, Mr. Deal!"

"I really appreciate this, Miss Craigie! And you'll go to the station to meet Professor Welcome? In this weather, my throat . . ."

"Certainly, Mr. Deal."

The perfect secretary, Miss Craigie; a slender girl, a little pale, with long, dark blue eyes and ash-blonde hair, smartly dressed, intelligent, marvelously self-possessed.

"We must organize matters, Miss Craigie. First, I should like all my notes on the witchcraft chapter typed before Professor Welcome arrives."

The subject charmed him; he dictated with zest. She read his notes back to him; he revised them. Lunch hour came and he was still full of it. He sat at the head of the table, eating the meager and unappetizing food Mrs. Craw, his housekeeper had provided, and he continued.

"No" . . ." he said. "Witchcraft was not a delusion. Indeed, I should not hesitate to declare that there are witches alive in the world at this moment."

Millie dropped her tray with a crash, and glancing at her, Lou saw that the girl's face had grown white.

The rain was dashing against the windows. The old room was shadowy and dim and chilly. Millie stood motionless by the sideboard.

A bluish flame shot up in the grate, and a cinder fell through the bars with a rattle. And Millie gave a violent start.

He was unmanageable today. Even questions about his cherished aneroid barometer could not deflect him from the subject of Professor Welcome's visit. "Anyhow, it's a relief to get him off the Witches' Sabbath." Thought Lou, "Millie wouldn't have stood much more."

"He must have the west room," said Mr. Deal. "A fire can be lit there to supplement this not entirely adequate furnace. And blankets . . . And it occurs to me that possibly the window curtains . . ."

"I'll see Mrs. Craw . . ." she said.

Mrs. Craw was in the little dining room off the kitchen, her own private domain; a black cotton stocking was drawn over one hand which showed through the web like a ghostly window.

"I'm expecting a telegram at any moment," said Mrs. Craw. "My brother-in-law's just lingering . . . Just lingering . . ."

It seemed to Lou that there was a horrible relish in Mrs. Craw's tone. She was very anxious to hear no more.

"I'm so sorry . . ." she said, with polite sympathy, and at once began to speak of blankets, curtains and food for Professor Welcome. Mrs. Craw evinced a professional interest. She made a long, slow list of eatables. Even this list, somehow, was tinged by Mrs. Craw's sombreness; mutton, rice, candles . . .

Mutton, rice, candles . . . The words made a dismal refrain in Lou's mind as she sat in one corner of the big car; there was something a little horrible in them.

She stopped in the little town and did her shopping, according to Mrs. Craw's list, a big and unseemly package was stowed in the front seat beside the wooden chauffeur. Then they went on to the station.

It was dark as night now. The overhead lights shone down upon the empty platform where the rain went dancing in a sort of mist. Two or three taxis stood there, their headlights illuminating the muddy road. A train whistle sounded, dismal beyond measure.

It seemed to Lou her duty to get out and welcome the important guest. The train came in. Two or three people descended. One of them, directly in front of her, had an appearance which seemed to her what might be expected of Professor Welcome; a slight little man with a big, drooping black mustache and a most extraordinary plaid overcoat. He looked, she thought, like an old tintype come to life.

"Professor Welcome?" she asked.

He took off his derby hat, revealing a head of very black hair, parted in the middle.

"From Mr. Deal?" he asked. "His secretary, I take it? He has mentioned your assistance in the most flattering terms . . . Most flattering . . ." He smiled gallantly, revealing glittering gold teeth. "My bag," he said, indicating an enormous cowhide portmanteau which the conductor had set down on the platform. "I don't like . . ."

The rest of his words were lost in the noise of the train pulling out; waiting politely to hear the rest, Lou glanced about the platform. And a few feet from her directly under the light, she saw Nick, his soft hat pulled down over his forehead, the collar of his overcoat turned up. He was looking at her, a steady, unsmiling, miserable look.

"The car's over there, Professor Welcome," she said. "I'll tell the chauffeur to come and get your bag. And will you excuse me just a moment? Some one I know has come on the train . . ."

"Certainly, my dear young lady!" said Professor Welcome gallantly, and as Weeks, the chauffeur, approached in obedience to her gesture, she turned to Nick. He came to meet her, hat in hand, and now he smiled.

"Hello, dear!"

"Hello, Nick . . . Nick, I'm so sorry . . . I didn't think you'd come in this weather . . . Mr. Deal's got this cherished professor and I said I'd help to get him installed. I didn't think you'd come."

HIS disappointment was plain enough; for three weeks he had been looking forward to this day. He had come all the way out here and for nothing. She could not blame him if he reproached her bitterly . . .

"Lou," he said, "any chance of seeing you later in the evening? After you've got this fellow installed?"

"I don't know, Nick. Perhaps. But don't waste your time on the chance. There's a down train in ten minutes. Take that and look up some one you know. Do please have a good time this evening! If you don't, I'll feel—like a brute!"

"I couldn't have a good time without you, Lou," he said. "Now, look here! I'll go out to that hotel across the road, and if there's a chance later on of your getting off, ring me up there."

She turned and saw Professor Welcome talking to a taxi driver.

"He's going astray!" she said, and held out her hand. "Anyhow, I'll call you up, Nick." He held her hand tight for an instant, then she left him and hurried up to the professor.

"Mr. Deal's sent his car for you, Professor."

"He should have known better!" cried the professor in a high, furious voice. "I told him . . . ! I refuse to get into that car!"

"But——"

"I shall take a taxi. And I shall have the top down. This driver is singularly obtuse . . ."

"I am prepared to pay within reason," said the professor. "I insist upon fresh air. I will not enter that closed car."

"We can have the windows open," said Lou.

"No!" he cried, stamping his foot. "Nothing will deter me. Lower the top!"

"But you'll be——"

"Don't argue!" he cried. "My decision is final. If you wish to take my bag with you, very well . . ."

The driver got the top down with difficulty, the professor entered the cab, closed the door with a slam, and on they went into the downpour. For a moment she stood looking after them, puzzled and uneasy; then Weeks appeared at her side and took the professor's bag.

She glanced back to see if Nick were still there. But the platform was empty; it was hard to believe he had ever been there. Weeks held open the door of the big black car for her.

She thought of Professor Welcome driving unprotected through the wind and rain. She thought of the sombre Mrs. Craw, of Mr. Deal and his witches, and she thought of Nick, with a queer emotion that made her throat contract. Was she glad that he had come, after all, or was she sorry? Sorry—for everything . . . Sorry that he cared too much, and she not quite enough . . . ?

The car stopped with a jolt, and leaning forward she saw by the headlights an overturned truck lying across the road, completely blocking it; no light, no people, not a sound. Weeks began backing the car.

"But you must see if any one's hurt!" she cried.

"Better not," said Weeks. "With these here hijackers and all, better not to get mixed up."

He turned and drove back along the road, turned again into what seemed a dripping forest. When the car stopped again she was startled.

"What is it now?" she asked.

"We're home," said he.

IT WAS part of the queer nightmare evening that they should say they were "home" when she could see nothing but a stretch of muddy road gleaming in the headlights.

"Got no lights in the house," he observed without interest.

"I guess the wires are down in the storm."

He opened the door of the car and taking the bundles, went leisurely after her as she ran along the path and up on the veranda where he set them down.

"Good-night, miss!" he said, and was off.

She rang the bell and waited, wondering why they hadn't lit a lamp.

"It's idiotic!" she cried to herself with a strange little outburst of anger. And why didn't some one come to the door? She rang again and heard the bell sound shrilly in the house. But no footsteps.

The rain drummed loud on the roof of the porch, the wind went rushing past. And the old house stood dark and still.

She knocked on the door, banged on it. And no one came.

"It's just impossible," she told herself. "All those people in the house and not a sound. No one to open the door.

She knocked once more on the front door, once more rang the bell and, getting no response, went down the veranda steps to the path.

The rain was cold as ice driving in her face and did her good. She followed the path round the side of the house to the back and there, in the kitchen, she saw a dim light. Her relief gave the measure of her fear, her knees trembled, she gave a long sigh and hurried to the window. And as she stood on tiptoe to look in she looked directly into a strange face pressed against the inside of the window.

It startled her immeasurably. She drew back staring with dilated eyes. Who was this, this old woman with strangely white hair and dark eyes that glittered? This old woman with a broom in her hand?

"Here," she said aloud, "don't be quite such a fool. I shan't know who she is or how she got here. But that's Mr. Deal's kitchen and she's a human being . . ."

Approaching the window again, she smiled, but the old creature only glared at her. Then she went to the back door and knocked, banged, rattled the handle with a mounting terror.

"I will get in," she cried. "Let me in."

She ran back to the window and there stood the woman glaring at her. She rapped at the window and the old woman raised her broom menacingly.

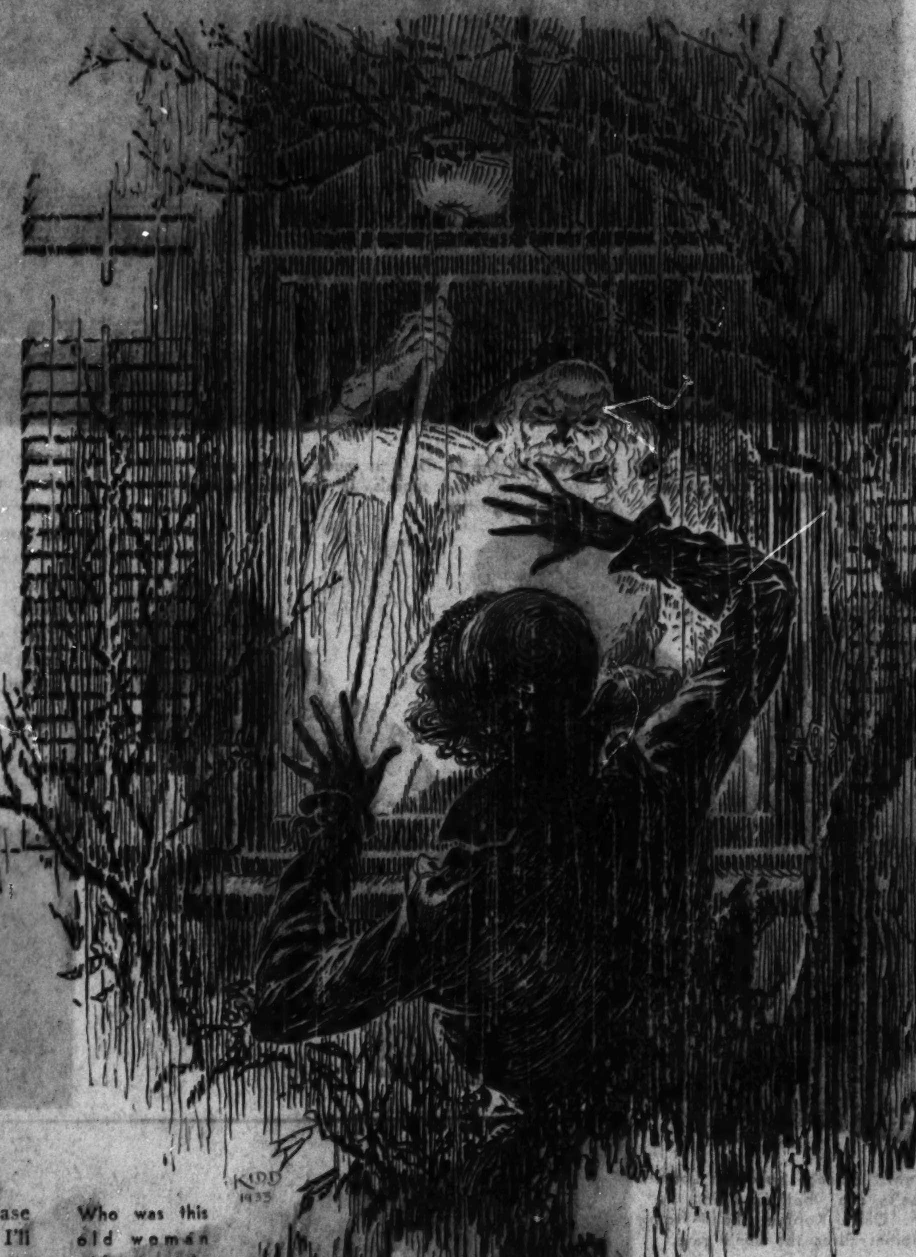
"Stop it!" cried Lou.

She sprang back, her foot slipped in the muddy path, and she fell. When she rose to her feet she felt tears warm on her cheeks.

"This won't do," she said aloud with a sob. "I'm not going to lose my nerve. I'll go and get Weeks."

The garage was dark, too, and locked. She knocked loudly on the door, but she expected no answer.

Her foot struck against something on the path and for a moment her heart seemed to stop. This was the supreme horror, the unbearable thing . . . Some one was lying there . . .



Who was this old woman with strangely white hair?

Her groping hands touched a man's short hair, soaked by the rain. Weeks——? Her fingers moved slowly down a cold, wet face. No—that was not a uniform . . . What she felt was the soft roughness of a heavy overcoat. An overcoat like Nick's . . . She reached for the hands, flung out in the mud. They were ungloved. That was Nick's seal ring.

NOTHING was impossible any more. Everything that used to be real had gone now; light and warmth and human voices. Nick was lying here, cold, soaked by the driving rain. Perhaps he was dead. One went on. There was no one else to help Nick now.

"I'll have to telephone for a doctor," she said aloud. "And I'll get something to cover you with, Nick. I shan't be long."

She climbed in at the open window. It had been broken, a jagged splinter of glass tore her hand. She tied it up in her drenched handkerchief, to keep the blood from dripping so. The telephone was in the library. She went through the kitchen into the hall and found it black as a pit. She turned the switch but nothing happened. She groped her way to the library and the door was locked. She knocked and hammered on it, but in this nightmare world all doors were locked, no voices ever answered. She could not reach the telephone, she could have no light, there was no one else alive in this house.

"If I'm any good at all," she said to herself, "I'll keep my nerve and get help for Nick. There's nobody but me. It doesn't matter if I can't understand."

She had to wait a moment, her knees trembled so. Then she felt her way toward the stairs. In her bureau drawer there was an electric torch. She would get that. She would take the steamer rug from the shelf in the wardrobe to cover Nick and she would walk to the village if there were any village.

A board creaked. If some one were very quietly coming up the stairs behind her? If some one were waiting at the head of the stairs . . . ? Mr. Deal and Mrs. Craw and Professor Welcome and Millie must all be somewhere . . . What if they had all gone mad . . . ? What if Mr. Deal had changed himself into that staring little old woman—that witch.

Here was the top of the stairs. There was the wall of the passage, this the knob of her own door. One door that was not locked . . . She mustn't run to the bureau . . . Of course the torch wouldn't work . . . But it did. A beam of light shone now upon familiar objects.

She crossed the room and unlocked the wardrobe door. The light of the torch shone directly into Professor Welcome's face. He was standing there with his eyes closed. He toppled forward and in his fall bore her to the ground. Some one shrieked horribly—she fell through the floor, through the earth and all her breath rushed out of her body . . .

A bright light shone in his eyes . . . Who was saying, "Lou——!" Whose arms?

"Nick . . . ?"

"Here, Lou!"

"Nick, are you dead . . . ?"

"No, dear girl, I'm here."

Light, bright light, and Nick sitting beside her.

"Nick, I forgot to put my hand to my head and say: 'Where am I?' I'm not acting according to precedent . . . I think I've had a nightmare . . . I dreamed I came here and it was dark."

"The wires were down. Telephone wires, too. The chauffeur drove into the village to report."

"So that's where Weeks went. . . . Then, some of it is real . . . But there was a witch in the kitchen, Nick."

"She gave me a crack on the head with her broom," said Nick.

SHE reached for his hand. "That's not the right answer, Nick. You ought to say, 'There aren't any witches . . .' Because if she's true, then Professor Welcome was true."

His fingers tightened over hers.

"Want me to tell you, dear girl? The doctor will be along presently to see you. He's in the house now. . . . Perhaps you'd feel better if I told you. . . . You see, the housekeeper got a telegram as soon as you'd left. Some one was ill. And when she went she stopped in the village to get a friend of hers to take her place. An old woman, called Mrs. Angel. And the housemaid didn't like her. Mrs. Angel's deaf and dumb, but the housemaid had another idea. She was afraid of Mrs. Angel and she left."

"Mrs. Angel's that witch, Nick?"

"That's what the girl thought. So, she cleared out and Mr. Deal was badly upset. So, he got a taxi and went to the village to get another housemaid from an agency. His cab ran into a truck. He wasn't hurt, but he was delayed. And when Professor Welcome arrived, there was no one here but Mrs. Angel."

"I rather wish that part wasn't true, Nick."

"Real things are better than nightmares, Lou."

"Go on!"

"You'll have to remember that the poor old woman couldn't hear a word he said, or speak to him, and she'd never seen him before. He is a queer looking bird, too. He was very much annoyed when he got here. He was wet through, wanted to change and she couldn't even tell him which room was meant for him. She told Mr. Deal, he can read her fingers, that she thought he was a foreigner, and when he wandered into your room, looking for his own, she thought he was a thief. So she opened the wardrobe door and beckoned him over and shoved him in, and locked the door."

"And he smothered . . . ?"

"He's alive, dear girl. He'd have been all right if it hadn't been for the trouble he has. I've forgotten what the doctor called it . . . Fear of small, enclosed places."

"Nick, you were really here? Lying out in the rain?"

"Yes. You see, I tried to ring you up and the telephone was out of order. And—I don't know how it was—I didn't like the looks of that professor fellow. I didn't like your going alone. I came after you in a taxi. I couldn't get into the house, and I thought you were in it. . . . And Mrs. Angel didn't help much. . . . I smashed the kitchen window and she thought I was certainly another thief and she gave me a crack on the head with her broom. Knocked me out for a while. . . .

"You worried me a little. Nobody would like to find a friend lying on the garden path—in the rain. I'm afraid I was . . ."

She raised herself on her elbow and he put his arm about her shoulders.

"Lou . . . I've always known you were the only thing that matters . . ."

"Nick, I must tell you what I said that you didn't hear . . . Nick, darling . . . I can't go on without you. . . ."

DOCTORS CALL NUDISM LOONY

Warn Cultists to Don Bathing Suits to Resist Sun, Citing the Neanderthaler's Hairy Hide

By Kathleen McLaughlin

PROTESTING squeals from the moralists every summer for the last twenty years have heralded the arrival of the beach seasons. Each spring, noting the absence of another inch at the bottom of bathing suits and the drop of a couple of inches at the top, they have predicted:

"Next year they won't wear anything at all!"

Events of the last few months indicate that at last they may be right. Scanning the court calendars of various states where prosecutions on charges of indecent exposure await the newly revealed devotees of nudism, even a nonchalant observer would be forced to the conclusion that the disappearing point may in fact be closer than it seems.

Until this summer the American public thought of nudism only as a weird fad that had experienced a certain popularity in Germany. Now it is revealed as flourishing surreptitiously in leafy glens and secluded areas on this side of the Atlantic—even, in fact, in close proximity to populous distiets—practiced assiduously by disciples of all ages and both sexes.

From coast to coast colonies of the uninhibited have broken into the public prints recently as the result of rude intrusions on their retreats by hunters, fishermen, or hiking parties. Elaborate precautions of the unclad to keep their frolics and their calisthenics withdrawn from a misunderstanding, unsympathetic, and sometimes raucously amused world seem inevitably to come to nothing. Not even the great open spaces of this continent, it appears, provide a haven where some itinerant will not sooner or later stumble upon the party.

The frequency with which these camps have been so disrupted of recent months leads to the conclusion that the numbers of those characterized by one of their leaders as "the original, noncommercial nudists of the United States" are larger than the average individual of normal pursuits and habits finds credible. Just as the average citizen, trained in the ancient sterling virtue of modesty as represented in sufficient clothing to cover him, finds it inexplicable that men and women will voluntarily shed the last vestige of raiment and mingle publicly for days and weeks.

New Jersey scored the doubtful distinction of harboring one of the earliest of the cults, known as Sky Farm, established near Liberty Corners. Possibly the nomenclature exerted some influence on the founders, but at any rate it is proudly touted by Carl Becker, charter member and secretary, as the largest and oldest in this country. He claims a membership of 220 drawn from the metropolitan district of New York.

Carmel, Cal., gasped when it discovered that a group known as Branch No. 12, of the International Society of the Sun, had moved into its bailiwick and was seeking a municipal license to carry on its activities of nude sunbathing and literary pursuits. Madame Mathilde Baumgartner, head of the colony, rose up in wrath and departed with her followers when the license was denied, even though she had offered to erect an eight foot fence.

Chicagoland sustained something of the same sort of a shock when, in September, a raid by the sheriff and county attorney at Allegan, Mich., revealed a camp of more than thirty men, women, and children disporting themselves in a clearing ten miles from town, on Swan creek. Several members hailed from Chicago and others from towns in Michigan, including one professor from the state university at Ann Arbor. A dancing master named Fred Ring and his wife, Ophelia, of Kalamazoo, proprietors and leaders, are awaiting trial in the case. Charges against the rest were dismissed with leave to reinstate.

In scores of instances, both men and women among the nudists have protested fiercely against donning clothing when the minions of the law arrived. In Allegan they consented only on the firm promise of the arresting officers to hale them into town "as is" and to place them before the bar of justice precisely in that state which they preferred. Trousers and dresses appeared as if by magic.

Such fanaticism is explained by the leaders of the movements on two counts. Health always is cited first. Medical authorities are quoted to the effect that more than sufficient sunlight can be secured by the use of modern bathing suits, which permit a generous expanse of epidermis access to the sun's rays; but the nudist retort is that the bathing suit expresses a false attitude of modesty, and is actually more immodest than no clothing at all, because "the only way to get rid of the sex taboo is for both men and women to appear completely undraped."

"Otherwise, you see, the presence of a certain amount of clothing only stimulates the imagination," explains the Rev. Henry S. Huntington, Presbyterian minister, who has been one of the leaders in the movement and is the editor of a magazine on nudism. His explanation is accompanied by a pitying smile for the prudish, unconvinced majority.

With the spread of nudism in Germany, such tent colonies as this have become familiar sights in certain areas.

Such contentions are worse than unscientific, medical authorities retort; they are downright foolish.

"Plain tush," an eminent Chicago physician designates the nudists' plea that bathing suits be discarded. "Centuries ago the Neanderthal man roamed about in some such fashion as these people want to adopt. But he could stand it. Nature had toughened him, and his way of life kept him impervious to intense rays of the sun that today would sicken most individuals. His body was hairy and his skin was thicker than ours.

"If you're a health enthusiast, get enough sun, but don't get too much. One extreme can be just as bad as another, and all the exposure this generation can stand is supplied by modern swimming suits. As for the psychological influence of going nude, I might intrude on the other fellow's field long enough to say that human nature doesn't change much from century to century, and until it reaches a higher plane of morality than we know now, we'd better follow tradition and common sense, and stick to clothing."

The trend of the times, however, extends beyond "noncommercial" nudism and into the strictly commercial phases. Chicago has had a generous dosage of the latter at A Century of Progress, with attendant publicity redounding to the financial credit of one Sally Rand and numerous imitators.

There was a day only a few years ago when Faith Bacon, a performer in the Hollywood concession at the Fair, scandalized the community with her original and sensational version of the fan dance, in an edition of Earl Carroll's "Vanities" at a New York theater. Police raided the theater and arraigned the entire cast in court, where the blonde star convinced the judge and jury that even if it didn't look that way, she was wearing a costume under her fans.

When Sally Rand, who was a chorus girl in that production and handed the ostrich feathers to Miss Bacon, according to the latter's version, staged a similar performance in the loop recently, she made no pretense of such a plea. On the contrary, she trumpeted the accuracy of the accusation to the four winds via the press.

Late in September, however, a jury figuratively knocked the breath out of Sally by returning a verdict that she was guilty of performing an obscene dance in a public place, and the jurist stunned her by passing a sentence of a year in jail and a fine of $200. Just when she had signed theatrical and movie contracts and was preparing to reap further harvests. She was badly scared and didn't make any secret of the fact. Also she expressed indignation at such lack of appreciation for the beauty of her "art."

But her attorney stepped in and saved the day for the dancer, temporarily at least, by obtaining a stay of all orders against her, and securing a hearing, set for Oct. 31, on a motion for a new trial. With the fan waver in Hollywood preparing to appear in a film, there the matter rests.

When the Rand headlines began to blossom with such regularity, Faith Bacon made a dash for Chicago to establish her claim to priority in this phase of exposition attractions, only to find herself eclipsed by the fame of the younger and more daring blonde, Miss Rand. Old Mexico, another of the concessions at the Fair, had a whole battalion of fan dancers, and others made their bids for notoriety from the locale of every other night club in the city.

So it is not to be marveled at if the policeman who next spring arrives at the beaches with his measuring line, to determine whether the bathing trunks of a beach siren comply with certain city ordinances and are not cut short of the prescribed number of inches from the knee, finds himself with nothing to measure. The increasing complacency of the rising generation toward scanty attire adopted for athletic freedom conceivably may find such starkness outside the pale, but to date there is little to indicate just where the limit lies.

A reporter assigned to inspect conditions in a nudist camp near Lake Village, Ind., departed from Chicago not long ago with alacrity, in a kindly disposed frame of mind toward the Venuses and Dianas he expected to see and to admire. He returned with this disillusioning report:

"I talked with a middle-aged fat lady who was typical of the group there. She told me how marvelous it was to have one's body washed by the air and washed by the sun. But they seemed to have forgotten all about water. I never could stand dirty ankles, and I saw too many of them."
